Inaugural Crowd to Tax Facilities Of Capital

Visitors Estimated As High as 750,000; 120,000 Expected To See Oath Taken

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The curtain rises Thursday on the greatest one-man show in the Nation—the inauguration of a President.

The Washington area's normal population of about 1,250,000 is expected to be swollen by 250,000 visitors, according to one estimate—the Washington Board of Trade's—and by 750,000, according to another estimate — the Inaugural Committee's.

Either way, the town is expecting a record crowd which will tax all its facilities.

120,000 at Capitol

Best estimates are that about 120,000 people will actually see Harry S. Truman take the presidential oath for the second time. This figure includes those seated in stands on the Capitol Plaza, and those who will stand in the unrestricted area to the rear of the stands.

About a million people are expected to watch the President lead his parade down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House—either in the stands erected along the way, or from vantage points on the sidewalk or at windows.

Inaugural officials are remaining outwardly calm and keeping their fingers crossed but they seem to have solved most of their major problems in making the 1949 Inaugural the best show yet.

A comprehensive calendar of Inaugural Week events, including the appearance of the Freedom Train here will be found on Page C-6.

Other Inaugural stories and pictures will be found on Pages 15 and 16 of the main news section.

They have no more tickets to offer people who wish to sit down to watch the 2½-hour-long parade. Tickets also are exhausted for the Inaugural Gala on Wednesday night.

The Inaugural Committee stated last night that money sent in after tickets were exhausted is now being returned.

Actually Under Way

Actually, the inaugural festiyities already have begun. They started on Friday with a pre-inaugural dance for members of the Massachusetts State Society. And the last scheduled event in celebration of the inaugural isn't until January 23, three days after President Truman takes the oath, when the Arkansas State Society will hold a congressional reception.

100 Questioned, 6 Held in Rape Aboard Train

Klamath Falls, Oreg., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The Southern Pacific West Coast Limited was halted for five hours today while police questioned more than 100 passengers about the rape of a 36-year-old married woman in her lower berth.

Sheriff Jack Franey identified the woman as Mrs. C. W. Holmes of North Richland, Wash.

Sergt. E. W. Tichenor of the Oregon State Police said six men passengers had been designated "material witnesses or suspects."

At 12:20 p. m., the train was permitted to continue its Portland-to-San Francisco and Los Angeles run. But District Attorney Van Vactor remained aboard to grill the six "material witnesses or suspects" en route.

The train was the same one on which occurred the "Lower 13" rape murder of 1943, only a few miles from last night's scene. Mrs. Martha Virginia James, wife of a Navy lieutenant, was killed in her berth by Robert E. Lee Folkes, 23, a dining car cook. Folkes was executed January, 1945.

Presidential Pay Rise Bill Is Hurried

Holiday, Ticket Tax Measures Also on Monday Must List

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Moving to meet an Inauguration Day deadline, the House of Representatives hopes Monday to rush through and send to the White House two bills. They are:

1. The Senate-passed bill to boost the salaries of the President, Vice President and the Speaker.

2. The Senate-passed joint resolution authorizing a four-day holiday with pay for Washington's corps of nearly 220,000 Federal and District workers.

Also slated for action in both branches of Congress Monday is legislation to exempt tickets to Inaugural events from the 20 per cent Federal tax.

Under Rules Suspension

The House leadership will seek immediate consideration of the three bills under a suspension of the rules requiring a 2/3 vote of the lower chamber.

Unless the House leadership wins approval of the abbreviated, Senate-passed pay raise bill before Thursday, a presidential salary boost could not become effective during President Truman's term.

Leaders on both sides of the aisle last night confidently predicted quick approval for the bill when they call it up.

The bill, which cleared the Senate last Thursday by a 68-9 vote, would give the President a $100,000 annual salary—a $25,000 boost. It would also give him a yearly $50,000 tax-free expense allowance for which he would not have to give an accounting. This is over and above the President's present $40,000-a-year travel and entertainment fund.

Salary and Allowance

The Vice President and House Speaker would each get a $30,000 annual salary, plus a $10,000 tax-free, nonaccountable expense allowance.

The McGrath inaugural holiday resolution to give Federal and District Government workers in the Washington area this Thursday and Friday off with pay is also slated for final House action Monday.

UAW Aims 4th-Round Drive At Pension and Welfare Funds

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Pension and welfare funds, rather than straight pay increases, will be the main goal of the CIO United Auto Workers when the fourth round of postwar wage negotiations gets under way this spring.

This aim was disclosed yesterday by Walter P. Reuther, president of the million-member union, one of the largest in the country, whose contracts with the Nation's auto manufacturers have influenced the settlement pattern for the first three rounds.

"Major emphasis" will be placed on pension and medical care plans, Reuther said in a letter to UAW locals. But along with this demand, there'll also be a request for a cost-of-living pay boost of about 15 cents an hour.

Ford Motor Co., with which contract negotiations will begin in May, will be the first of the major

House District Group to Have Few Changes

Almost all the 10 veteran Democratic members of the House District Committee—seven of whom are recorded against Washington home rule—will continue on the committee, it appeared likely last night.

This was learned in advance of the scheduled Democratic House caucus Monday, when a total of 15 members of the majority party will be named to the lower house District Committee.

Placing veteran Democrats on the committee would follow the pattern set by the Republicans last Friday. Eight of nine GOP spots were filled by members who served with the District group in the Eightieth Congress.

Ten Incumbents

The incumbent Democratic members are Representatives John L. McMillan (S. C.), prospective chairman; Oren Harris (Ark.), Thomas G. Abernathy (Miss.), Howard W. Smith (Va.), Arthur G. Klein (N. Y.), Olin E. Teague (Tex.), Charles B. Deane (N. C.), John F. Kenney (Mass.), Robert E. Jones (Ala.) and James C. Davis (Ga.).

Representatives George P. Miller (D., Calif.) and James H. Morrison (D., La.) also were mentioned on Capitol Hill yesterday as leading candidates to fill two of the other five Democratic openings on the D. C. committee.

Miller, who was elected to Congress in November, 1944, was a member of the House Civil Serv-

Citizens' Group Will Answer Racial Report

The Federation of Citizens' Associations last night voted to reply to the report of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital.

The motion was carried by a vote of 56 to 34 after an hour and a half of wrangling.

Presented by Dr. Benjamin Striner, delegate from the District Pharmaceutical Association, the resolution authorized the executive committee to issue a report in answer to the report of the national organization at what it considers a "proper time."

The resolution called for the report to be "factual, without bias or recrimination" and to "constitute a point-by-point reply to misstatements and exaggerations."

A substitute motion offered by Baxter Smith, first vice president of the federation, "to take no action on the segregation report," was voted down by a voice vote

Tidelands Wealth Involved

Vast U. S. Resources Program Will Get Start January 31

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A comprehensive program for the administration and development of the Nation's widespread natural resources, including the enormously valuable tidelands, for the benefit of the Nation as a whole will be the No. 1 project of the Senate Interior Committee this session.

The committee will begin preparation of this program January 31, under the chairmanship of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.). On that date Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug and his staff will appear before the committee in answer to an invitation to "describe the functions, problems and hopes" of the department. It will mark the beginning of the first over-all program for the development and conservation of the Nation's natural resources under the reorganization of Congress voted by the Seventy-ninth Congress.

O'Mahoney has several targets for his committee:

1. To secure efficiency and economy in the administration of the Nation's natural wealth.

2. To develop our natural resources in the interest of a strong and stable domestic economy necessary to make possible our inter-

100 Killed, 1000 Hurt in African Riots

Families Burned Alive as Indians And Zulus Battle In Durban Streets

Durban, South Africa, Jan. 15 (AP).—Bloody race rioting appeared tonight to be dying down, but it was believed casualties will far exceed police estimates of 100 killed and 1000 injured. Damage runs more than one million dollars.

Cyprian, King of the Zulus, pleaded with his native subjects to stop the fighting with the Indians which has wiped out whole families.

"It is my earnest wish," he said, "that the trouble should be settled in a peaceful way."

The South African ministers of justice and defense arrived from Capetown and went into a huddle with police and local defense officers over means of stopping the bloodshed.

The Durban police said about 100 have been killed and 1000 injured in the three days of fighting between Zulu and Indian inhabitants. But officials at Johannesburg estimated 300 were killed, and a Durban member of Parliament said the figure was nearer 500.

One white European was killed and 11 were wounded, the police said, but generally the attacks were not directed against the white population.

Hundreds Flee City

Fighting covered such wide areas that the estimates at best were guesses. The bodies of riot victims littered the ground at Cato Manor on the fringe of the city. Long trails of bloodstains marked every street leading to the non-European hospital where 15 doctors cared for the wounded.

The fate of hundreds who fled from Durban was not yet known.

A group of Indians, attacked by a Zulu mob chanting savage battle cries, leaped from a 500-foot cliff. Entire families, both Indian and Zulu, were burned alive in their houses. Others were dragged into the streets and slain, or run down as they fled from mobs or resisted.

The government called the Royal Durban Light Infantry to duty, and said the Natal Mounted Rifles would join them Sunday. Gov. Gen. G. Brand van Zyl prepared to call the citizen defense force.

Zulu bands were intent on raiding camps where Indians have taken refuge. It was at one of these camps that panicky Indians jumped from a cliff where Zulus had trapped them.

Sections Set Aflame

Cause of it all was a fight Thursday in which an Indian peddler injured a Zulu boy. Incident followed incident, causing damage which the police said would total one million dollars in Durban alone.

Whole streets were reduced to ruins by mobs killing and pillaging. Entire sections were set aflame by torch bearers and the people burned or killed when they tried to escape or resist.

Many casualties were caused by heavy stones, clubs and knives.

One Indian family, trapped in a flaming building, shot it out with the mob, killing five attackers before dying in the flames.

This morning, after a night of terror, soldiers, sailors and police had restored a semblance of quiet. It proved to be just a breathing spell, however.

Officials alerted police throughout the Transvaal to be ready for emergency call. The government announced it would proclaim a state of emergency if conditions grew worse.

Durban has a population of 121,000 Indians, 109,000 native blacks and 128,000 white persons.

Town Fears Avenging Fugitive Will Poison Water Supply

Special Dispatch to The Post

Waurika, Okla., Jan. 15.—This town's reservoir was heavily guarded tonight after threats by a dope-crazed vengeance-seeking former convict to poison the water supply.

Mayor O. D. Kennedy ordered the precautions after being notified the former convict, Roy Frank Godbey, had vowed revenge on the town where he was convicted of armed robbery 17 years ago, and on everyone connected with his case.

Godbey, released from prison last November, already has been charged with murdering Earl Pruet of Oklahoma City last Tuesday. Pruet was the prosecuting attorney in the Godbey conviction.

His photographs were identified by witnesses to the Pruet killing. Court records showed he had sworn to kill everyone involved in his conviction. Police said he was a dope addict.

Mayor Kennedy said L. J. Hilbert, Oklahoma City chief of police, had received information from confidential sources that Godbey had threatened to pay back the town in which he was convicted. Deputies were guarding all entrances to the town.

The intensive manhunt for Godbey had 15 peace officers and highway patrolmen scouring a two-county area.

Yuan Talks Today May Settle Fate Of China; Britain, U. S. Holding Aloof

BULLETIN

Peiping, China (Sunday), Jan. 16 (U.P.).—The Communist conquerors of Tientsin today set up a new government there, United States consular officials reported. The Communists took over Tientsin's administration this afternoon.

Nanking, Jan. 15 (AP).—The Chinese Communists captured Tientsin today, sharpening the urgency of the government alternatives to yield to harsh peace terms or flee.

The cabinet and other government bodies were holding conferences, and the policy-making Executive Yuan scheduled an emergency session Sunday to discuss the Red conditions.

Those conditions, broadcast Friday night by the Communist radio, amounted to a demand for unconditional surrender.

Deepening the government gloom was authoritative word that both the United States and Britain had declined to use their good offices to seek peace talks. There appeared no reason to believe that France or Russia would heed similar pleas.

Conquest of Tientsin after a month of siege and a day of artillery bombardment cost the government another 60,000 of its dwindling troops and freed an estimated 150,000 Reds for new operations.

Clears Route to Capital Front

The Communist radio stressed that the capture cleared a rail route all the way from Manchuria down to the Yangtze river front before Nanking.

This hurried the continuing flight of government offices from this dejected capital.

It was learned authoritatively the bulk of government gold and foreign currency already had been moved to the Island of Formosa, more than 500 miles by air southeast of Nanking. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was reported also to have sent many of his personal possessions there.

The national defense ministry planned to start moving its personnel Sunday to Hengyang, more than 500 miles southwest of Nanking. The foreign office was studying quick removal plans.

Semiofficial Chinese sources said Foochow, more than 400 miles by air south of Nanking, had been chosen as a temporary capital. Formosa is being saved as an ultimate refuge.

Many Civilians Killed

Radio reports from Tientsin indicated the Communist seizure at noon Saturday followed a day of heavy shelling that damaged many of the city's large buildings and took an unknown but high number of civilian lives.

United States Consul General Robert L. Smyth radioed that all Americans (numbering more than 80) were safe, and the British consulate reported similarly.

When the Communists marched in, they jubilantly fired rifles into the air as they passed the United States consulate.

All reports stated the Communist troops behaved well. An unidentified Communist official sent word that the safety of foreign residents would be guaranteed as soon as remnants of the Nationalist garrison were mopped up.

Great Battles Under the Sea Foreseen in Sullivan's Report

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Another war may see as many naval battles fought deep under the sea as on the surface, Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan said yesterday.

Reporting briefly on postwar submarine developments in his annual report, the Navy chief said that radically different submersibles are on the way. He gave few details but the Navy has disclosed it is building three "antisubmarine submarines"—designed to hunt down and attack other subs under water—and is seeking to harness atomic power for such craft.

"Developments in submarines have indicated," said Sullivan, "that a 'true' submersible—that is, a vessel that can operate indefinitely while completely submerged—is not beyond the realm of practicability.

"With 70 per cent of the earth covered by water, and with the advantage of concealment and difficult detection afforded by that water, it is possible that a future conflict might involve as many battles under the sea as on the surface."

Sullivan declared that scientific advancements and innovations in naval weapons are moving "with great strides." There is no doubt, he added, that traditional methods of warfare must be radically altered in another war. "Push-button war," however, is far off and may not materialize "in our time," the Secretary cautioned.

While the report revealed little of the Navy's progress in new weapons, Sullivan declared that the accuracy of air-to-surface guided missiles has been "greatly improved." Indicating the Navy's

Drive to Use Atomic Energy For Power Is Speeded Up

By The Associated Press

The United States yesterday stepped up its drive to put atomic power to more conventional use by naming a top-flight scientist, Dr. Lawrence R. Hafstad, to head a new multimillion-dollar program.

The Atomic Energy Commission announced selection of Dr. Hafstad to carry out a program of designing and developing nuclear reactors for the practical application of atomic energy for power, for propulsion of ships and aircraft, for the production of isotopes (radioactive elements) and for research on reactors themselves.

The reactor development division which Dr. Hafstad will head was created by the Atomic Energy Commision last fall. He is the first director.

Announcement of Dr. Hafstad's appointment followed closely the disclosure that the commission is seeking a substantial increase in Federal funds during the 12 months beginning July 1 for development of atomic power plants.

The splitting of uranium, a feat from which the United States developed the atomic bomb during World War II, was demonstrated for the first time in this country in 1939 by Dr. Hafstad and two colleagues, Dr. Richard Roberts and Dr. Merle Tuve.

Dr. Hafstad is now executive secretary of the National Military Establishment's Research and Development Board.

New Turkish Premier Named; Sophoulis Out of Greek Post

By The Associated Press

Two Near Eastern nations, Greece and Turkey, which the United States has regarded as cornerstones in its policy of containing Communism, underwent cabinet changes yesterday.

At Athens, King Paul accepted the resignation of Premier Themistokles Sophoulis.

At Istanbul, President Ismet Inonu named Sansettin Gunaltay, as Premier to succeed Hasan Saka, who resigned Friday with his entire cabinet.

In Washington, U. S. State Department officials said the developments so far did not give any special cause for concern, but they were keeping in close touch with the situation.

The government changes in both Greece and Turkey resulted in part from the American program of building up the two countries under the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan.

In Turkey, Premier Saka resigned over criticism that he had failed to control high prices. His own Republican People's Party had deserted him. Saka quit last June on the same issue but was persuaded by President Inonu to form another cabinet. He is regarded

Palestine Mediator Seeking To Enlarge Armistice Talks

(From Press Dispatches)

Rhodes, Jan. 15.—The Palestine armistice conference hit the critical stage today as negotiators for Israel and Egypt considered proposals by United Nations Mediator Ralph Bunche to settle military and boundary phases of the dispute.

At the same time it was reported Dr. Bunche had acted to bring the four other Arab belligerents into negotiations with Israel. At Tel Aviv it was said Israel had sent Col. Yigal Yadin, chief of staff, and Elias Sassoon, No. 2 diplomat, from Rhodes to a frontier armistice meeting with representatives of Lebanon. Henry Vizier, Dr. Bunche's deputy, has acted as go-between for Israel and Lebanon for several weeks and presumably arranged the conference.

Dr. Bunche also was reported to have sent an emissary, Constantin Stavropoulos, to Trans-Jordan, Iraq and Syria, to sound them out on the possibility of talks.

The tempo of the Egyptian-Jewish talks here is becoming slower, it was reported, and correspondents were cautioned today against the implication that an armistice was

Pope Tells Nobles Red Faces Should Mark Idle Rich Today

By Barrett McGurn

Rome, Jan. 15 (NYHT.).—Pope Pius XII indicated today that in his opinion the idle rich of the world should be "red-faced" with embarrassment in view of the hardships most people are suffering.

The Pontiff told 400 Roman nobles and noblewomen who paid him their traditional New Year's call that persons with spare time and money should be active in social work.

"Amidst (present) general tribulations who could be anything but red-faced and uneasy in a life of idleness, frivolity, luxury and pleasure?" the Pope asked his visitors.

The Pope placed his visitors somewhat at ease by commenting that he did not doubt each of them already had examined his conscience to determine "in what practical, concrete, effective manner" he had during the past year "given proof of the strength of the soul, readiness to act and generous adherence to the precepts of Christian doctrine and living."

The Pontiff added the duty "to serve your neighbor" applied also to all persons gifted with a social education, intelligence, culture, knowledge or influential position.

The Pontiff told the nobles their personal prominence should set an example of worthy lives to others.

Practice Bomb Dropped Near Deputy's Auto

Newburg, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—A deputy sheriff said a plane dropped a practice bomb beside his car near here today, and State police asked the Armed Services to be more careful if the fault was theirs.

Deputy Sheriff Bruce Shymansky said "I heard a dull zoom just ahead and at a few feet to the right of my car. Dirt flew 20 feet in the air." It left a "shellhole 4 or 5 feet wide at the top and about 4 feet deep."

Police said four P-47 Army fighters had been making a bombing run on a target in the Potomac, not far from the bridge on Route 301. They said they did not know where the planes were based.

Residents of this area said there have been similar accidents over a period of several years.

Dr. Hafstad Is Able to Spot Half a Millionth Of a Millionth of an Inch When He Sees It

Dr. Lawrence R. Hafstad, the man chosen yesterday by the Government to make atomic energy practical, is the kind of a man who knows a half of a millionth of a millionth of an inch when he sees one.

DR. LAWRENCE HAFSTAD
The atom's in his hand

A bachelor scientist who started his career 28 years ago as a telephone lineman and switchboard operator, he is enviously referred to by his associate physicists as a "man who needs no sleep."

While an electrical engineering student at the University of Minnesota, he ran a dial switchboard at night. His marks were excellent, one of "Levelheaded Larry's" former professors said last night.

Although in the last 25 years as a member of the Carnegie Institution, Dr. Hafstad had worked on ideas unknown even to Buck Rogers, he is conservative about predictions of pushbutton warfare. Unlike some others, he will not predict the weapons of the future until he knows them from experience.

Dr. Hafstad, who was appointed by the Atomic Energy Commission yesterday to head its reactor development division, brings a solid background in nuclear physics to his new job.

Wrote Thesis 22 Years Ago

He wroter his Ph.D. thesis on nuclear physics 22 years ago. Yesterday, he was put in charge of developing practical uses for atomic energy. "Reactors," with which he will work, are atomic piles of comparatively slow-moving neutrons.

Born in Minneapolis 44 years ago, he has devoted his adult life to research. After a short tour of duty with the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., he went to work for the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

There he became familiar with measurements like half of a millionth of a millionth of an inch, experimenting in so-called "billiard ball collisions" of hydrogen protons. In addition, he was a member of the group which first bounced radio pulses off the radio reflecting layer of the atmosphere and measured the time and distance. These experiments were the precursor of radar.

Other experiments Dr. Hafstad did at Carnegie included: work on artificial Gamma and Beta rays from a one-million-volt vacuum tube, for which work he and Dr. Merle A. Tuve received an award from the American Association for the Advancement of Science; artificial radio-activity; atomic disintegrations, and radio-wave propagation.

In 1940, with Dr. Tuve, he started work on the proximity fuse for the Army and Navy at the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism, Carnegie Institution.

Awarded Medal of Merit

He was awarded the Medal of Merit in 1946 by the Secretary of the Navy for his wartime activities in connection with the development of ordnance devices, including supersonic ram-jet engines and guided missiles.

In 1945, Dr. Hafstad was assistant director of the applied physics laboratory at Johns Hopkins University. In 1947, he was its director.

Granted a leave of absence by Johns Hopkins, Dr. Hafstad became executive secretary of the Joint Research and Development Board of the National Military Establishment in July of 1948.

An energetic, bespectacled man, Larry Hafstad loves the outdoors. In his car during the winter months a pair of skates lies ready for instant use. For years he canoed up and down the Potomac.

Today his love of the outdoors is monopolzed by a recently acquired farm on Kent Island, near Chester, Md., and near his brother, a plant pathologist, who once spent 10 years in Liberia.

Morse Frowns On GOP Plan To Save T-H

By The Associated Press

Republican strategy to thwart blanket repeal of the Taft-Hartley law got a cool reception yesterday from Senator Morse (R., Oreg.).

The plan to block the Democratic Administration's drive to get rid of the law was hatched by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.). The New Yorker said Senator Taft (R., Ohio) GOP Senate policy leader, "raised no objection" to the idea. Ives added that Morse would have to play a key role to put it across.

Morse was a leader of the fight against the law when it was going through Congress.

President Truman wants the Taft-Hartley measure repealed and the old Wagner Act restored with certain improvements.

Original Measure

Ives' proposal is that the starting point in any new labor legislation should be in a bill which the Senate Labor Committee approved, 11 to 2, in 1947.

The ideas of Ives and Morse originally predominated in that bill, which was backed by committee Democrats and opposed to some extent by Taft and other Republicans.

On the Senate floor the bill was amended to include certain union restrictions. Other curbs were added in the Senate-House conference, and the result was the Taft-Hartley law.

Ives said if the basis of any new legislation were the 1947 Senate committee bill, it probably would win the support of critics of some Taft-Hartley provisions.

The Ives-Taft strategy as outlined by Ives is to trim out of the law some of the features that its foes find most objectionable and which Morse and Ives did not want in the first place.

Unity Required

Ives said he, Morse and Taft will have to stick together if the Ives plan is to get any place.

Morse told a reporter he is perfectly willing to base any new law on the 1947 Ives-Morse bill. But he added:

"I would want to reserve the right to go beyond that bill in revising the labor laws. On the Senate floor and in conference that bill was changed by a series of unfortunate amendments.

"But in the Senate committee, before that, the bill was the product of some compromises which I did not approve."

Morse was reported, in connection with the new plan, to be against lining up with Taft under any conditions unless there was an iron-clad agreement that the Ohioan would go along with the revisions Morse wants. Taft, on the other hand, has made it clear many times that he can't go along with some of Morse's ideas.

House Group to Take a Look At 'Suppressed' Plane Report

By C. B. Allen

The House Armed Services Committee intends to have a look at a "suppressed" report to the President's air coordinating committee by one of the country's leading independent research groups which is said to have recommended as a national safety "minimum" more than twice the aircraft production called for in Mr. Truman's recent budget message.

This was disclosed yesterday by Representative Vinson (D., Ga.), who is expected to be chairman of the committee when it is formally organized this week. Vinson, an outspoken champion of the 70-group Air Force approved by Congress last year over the President's veto, already has announced that he will fight Mr. Truman's proposed cutback of the program this year to 48 groups.

"The committee will go into that and a number of other things," Representative Vinson said when asked if his group meant to take up an unpublished report to the ACC by researchers of Leland Stanford University.

The Stanford survey of the Nation's air defense requirements was made at the request of the ACC, an interdepartmental agency charged with advising the President on navigation matters. It was sought as an independent and impartial-source check on the 1945 recommendations of the ACC and those made last year by the President's Air Policy Commission

Rumors have been current for some time in military and industry circles that the Stanford report has been kept "under wraps" in Defense Secretary James Forrestal's office because it indicated 80 million pounds annual production of military aircraft as the minimum level to insure national safety. By contrast, President Truman's recent budget for the fiscal year 1940 calls for only 34 million pounds.

In further comparison, the ACC's 1945 report to the President prescribed 60 million pounds of military aircraft a year as this country's minimum safe production level during the time it was "cooperating in the maintenance of world peace," with a cutback to 30 million pounds after world peace was "well assured." The President's air policy commission, of which Thomas K. Finletter, New York attorney, was chairman, after months of investigation, set the national "survival" level of aircraft production at 34 million pounds for the calendar year 1948 and 56 million pounds in 1949.

Free Earmuffs To Stress D. C. Vote 'Freeze'

To call attention to the fact that District residents have been left out in the cold for 70 years so far as voting is concerned, free earmuffs will be distributed to visitors Inauguration Day.

Attached to each earmuff will be a tag asking the out-of-town visitors to urge their Congressmen to grant local and national suffrage to the District.

Eight organizations have joined forces in sponsorship of the stunt. They are:

The Central Suffrage Conference, Federation of Women's Clubs, Federation of Citizens Associations, Federation of Civic Associations, District League of Women Voters, District Democratic Central Committee, Americans for Democratic Action and the Washington Home Rule Committee.

In addition to "Operation Earmuff," its sponsors plan to distribute souvenir balloons bearing the legend, "Washington, D. C., Wants to Vote, Too" and thousands of handbills.

Washington Post Going to Zurich

Copies of The Washington Post will be dispatched on Trans-World Airline's inaugural flight to Zurich, Switzerland, when TWA establishes the first passenger and air cargo service between the United States and Zurich.

Distribution of The Washington Post will be made to high-ranking Swiss government officials and American consulate representatives less than 24 hours after the maiden flight leaves National Airport tomorrow.

School Aid and Rent Control Listed as Congress 'Firsts'

By The Associated Press

Congressional leaders put action on school aid and rent controls at the top of their list yesterday for a post-inaugural legislative drive.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, who becomes majority leader next Thursday, told a reporter that a working schedule for the lawmaking program probably will be drawn up Monday at the weekly White House conference with President Truman.

Lucas said the Administration regards rent controls and extension of import and export controls as pressing matters.

Senator Hill (D., Ala.) predicted the Senate Labor Committee will approve next Tuesday a Senate bill under which the Government would distribute 270 million dollars to the States to raise educational standards.

Hill said the committee had agreed that no new hearings are needed. So this may be the first major bill to clear committee action and reach the Senate calendar.

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the GOP policy committee, told reporters he expects strong Republican support for the measure. It passed the Senate last session, but not the House.

As soon as the House sets up its committees officially next week, the Democratic leaders are expecting to start pushing for speedy action on revision of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act.

Hill indicated he will support the stand of Chairman Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Labor Committee for a "single package" labor bill, wrapping up changes in the Wagner Act, as well as repealing the Taft-Hartley Act. Taft said Republicans will demand hearings.

Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) said a banking subcommittee which he heads will hold hearings on the rent control bill. Present controls expire March 31. Sparkman favors a 15-month extension.

6 Congressmen Voice Support Of Home Rule

Six Democratic Representatives yesterday indorsed District home rule and four offered qualified support for a pay raise for District workers.

Five of the six are members of the Americar Veterans Committee. The statements were made at a press conference held during a reception by the local AVC members for the Congressmen. The session was held at the AVC Clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Representative John A. Blatnik of Minnesota said he was "very much in favor" of District suffrage. Representatvie Henry M. Jackson of Washington added his support, declaring, "There is no question about it."

A member of the House Ways and Means Committee, Representative John A. Carroll of Colorado, said he favored home rule for the District. A freshman member, Representative Sidney Yates of Illinois, declared, "The District should have suffrage," and Representative Richard Bolling of Missouri seconded this.

Representative Thomas H. Burke of Ohio, who is not a member of AVC, said, "I'm in favor of it."

Later in the conference, Representative Carroll told 115 guests present that he favored a "drive for home rule first and then for representation."

Representatives Burke, Blatnik, Jackson and Carroll affirmed support for pay raises for the District's 7500 classified workers, but declined to take a position on the salary boost for the remainder of the District workers pending further study.

Congress Views Compulsory Health Plan With Caution

By The Associated Press

Congress appears to be taking a cautious wait-and-see attitude on President Truman's demand for a compulsory national health program.

The suggestion of more payroll taxes to pay for it was one factor acting as a brake on congressional opinion at this time. Another check was the absence of specific White House legislation covering all phases of a social security and health program.

But it was unlikely Congress would have long to wait on Mr. Truman's plans, and in particular those dealing with the thorny question of how to finance a program for the health of 140 million people. A presidential message on social security legislation was expected to reach the Capitol soon after the inauguration.

Most Avoid Comment

Until they get the details, however, most Administration spokesmen in Congress avoided comment.

Nothing at all was forthcoming from Representative Crosser (D., Ohio), who is to be chairman of the House Commerce Committee to which the bill will be referred.

Representative Priest (D., Tenn.), whose subcommittee handled health legislation in the Seventy-ninth Congress, said any predictions now would be "purely speculative."

Influential House Republicans professed to see little chance for enactment of any compulsory program because of the tax features.

Dr. Judd Disapproves

Representative Judd (R., Minn.), a physician, declared "this is the wrong solution to the problem of national health."

"Compulsory health programs would reduce incentive to continue improvements in medical care," he said. "It would put the competent and the incompetent on the same basis. Doctors no doubt would benefit, but God help the patient when the Government comes between him and his doctor."

Judd said "the right way is through voluntary insurance systems."

He suggested that witnesses be called from other nations having nationalized health programs before Congress acts.

5 Lawyers Picked For Prober Group

By The Associated Press

House Democrats have picked five lawyers to serve on the Un-American Activities Committee under a policy of restricting committee membership to "experienced members of the bar."

Democratic leaders said the lineup of Democrats on the committee, center of many a controversy on and off Capitol Hll, will be:

Representative John S. Wood of Georgia, chairman; and Representatives Francis E. Walter of Pennsylvania, John McSweeney of Ohio, Burr P. Harrison of Virginia and Morgan H. Moulder of Missouri.

Wood will be the only holdover of present Democratic members.

Representatives Rankin (Miss.) and Hebert (La.) were dropped from the committee because of the new all-lawyers policy and another resolution barring a chairman of a major committee from serving on any other regular House committee.

Rankin thus lost out because he is slated to become chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee. Hebert, a former newspaperman, can't qualify because he isn't a member of the bar.

Rankin told a reporter his removal "will not in any way weaken my support" of the committee on the House floor. He said the committee's members are "very fine, upstanding, patriotic Americans" who will have his support at all times.

The two new policies were adopted by the Democratic Committee on Committees yesterday. Chairman Doughton (N. C.) announced this action.

The new policies and the committee setup are subject to approval of a Democratic Party caucus Monday and to House approval Tuesday, but no upset is expected.

Republicans have not yet filled their two vacancies on the committee.

Early Action Assured on Spy Laws

By the United Press

Justice Department proposals to tighten antispy laws were assured early congressional consideration yesterday.

But some legislators were uneasy over a request that they legalize wire tapping in espionage cases. They said they would study its possible effect on civil liberties.

The proposals were made by Attorney General Tom C. Clark. They were considered to be among the toughest security laws ever offered to Congress.

Speaker Sam Rayburn said he was sure Congress would "look with favor" upon revisions of the Espionage Act. He said he has not seen Clark's specific proposals. But they will be studied "thoroughly and as soon as possible," Rayburn said.

A wire-tapping law "that has the proper safeguards" has a good chance of congressional approval the speaker said.

"I don't think the Attorney General or anybody else in authority wants to go out tapping wires without an excellent reason," he added.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., said Congress will push "any legitimate proposal to help guard our Nation's security."

"But we want to make sure that we don't overreach ourselves and interfere with the liberties of the private citizen," Martin said.

The bill will be considered by the House and Senate judiciary committees. Representative Earl C. Michener (Mich.), top-ranking committee Republican, said it will receive "early and careful consideration."

Congress has always been cool to suggestions that wire tapping be permitted. But other sections of Clark's bill were considered less controversial. They would:

1. Eliminate the present three-year statute of limitations on peacetime espionage prosecutions.
2. Require registration of all persons trained by a foreign power in espionage or sabotage.
3. Make unauthorized possession of confidential documents, or failure to report their loss, a crime.
4. Make it illegal for anyone to obtain secret defense documents that could be used against the United States.

7-Power Pact Wins Support In Congress

By the United Press

The Administration has won new assurances of congressional support for a treaty joining the United States in military alliance with Canada and five western European nations.

Government sources said yesterday that Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett was given a favorable hearing by the key congressional leaders of both parties with whom he discussed the proposed pact, now being whipped into final draft form by representatives of the seven powers.

These informants said Lovett gave secret, detailed reports on the proposed terms of the alliance to Chairman Connally (D., Tex.), of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who headed the committee in the Eightieth Congress.

Lovett, they said, also gave other influential Senators and members of the House a more general summary of the treaty talks.

Informed quarters said Lovett came away from the congressional talks in an optimistic mood, although it was acknowledged that the Senate would hold a long and thorough debate before committing the United Sttaes for the first time in history to a European alliance.

Meanwhile, it was learned that members of the Senate and House Armed Services Committee will meet with top military leaders next Friday to get the details of a proposed billion-dollar to two-billion-dollar military aid program for America's allies in the cold war.

Most of the proposed armament grants would go to the signatories of the North Atlantic security pact now being negotiated, including Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. The rest would be for Greece, Turkey, Korea and Latin America, with China a possible added starter if the military situation in that country becomes more stabilized.

Policeman Fined $40 for Failing To Attend Court

A Police Trial Board yesterday fined Pvt. James C. Watson of the Traffic Division $40 for failing to appear in Traffic Court as a witness on December 24, 1948, and warned him for failing to appear at the court on December 18.

At a hearing Friday, Watson testified that he misplaced his traffic book on the 24th, causing him to arrive after disposal of the case. He misunderstood the time set for a trial on the 18th, he said, and arrived 45 minutes late.

The Trial Board said they would render a decision next week in the case of Police Pvt. Alton L. Highsmith of the Fourteenth Precinct, charged with suffering a disability not incurred in the line of duty and therefore not eligible to remain on the force.

Testimony revealed that Highsmith suffered from childhood injuries which allegedly caused him to "black out" while at the wheel of a scout car on August 21, 1948. According to testimony, Highsmith had not revealed the injuries when he filled out Civil Service examination papers prior to joining the force.

Marshalls Fly to Puerto Rico

San Juan, Puerto, Rico, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—Gen. George C. Marshall flew here today from his home in Pinehurst, N. C., for several week's rest.

The outgoing Secretary of State was accompanied by Mrs. Marshall. They arrived in an Air Force Constellation plane at the Isla Grande Air Station of the Tenth Naval District, after a nonstop flight from Pope Field, N. C.

When he stepped down from the plane General Marshall was welcomed by Vice Admiral Daniel E. Barbey and his wife, whose guests they will be. Barbey is commander in chief of the Caribbean Sea frontier.

There was no official announcement as to how long Marshall will stay but it was reliably understood it will be several weeks to permit his full recuperation from a recent kidney operation.

Reported to have been arranged personally by President Truman, the trip was shrouded in secrecy here, except for a bare official announcement. A Navy spokesman explained that the original request from the White House to Barbey several weeks ago said Marshall sought complete rest and the couple wanted absolute privacy.

Accordingly, no newsmen were permitted to enter the Naval airfield and the Marshalls were met only by the Barbeys and a few high ranking naval officers. No other military or civilian officials were present.

A Navy spokesman said Marshall and Barbey were personal friends of many years and were together in China when Barbey was in command of the Seventh Fleet in Chinese waters and Marshall undertook a special diplomatic mission to China.

Dulles Urges Public Hearing On Arms Pact

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—John Foster Dulles said today the proposed North Atlantic security pact should not be presented to the American people as "an accomplished fact."

Dulles, who served as acting chief of the United States delegation to the United Nations General Assembly meeting in Paris, said in a statement that he hoped there would be "adequate opportunity" for public discussion of the pact.

The statement was issued after Dulles addressed a luncheon meeting of the Speakers Research Committee for the United Nations in an off-the-record talk.

Dulles said he believed the United States could "usefully join" an association with Canada and the nations of western Europe.

Such an association, he said, should operate in "genuine coordination with the United Nations, and not in competition with it."

Bikini Tribe Ends Quest For a Home

The quest of Bikini natives for a suitable home to replace the one from which they were uprooted in 1946 when the Navy chose their atoll for the Crossroads atomic bomb tests has finally ended.

The growing little tribe—169 last March, 181 now—has voted to settle on the small but fertile island of Kili, in the southern Marshalls, rejecting the Navy's recommendation that they relocate on Wotho in the northern part of the island group.

The closing chapter in the wandering of these displaced persons of the atomic era was revealed yesterday in a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. It tells how the natives, temporary wards of the Navy, spurned outside advice, rejected larger land areas and finally resorted to a popular vote among themselves to settle their future.

Their decision, which has now ended their two-year hegira, resulted in their selection of a little island only one mile long. Their reasons, by native standards, were good.

The important thing to the Bikinians is that they will be able to collect more copra from Kili's cocoanut trees than they were able to gather on Bikini. Their new island also grows breadfruit and, generally, according to the National Geographic News Bulletin, is one of the most productive

4 Cubans Slain in 48 Hours In Political Gang Feud Flare

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—Four street killings in 48 hours today brought to five the number of unsolved political murders since President Carlos Prio took office three months ago, and the police department was under orders to bring the wave of terrorism to an end.

A long-standing feud between the terrorist groups known as Union Insurrectionaria Revolucionaria and Accion Revolucionaria Guiteras flared again into full-scale hostilities Wednesday night when Police Sergt. Ruben Dario, member of the Uir, was shot and killed as he entered a bar.

Amado Laura, a student, confessed and said Gustavo Masso, 20, and Juan Regueiro, 18, also were implicated. Last night, the bullet-riddled bodies of Masso and Regueiro were found.

One block away, the body of railway worker Rolando Vazquez had been found the night before. Masso, Regueiro and Vazquez were members of the Arg.

A few days after Prio was inaugurated October 10, anti-Communist labor leader Aracelio Iglesias was assassinated.

Resources Program Gets Start Jan. 31

national program for the achievement of world peace.

3. To encourage the search for new deposits of scarce minerals or substitutes for types now in use, and also to encourage further scientific and engineering research into new sources and methods of developing products, such as oil, vitally necessary to the country's economic and military security.

Recently O'Mahoney and Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) outlined their plans to President Truman, from whom they received enthusiastic support.

The two-year-old committee has been renamed the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. It originally was titled Public Lands Committee and embraced five old committees: Public Lands, Irrigation and Reclamation, Mines and Mining, Indian Affairs and Territories and Insular Affairs.

Before congressional reorganization the Public Lands Committee was limited to problems involving public lands—all of which are contained in a comparatively small group of Western States. This limitation carried on to some extent during the Eightieth Congress.

But the duties inherited from the five old committees extends the committee's functions to every section of the country—in fact, they branket the operations of the Interior Department just as the Agriculture Committee embraces all the Department of Agriculture.

The committee's approach to the subject of administration of marginal sea developments—tidelands oil wells and the potential mineral wealth of the whole continental shelf—will be given intensive study, O'Mahoney promises.

Oil Act May Be Model

The Oil and Gas Leasing Act, governing oil production in Federal lands, probably will be used as a model for the Federal Government's administration of the tidelands oil wells and later other discoveries under the Nation's nearby seas. Under this act the royalties received by the Government from oil and gas wells on public property were divided as follows: 10 per cent for administration, 37½ per cent for the States within whose boundaries the discoveries were made, and 52½ per cent to the Bureau of Reclamation to finance the reclamation of arid lands in the West.

The fact that the Oil and Gas Act will be used as a model doesn't mean that the distribution of the funds from the tidelands necessarily will be the same. Probably Congress will allocate a portion of the funds to the States near whose boundaries the developments take place. But the remainder, it is planned, will go to national benefits.

Among subjects that may be aided by such funds are education—including the public school system and institutions of higher education—roads, construction of school buildings, etc.

O'Mahoney points this feature out in remarking that a "substantial portion of the revenue may be used to foster education."

"There is scarcely a State that doesn't need increased dental and medical educational facilities," he added. "Such a program would use our natural resources to conserve and utilize our human resources."

Substitute Minerals Sought

The comprehensive program O'Mahoney favors also would direct attention to scientific exploration for substitutes for the "old-fashioned minerals" now in short supply in this country. He includes among these the wide supplies of anothosite clay available in mountain States, from which alumina can be obtained. American supplies of bauxite, the chief source of alumina, are rapidly becoming limited so that much of America's requirements must be obtained from abroad.

Such projects as are now being fostered by the Interior Department as the recovery of oil from the enormous oil-bearing shale deposits of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming, and the experimental plants for conversion of coal to oil, will get direction and encouragement from the new committee.

At present the department is operating a plant for producing oil from the western shale at Rifle, Colo., with exceptional success, it is reported. Official estimates indicate that a potential supply of 90 billion barrels of oil is contained in these shale deposits.

A project sponsored by O'Mahoney is the liquid fuels laboratories and pilot plants of the Bureau of Mines at Bruceton, Pa., which are cooperating in the establishment of a new American industry—the conversion of coal to oil.

Construction of these laboratories, the largest and best-equipped of their type in the world, was authorized by the Synthetic Liquid Fuels Act of 1944. O'Mahoney looks upon its successful development as necessary to the economic strength of the Nation in the cold war of today as it was necessary to bolster domestic oil production to insure the Nation's economic and military security during World War II.

To Hear Other Side

In the Eightieth Congress most of the hearings on the tidelands oil bill were devoted to testimony by oil companies, and States seeking to have the tidelands turned back to the States. This session the evidence of those interested in the development of all the resources in the continental shelf—that shelf-like area that extends out into the oceans around the United States for distances of 100 miles—will get priority.

Already two bills dealing with the off-shore properties have been introduced. They provide for administration by the Interior Department of the oil wells within the areas to which the United States has paramount rights. Interior is to lease these to the highest bidder. The bills provide for a commission to be set up to determine the highest bidders, and also to pass upon leases the States have already made, and which should be taken over by the Federal Government.

The amount to be recovered from the off-shore explorations is still anybody's guess. Some think it may prove to be enormous—that the oil is only a part of the tremendous wealth that lies there awaiting methods and will to remove it.

How this wealth shall be distributed depends largely upon its magnitude. If limited to oil, of course, the problem of how to divide the royalty incomes will need a different solution from that if tremendously valuable deposits of other types are found and developed with Government aid.

The program also has a political angle. The attack on the Federal ownership of tidelands properties was supported by attorneys general from many inland States that would not profit in any way through such State ownership. Will these officials continue in their position, if, through Federal operation, some of the benefits from the tidelands developments revert to their States?

Subjects Assigned

Some idea of the extent of the program planned by O'Mahoney and his committee, working with Interior Department officials, may be gained from the list of subjects assigned to the committee:

1. Public lands, including, entry, easements and grazing, and mineral resources of the public lands.

2. Forfeiture of land grants and laws governing alien ownership.

3. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain, and military parks and battlefields and national cemeteries.

4. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and other objects of interest in the public domain.

5. Measures relating to Hawaii, Alaska and insular possessions.

6. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, easements of public lands for irrigation projects and interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation.

7. Mining interests and mineral land laws.

8. Geological survey.

9. Mining schools and experimental stations.

10. Conservation of petroleum and radium supplies.

11. Relations with the Indians, including the care, education and management of Indians, the care and allotment of Indian lands and claims paid out of Indian funds.

Russians Training New Military Unit

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Jan. 15 (NYHT).—Cadres of workers and Communist Party members are being given military training in the Soviet occupation zone to prepare them to operate in small groups, or as individuals, according to reports reaching the Western Allies.

These cadres are separate from the people's police, in which a large number of nonpolitical prisoners of war were absorbed. The cadres consist only of thoroughly tested members of the Communist-led Socialist Unity Party (S.E.D.) or the Communist Freie Deutsche Jugend (free German youth).

These cedres, it is reported, will guard national plants now watched over by the people's police.

Russian-controlled newspapers sought today to whip up mass protests by the Germans against the Western Powers' control of the Ruhr.

The Communist-directed German People's Congress of the Soviet zone called meetings to condemn what it described as the Ruhr dictate and the allied occupation statute."

Meanwhile, British authorities in Duesseldorf announced the arrest of two more top Communists in connection with a January 2 Communist rally which protested against the Ruhr statute.

The American-British airlift to Berlin averaged just under 6000 tons daily this week, a new record since the Soviet blockade was imposed last June.

The Russians apparently made good their threat tonight to cut off power to Bavaria.

Officials at the Ludersheim power station near Nuernburg shortly before 9 p. m., said the customary flow of power from the Russian zone was not coming through.

Clothes for 600

Mrs. Peron Aids Needy D. C. Children

By The Associated Press

Surprise mingled with embarrassment yesterday at the news that the Maria Eva Duarte de Peron Social Assistance Foundation of Argentina is donating clothing to care for 600 needy Washington children.

Mrs. Peron, wife of Argentina's president, actively heads the foundation which bears her name.

"Surprised" was the reaction of Mrs. Fay Vawters of the Children's Aid Society, to which the clothing has been donated.

"Astounded," she said, "because we never had any idea the Argentine foundation was being solicited."

[The Children's Aid Society was founded as a private organization in 1938 by Mrs. Vawters and her husband, the Rev. Ralph M. Vawters.]

Embarrassment was the reaction among State Department officials. Although declining to comment, they were obviously concerned over the Argentine gift, which seemed to imply the United States is unable to look after its own needy.

There was some apprehension as to what use Russia might make of the matter in view of the Moscow propaganda line that Americans live in pretty miserable conditions compared to those in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

"We solicited Augustin Americo Merlo, an attache at the Argentine Embassy, as an individual, for a small contribution. We had $5 or $10 in mind. We solicit thousands of people for help," Mrs. Vawters explained.

"It turned out he had forwarded our letter to the Argentine foundation and told us the foundation is contributing enough clothing for about 600 children."

Ex-Communist Reports Threats, Sabotage Plans

Newark, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP).—A 30-year-old former Progressive Party campaign manager appealed for police protection today against threats which he said he received from Communist leaders because he quit their organization.

Essex County Detective Chief Clarence Merrell said the man, William Clifford Holmes, requested a guard for his wife and infant son and had given authorities a sworn statement detailing Communist preparations for the sabotage of industry in northern New Jersey in case of war with the Soviet Union. Merrell said Holmes, a Negro World War I veteran who worked as a Newark YMCA secretary, told of quitting the Communist Party last month because it "lacked moral integrity.'

Since then, Holmes statement said, he has been receiving what he described as Communist threats to "break your legs, and if that doesn't work—your neck."

Joliot-Curie, Reds' Rift Seen

Paris, Jan. 15 (NYHT).—The independent newspaper "France-Soir" reported today that Dr. Frederic Joliot-Curie, Nobel Prize physicist and head of the French Atomic Energy Commission, has been "disavowed" by the Communist Party for remarks in an address before the Anglo-American Press Association here ten days ago.

At that time, Dr. Joliot-Curie had pointed out that his obligations to France would make it impossible for him to disclose atomic information to "any foreign country." According to "France-Soir," the Communist Party has charged him with "Titoism."

The paper quoted no specific source for its information, and no confirmation was available either from the Communist Party or from the physicist. The Communist press here has printed nothing that would suggest he is in disfavor.

The day after his address, both the Communist "L'Humanite" and the fellow-traveling "Ce Soir" devoted front page to his speech.

The France-Soir article professing to quote from an official statement of the party's political bureau, said:

"Indeed, M. Joliot-Curie has committed the error of including the U.S.S.R., the fatherland of all workers, in the phrase 'any foreign power.' A French Communist should have no secret from the U.S.S.R."

VACATION'S END—With his customary greeting—a wave of the hat and a puff of the cigar—Winston Churchill returns to England. Britain's wartime prime minister had been vacationing in France, where he painted and worked on his memoirs

New Turkish Premier Named

as one of the more liberal Turkish leaders.

His successor, Gunaltay, is a conservative member of the Republican People's Party. Some observers predicted the cabinet would be reshuffled to eliminate other liberal members, including Kasim Gulek, former Minister of Public Works.

What measures Gunaltay may take to control the soaring cost of living are not known, but it is generally agreed in Ankara that there will be no changes in Turkey's pro-American foreign policy.

Under the so-called Truman doctrine, Turkey has received about 150 million dollars of American aid, large quantities of military equipment and the services of American military advisers. Turkey is also a participant in the Marshall Plan.

Controls Dardanelles

Turkey controls the Dardanelles, the strategic straits separating Europe from Asia Minor, through which all shipping to Russia's Black Sea ports must pass. Turkey also has a common frontier with Russia in the Caucasus and sits squarely in the way of any Russian move to expand southward to the Arabian oil fields or the Suez Canal.

For this reason the United States Government considers vital the maintenance of a strong and friendly Turkey.

Almost all American aid and more than half of the revenues raised internally go to support the Turkish armed forces.

This is the prime cause of inflation.

Moreover, Turkey lost a great part of her foreign market for tobacco—the chief crop—during the war.

Observers believe that there is little chance of a balanced Turkish economy so long as the cold war between East and West continues.

Regarded as Coincident

Although the resignation of 88-year-old Sophoulis as Premier of Greece occurred at approximately the same time, experts in European capitals and Washington consider this to be merely a coincidence.

Efforts have been under way in Athens for many months to broaden the base of the Greek government. These moves have had the support of the United States.

Sophoulis, who is ill, isued a statement from his bed saying that unless full power were given him to "clean corruption from the government," suppress what he called the politico-economic oligarchy, and appoint a generalissimo to take supreme command against the guerillas, he would resign.

Monday, it was announced that Gen. Alexander Papagos, Greek hero against Italy in World War II, had been appointed to the post. The next day the appointment was delayed because Papagos insisted on authority to act independently of the Supreme War Council, which has British and American members.

Since Greece will receive more than 300 million dollars of American aid in the year ending June 30, 1949, and expects a minimum of 400 million dollars next year, this condition was regarded as unacceptable.

Dutch Charge U. N. Bias

Batavia, Java, Jan. 15 (AP).—The Dutch conquerors of the Republic of Indonesia today accused the United Nations Good Offices Committee here of being biased and badly informed.

An army communique lashed at the committee's report to the U. N. yesterday that Holland's forces can't preserve order. The committee's observers reported hundreds of bridges destroyed and other destruction, particularly around Soerabaja.

The guerillas' underground radio reported new victories, and said insurgents had knifed into the Dutch-held communications network around Cheribon.

The Dutch said that "for months on end" the Dutch told the U. N. committee about "the looting, murder, destruction and vexation of the population" caused by guerillas.

"If the observers think all this has taken place during the past few weeks as a result of the Netherlands' action, they give evidence of being extremely badly informed," the communique said.

Native leaders of Dutch-sponsored federal Indonesian States were meeting here to discuss Holland's plan for a United States of Indonesia. The Republicans resisted many features of the plan.

11th Airborne Group Sails from Japan to U. S.

Yokohama, Jan. 15 (AP). — Maj. Gen. William M. Miley and 40 officers and enlisted men's dependents, today sailed aboard the Army transport General Buckner as the advance detachment of the Eleventh Airborn Division which is coming from Japan to Camp Campbell, Ky. The division will begin moving next month. It will be replaced by the Seventh Infantry Division.

2 More Years Of Cold War

Lake Success, Jan. 15 (AP).—The United Nations is digging in for at least two more years of the cold war between Russia and the United States.

High United Nations leaders here hope the world organization can hit its stride after that.

This is the consensus of private talks with U. N. delegates and leaders who came back from the Paris meeting of the General Assembly somewhat discouraged.

No responsible leader here wants to talk about the U. N. future for the record—except in general terms. But the conversations are going on privately.

No one at U. N. headquarters even has hinted that he expects war at any time.

D. C. Girl Is Back From Palestine War

A two-month European art appreciation tour last summer became an eight-month personal survey of the war-torn birth of Palestine for Nadine Cherner, 1630 Juniper st. nw.

The tall, dark-eyed daughter of auto dealer Joseph Cherner returned to Washington last month less impressed with the art treasures of England, France, Belgium and Holland than she is with the realistic vitality and courage of the new nation.

With quiet intensity, she says she wants to go back, maybe "for good."

Nadine is only 22. She was graduated in 1947 from Bryn Mawr College, a serious student interested primarily in art.

Studied at Geneva

This interest took her abroad in the winter of 1947-1948, first as part of an art tour, then as a student in the University of Geneva, studying the history of art.

But at the university, Nadine came to know and admire many of 150 Palestinians also studying at the Swiss school. She first became conscious of them when she saw "Tel Aviv" written on the notebook of a young girl seated next to her.

"The sense of values of these people was more realistic than anything I had ever known," she said yesterday.

The desire to see at first hand this nation being born grew stronger and stronger. Her father had for many years been active in Zionist circles, but Nadine said she had never paid "any attention" to his activities. "Suddenly they became very important to me," she said.

And despite strong parental objection, in April of 1948 Nadine Cherner sailed from Marseilles for Haifa on the only large Palestine ship, the Kedmah, loaded with refugees.

Saw Ballte of Haifa

The battle of Haifa was in progress when the 21-year-old girl stepped ashore into "the most beautiful city I have ever seen."

From the top of Mount Carmel, Nadine saw her first war, spread out at her feet like a "great show." In her own words, the war was "confined to incidents."

She wanted to get to Tel Aviv to visit the parents of the friends she had made in Geneva, and there she went within a week in an armored car operated by the bus company. There she said she did little, because the Battle of Jaffra, only a few miles away, was in process.

In Tel Aviv she received the first of "several" cables from her parents urging her to return. She felt that her parents had a distorted idea of the Palestine war through reading the American press, and decided to stay on.

Before long she moved to Ruchamah, a collective settlement of a few hundred people, typical of the scores of "kibboutz" through which the Jews hope to make the Negev Desert habitable and productive.

The first battle of the Negev started the day she arrived in Ruchamah.

Carried a Rifle

Under the collectivist economy of the settlement, Nadine worked in return for her food and lodging. Her job was driving a jeep. She carried a rifle, which her friends in the Jewish Army procured for her. The settlement was bombed on two occasions during the two months she was there. Children and livestock were evacuated to the north.

Throughout her conversation yesterday she paused to determine whether any information she was giving could still be restricted.

During her eight-month stay in Palestine she also visited Beersheva where she heard Conductor Leonard Bernstein give his concert; Jerusalem, where she twice felt the earth shake from enemy bombs; Emek; another "kibboutz" near Haifa, and many other areas.

"It was a wonderful thing to watch the Palestinians throw back their shoulders after the British left," she said, "when the Haganah ceased to be an underground organization and became the Jewish army fighting for freedom."

Again and again she referred to the vitality, honesty, reality and earnestness of Palestine, its clean modern buildings and its beauty.

all but signed. Nevertheless, Israeli officials described themselves as "cautiously optimistic" of agreement by the end of next week.

Sources differed on the extent of Dr. Bunche's proposals to the Israelis and Egyptians today.

One source said he had made a bold effort to solve all the thorny problems in a lump by submitting a draft proposal covering all military and boundary phases of the Negev dispute.

Another source said all the issues were grouped, but Dr. Bunche was approaching them separately.

This source said Dr. Bunche had asked the Israelis to permit the encircled Egyptian brigade at Faluja to return to Egypt. While it was not likely he would get the maximum request, it was believed he was jockeying for a middle ground.

For the first time in these three days, no plenary session was held. These gatherings of full delegations are called only when agreement has been reached on a specific point in private hotel-room sessions.

Some Egyptians were reported to have protested to U. N. officials against press descriptions of the Rhodes conference as "peace talks." They allegedly asked that U. N. communiques emphasize that the talks are of a military nature and concerned solely with an armistice.

Israel's Hopes Renewed By Cuba's Recognition

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—Cuba's surprise de facto recognition of Israel raised the prospects today the state soon would make a new bid for membership in the United Nations.

A spokesman said Israeli U. N. representatives were delighted and hopeful a new Israeli membership application would win final approval at the April meeting of the General Assembly.

Bevin's Critics Plan Palestine Policy Attacks

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—Criticism of Foreign Secretary Bevin's Palestine policy mounted among Laborites, Liberals and Conservatives today.

Questions listed for Wednesday's session of the House of Commons indicated the Foreign Secretary will be in for a hot time.

Raymond Blackburn, a Labor member, said he will demand a public investigation of the shooting down of five RAF pilots over the Israeli-Egyptian battle area.

Sir Andrew Macfadyean, president-elect of the Liberal Party, told a Palestine protest meeting in London tonight "the evidence suggests that at times Bevin has been activated, if not by hatred, at any rate by intense dislike" of the Jews.

Harold MacMillan, Conservative, told another political meeting at Bromley:

"We find ourselves, after 30 years of generous effort on their behalf, bitterly hated by the Jews. We are suspected by the Arabs, we have failed to win the sym-sympathy or the cooperation of the Americans and we are being out-maneuvered by the Russians," he said.

West Europe Plant Output Nears Prewar

By The Associated Press

"Encouraging" prograss in western Europe has boosted factory production and exports close to prewar volume, the Economic Cooperation Administration announced yesterday.

The report was issued as ECA, aided by a score of staff officials from the Marshall Plan council in Paris, pushed preparations to ask Congress for a second-year program of $4,500,000,000.

The ECA reported that almost all the 17 actively participating countries also have met "some success" in fighting the inflation which has disrupted their postwar trade and investment.

Nearly at 1938 Rate

Total output of mines and factories last fall was 10 per cent above 1947 and "nearly equal to the 1938 rate"—the last year of peace in Europe. Exports, excluding shattered Germany, are at about the prewar, or 1938 level.

The report also contained a sober note. Nathaniel Knowles, ECA statistical chief who analyzed the European country-by-country figures, said the nations "still have many difficulties to overcome before a satisfactory balancing of international accourts is achieved."

Parallels Earlier Warning

This paralleled the warning given the European nations earlier this week by Robert Marjolin, secretary general of the organization for European economic cooperation, the Paris Council. Marjolin is here with the Paris group advising ECA on the 1950 program.

A three-billion-dollar annual deficit in foreign trade will confront Europe when the Marshall Plan ends in mid-1952, Marjolin said, unless the governments themselves stabilize their currency, curb imports further, increase productivity and wage a vigorous campaign to broaden their overseas markets.

The ECA's own study reported a reduction of the gap between European exports and imports, including a narrowing of "the very large trade deficit with the United States." But the slow expansion of European trade within Europe and commerce with other nations remains "a major obstacle to recovery," ECA said.

New Blizzard Hits Northwestern U. S.

Chicago, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The third big blizzard in two weeks howled into Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Montana and North and South Dakota tonight, marooning hundreds of travelers. It halted relief operations for the last storm.

The new storm followed a cold wave which spread zero 10 degrees below temperatures through the Dakotas and northern Iowa.

The cold wave extended to Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan. At Pemberton, N. Dak., the temperature dropped 21 degrees in six hours.

Two transcontinental highways were blocked on the western side of the Rocky Mountains and snow crews doubted they could keep a third clear.

Snowplows were ordered off highways because of the storm in northwestern and west-central South Dakota, where 50-mile-an-hour winds carried the blizzard and visibility was reduced to zero.

In North Dakota winds of 25 to 42 miles an hour whipped new mountainous drifts and more snow fell.

Gov. George Mickelson of South Dakota asked for more Federal funds to help nearly 9000 Indians at Pine Ridge Reservation. Fuel and food were short since the blizzard of January 2.

great interest in underwater warfare, he reported that work was progressing on "air-to-subsurface" guided missiles.

One reason for the development of "sub-killer" submersibles, say experts, is that the disturbance and sharp temperature difference of the surface layer of water from that below, make detection of U-boats by aircraft and ships difficult. Another submarine, operating below this surface sound "barrier," can more easily track down and blast another sub with its torpedoes.

New type subs now in operation in the American and Russian navies make detection doubly difficult, because they can stay submerged indefinitely at periscope depth by means of "snorkel" air tubes. Atomic-powered true submersibles, however, could operate at any depth for long periods without resurfacing.

Secretary Sullivan warned that these and other type new warships are costing much more than their predecessors. Back in 1939, he reported, the ordnance bought for a new destroyer represented 21 per cent of the total cost. Today it runs 45 per cent. He added that on the basis of present trends it seems probable that new armament, fire control and detection gear on some new ships will cost more than the ship itself.

Sullivan cited these other examples of the rising cost of naval defense:

I. For the price of 2 of today's fighter planes, which cost $456,000 apiece, the Navy in 1939 was able to buy an entire squadron of 18 fighters.

2. The electrical and electronics equipment on a 1948 night fighter costs almost as much as a day fighter did in 1939, completely equipped.

3. New destroyers today carry a crew twice as large as those built a decade ago. The crew, moreover, due to pay increases and the need for more skilled technicians, gets an average of 83 per cent more pay per man than in 1939.

Sullivan warned of another factor which will make the Navy cost more in future years. The fleet has been operating to a considerable extent on wartime bought stocks. By drawing on such reserves, the Navy operated at a scale a billion dollars more in 1949 than provided by appropriations, it was said. And reserve stocks are dwindling.

The Navy Secretary's yearly report, unlike most such documents, carried no recommendations. Other pertinent observations on existing conditions follow:

1. "Noticeable" progress in unification has been made, though much still remains to be done.

2. The battle efficiency of naval aviation personnel is good, although squadrons are below war strength.

3. Inspections made of the "mothball" fleet disclose that the interiors of ships under dehumidification is good, while exteriors are "not entirely satisfactory."

4. The health of the Navy is good and the death rate hit the second lowest in all history in 1947.

Loot Suspect Slips Pawning Own Jacket

A suspected car looter who has been sought for a month and a half was arrested yesterday after he had correctly listed his name and address in pawning a brown jacket.

Police were puzzled because in pawning other articles the suspect had used the same name but always a different and fictitious address.

Why had he slipped and put down his correct address on the pawn slip?

"Why, all that other stuff was stolen," police quoted him in reply. "This was my own jacket."

Detectives Nicholas Genua and C. R. Winemiller of the First Precinct said they had been seeking the 27-year-old unemployed clerk as the man who had been breaking into cars and looting them in the vicinity of the Union Station and Mall.

Through fingerprints lifted from one of the looted cars they learned the name of their suspect but not his address.

As the stolen articles appeared in second hand shops, the name again appeared to taunt them. But the address given was always a phony. Always, that is, until the suspect made a legitimate visit to the pawn shop.

In the suspect's room, they said, they recovered loot valued at between $700 and $800. The loot included four suitcases full of clothing and such articles as portable radios, pistols, knives, cameras and binoculars.

Police said persons who have reported thefts from their cars in the area visited by the suspect would be invited to come to the First Precinct Station to see if they could identify their property.

Russian Writers Urge End of Critics' Group

Moscow, Jan. 15 (NYHT).—The board of directors of the Soviet Writers' Union proposed today the liquidation of the Society of Theater Critics as "a nest which is hostile and incompatible with the spirit of Soviet art and which contradicts directives of the Communist Party."

The board also observed that "the state of Soviet dramaturgy remains unsatisfactory."

Rail Union Heads Plan Further Talks This Week

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Presidents of 16 nonoperating railroad unions and carrier officials planned further wage and hour talks next week, indicating no immediate strike by one million rail workers.

The unions, under terms of the Railway Labor Act, will be free on Monday to call a strike at any time. January 17 marks the expiration of the 30-day cooling-off period after the presidential fact-finding board's report on the dispute.

The presidential board on December 17 recommended a pay raise of 7 cents an hour, retroactive to October 1, and a 40-hour work week instead of 48 hours, effective next September 1. The unions had asked a pay boost of 25 cents an hour, a 40-hour week, time and a half pay for Saturdays and double time for Sundays and holidays.

Utility Bonds Voted

Manassas, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.).—Citizens of this town have voted in favor of a $140,000 bond issue for the improvement of utilities. The count was 64 for and 15 against.

'Dispersal' of Washington Explored by City Planners

City planners, looking at Washington "with perspective," explored in a symposium last night dispersal or decentralization of the Capital city.

Frederick A. Gutheim, former Washington resident, author of a forthcoming book on the Potomac and editor of the building news section of the New York Herald Tribune, saw a residential trend toward filling up the Potomac Valley already in progress.

Lewis Mumford, author and visiting professor at the University of North Carolina, told an audience of 500 persons at the meeting sponsored by the Washington Metropolitan Chapter, American Institue of Architects, that there were three alternatives in planning the Capital's future:

Sub-Washington Idea

First, dispersal of the present city over a larger area; second, creating of a circle of "6, 8 or 10 towns around Washington—real cities where Government offices could be established"; or thirdly, creation of "6 to 10 sub-Washingtons in major regions of the country."

Mumford said "decentralization of Government is the key problem" in Washington city planning. Mumford said he had submitted a proposal for sub-Washingtons to the War College more than a year ago, and asked "whether any country can afford to have all its eggs in one basket," considering what "one or two well placed atomic bombs" could do to the national government.

Must Be For a Region

Third speaker on the program, held in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium, was Hugh Pomeroy, director of planning for Westchester County, N. Y., and a former director of the Virginia State Planning Board.

Pomeroy said "a plan for a national capital cannot be a plan for a city but for a region." and urged that planning not be "blind to the explosive forces going on" in urban life.

Louis Justement, Washington architect and past president of the Architect's Washington chapter, in an introductory talk, said the meeting was called "because we feel there should be a more spontaneous expression of feeling about city planning on the part of citizens themselves."

Cuba to Replace Belt As U. S. Ambassador

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 15 (AP).—A ministry of state spokesman said today that Guillermo Belt, Cuban Ambassador to Washington, will be offered another important post.

This was an indirect way of saying the diplomat will be replaced.

Informed sources said Raul Lopez del Castillo, prime minister in Grau's cabinet, will be offered the Washington position.

UAW to Drive for Pension and Welfare Funds

auto manufacturers to meet up with the social security issue.

A drive on the part of organized labor to retain wartime take-home pay in the shorter peacetime work week of 40 hours dominated the three postwar management-labor collective bargaining sessions.

The first round was settled in 1946 after a record number of long and bitter strikes with a wage boost pattern of 18½ cents an hour. The next two rounds were worked out with an average increase of about 15 cents and 11 cents additional an hour.

But at their most recent national conventions, both the AFL and CIO have stressed security, rather than raises, as the goal for 1948 collective bargaining.

Blueprint Is Drawn

The UAW has already mapped out a blueprint for a comprehensive social security program, whereby the economic hazards of illness and accident, death and old age, would be met with pensions, life insurance, income maintenance during illness, hospitalization, medical and surgical benefits.

One such program was agreed to last summer by the Kaiser-Frazer Corp., which contributes 5 cents an hour for each hour worked by union employes to a fund jointly controlled by the union and company.

Currently, it is estimated, one-fifth of the 15 million union workers in this country are covered by some sort of pension-welfare program. Although the largest group of protected employes is in the clothing and textile industries, the welfare and retirement fund of the United Mine Workers is the most controversial and widely known.

The UMW fund, protecting 480,000 miners, is financed by a 20-cents-a-ton contribution by the mine owners, and controlled by a three-man board, representing miners, owners, and the public.

The fund of the UMW came into being in the spring of '46, when, after a 59-day strike over the issue, the Government seized the mines, and agreed to a five-cents-a-ton welfare fund. This royalty was raised to 10 cents the following year through an agreement between the union and mine owners, but operation of the benefits were tied up for a year over inability to agree on the means of providing the pensions. The disagreement led to a work stoppage, and wound up with John L. Lewis and union being fined heavily for violating a court strike ban.

Contribution Increased

Last summer, the mine owners' contribution to the fund was upped to 20 cents for each ton of coal produced.

UMW headquarters revealed yesterday that during the past 20 months, the welfare and retirement fund paid out 68 million dollars to 260,000 beneficiaries. The benefits included disability payments of $60 a month for miners, $20 extra for their wives, and $10 for each child; retirement benefits of $100 a month, and $1000 death benefits; hospital and medical care.

In '46 the CIO Steelworkers, another large union, brought up the issue of a welfare program with Inland Steel. The National Labor Relations Board ruled that the company had to bargain on this issue, so long as the Steelworkers' Union complied with the provision of the Taft-Hartley Act calling for an anti-Communist affidavit by the union officials.

Philip Murray, who heads both the CIO and the Steelworkers, refused to sign the affidavit. The United States Supreme Court is expected to rule shortly on the questions involved. Meanwhile, the Steelworkers Union has been engaged in discussions with U. S. Steel on a social security program.

Dewey to Give Party His View on How to Stop Losing Streak

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, accused of dealing in lofty platitudes in the '48 campaign, intends to cut loose with some plain and hard-hitting words when he speaks here at a Lincoln Day rally on February 12.

As titular head of the Republican Party he will tell that party what he thinks it must do to end its losing streak in presidential elections.

Governor Dewey feels that the No. 1 task is to disabuse the public mind of the notion that the Republican Party is dominated by Big Business.

The New Yorker, an also-ran in two national elections, is convinced that the thing that most contributed to his defeat last November was President Truman's effective presentation of the argument that the Republican Party was the party of the "special interests" and the Democratic Party the party of "the people."

Governor Dewey believes that the GOP can never hope to capture the White House until it gets out from under that "special interests" label.

A good many Republican officials agree with Governor Dewey about this, although they would contend that it was only partly responsible for what hapened on November 2. They think that Dewey himself was largely to blame for the defeat because of the type of campaign he waged.

Associates of the 1944-48 nominee, who have visited Washington, say that a speech has been boiling up in him ever since the election. He wanted a good sounding board for it, and therefore chose this city and the traditional Lincoln Day rally.

Hagerty Blames Congress

How Governor Dewey proposes to explode the wide-spread feeling that his party is the party of "special interests" is something that he will have to develop in his speech. He is known to be critical of the "reactionary" element of the party on Capitol Hill. He feels, too, that the Republican National Committee could stand renovation, with the elimination of those closely identified with "the forces of reaction."

James C. Hagerty, Dewey's press officer, said in Albany Friday that many factors brought about defeat in November.

"But the action of the last Congress did not help our cause," Hagerty told reporters. "The farmers became afraid of what would happen if the Republicans gained power."

Governor Dewey's recent message to the New York Legislature, in which he laid down a 1949 program, was taken as an indication that he favored a more "liberal" point of view. For the first time in his administration, he recommended disability insurance for workers and proposed a 300-million dollar increase in appropriations for low-cost housing.

The New Yorker, who said after his defeat that he had "some very good ideas for reorganization" of the Republican Party, does not like the use of the word "liberal" in this connection.

"Governor Dewey," said Hagerty, "just wants good government. Whether you term it liberal or anything else, that's what he wants."

The Republican National Committee is meeting in Omaha on January 26-27, two weeks or so in advance of Governor Dewey's speech here. Representative Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the national chairman, plans to suggest a policy and program conference for next autumn to determine what ails the GOP and what can be done to make it a winner.

Stubborn Bank Safe Finally Drilled Open

New York, Jan. 15 (NYHT).—A seven-ton money chest that neither bank officials nor lock experts had been able to open since Thursday noon, was finally drilled open this afternoon and $250,000 in cash removed.

Two experts from Yale & Towne, who had already put in 16 hours trying to open the chest, admitted early today it was beyond them, and the Bushwick Savings Bank of Brooklyn reluctantly gave them permission to drill.

They started at 8:30 a. m. and finished at 3 p. m.

COMMON SENSE

our revolutionary idea in new cars

You put a square peg in a square hole, and a round peg in a round hole. That's common sense. Add real creative imagination in research and engineering to that kind of common sense . . . and you have the combination that sparked a revolutionary trend in car building 25 years ago at Chrysler Corporation.

When we introduced the high compression engine in 1924, that was common sense plus imagination in research and engineering . . . though it was said to be revolutionary.

When we pioneered hydraulic four-wheel brakes in 1924 . . . when we were first with all-steel car bodies . . . when long ago we introduced Floating Power, Automatic Overdrive Transmission, Fluid Drive, and many other great Chrysler Corporation firsts, they were called revolutionary, too.

To us the important thing was not what these developments were called—but what they did! How they influenced the other car manufacturers who adopted or adapted them! And most of all, how these developments led directly to the four wonderful new cars we'll be introducing.

Certainly advances by Chrysler Corporation engineering and research paced the trend towards cars that are easier to stop, safer to drive. More comfortable. More convenient. Cars with better pick-up, gasoline economy, and smoother performance. They were developments that called for engineering imagination aplenty . . . and especially for common sense.

Again and again we've brought you the good things first through imagination and common sense in Chrysler Corporation engineering. We've always engineered our cars from the inside out—pioneering the advances in safety, comfort, convenience, and performance—and then creating outside beauty that reflects the good, sound engineering underneath.

Now we are making preliminary preparations to introduce 4 beautiful new cars that carry our trend in new car design still further ahead.

They are engineered with imagination and common sense . . . and they look it.

They bring you automobile improvements that are basic to your safety and comfort . . . and they look it.

A few pilot models have started down the assembly lines. And we can tell you this, they more than live up to our expectations. The beautiful, well-bred new Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto, and Chrysler cars are a wonderful next step in the revolution in car design we started 25 years ago.

Again you get the good things first from CHRYSLER CORPORATION

Prison Farm Escapee Held in New Rape Try After Attack on Fairfax County Woman, 36

James W. Campbell, 39, an escapee from a Virginia prison farm and once convicted of attempted rape, yesterday was held without bond in Fairfax Jail, accused of attempting to rape a 36-year-old county woman.

He was captured at 11:30 p. m. Friday, less than two hours after the alleged attempt. Police were aided in the quick arrest by the good memory of a W. V. & M. Coach Co. bus driver.

The assault victim, a resident of Tremont Gardens near Falls Church, said Campbell left the bus with her on Lee hwy. near her home about 9:30 p. m. Friday night.

According to police, the assailant threw the woman to the ground, beat her about the face, then fled when a passing motorist stopped to investigate.

The woman was treated for face bruises by Dr. Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax County coroner. She was not hospitalized.

Bus Driver Guy Samples, 41, of 3346 Prospect ave. nw., who saw the woman and Campbell leave his bus Friday night, told police the accused man had ridden on his bus earlier in the day with a male companion.

According to police, Campbell's companion asked Samples when the last bus left from Falls Church to Merrifield, Va., that night and the driver told him the departure time was 11:30 p. m.

At that time Friday night, Fairfax Police Pvts. Stanley Dodson and Frank Jones checked the Falls Church bus terminal. Instead of Campbell's friend, they found the suspect himself and arrested him as he boarded the bus.

Campbell was identified by the bus driver, and later by the assault victim. Police said he had signed a statement admitting the attack.

Fairfax police said Campbell had escaped from the State prison farm in Powhatan County, Va., where he had been serving time for assault.

In 1936, according to Fairfax police records, Campbell had been convicted of attempted rape in Lynchburg, Va., and served 11 years of a 20-year sentence in the State Penitentiary before his release in 1947.

Mrs. Keleher Sues Again

Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, 50, yesterday began her fight anew to obtain a limited divorce from her once-convicted gambler husband.

Loser in her divorce suit just a day before, she repetitioned the District Court to grant her a decree on the grounds of cruelty.

Meanwhile, her spouse, John B. Keleher, 67, has announced he will go to the court this week to charge her with desertion and demand an absolute divorce.

The strategy behind Mrs. Keleher's new suit is to get into the court records new evidence she says she has obtained since she and her husband separated in February, 1946.

Insufficient in Law

On Friday, Judge Edward A. Tamm decreed that her charges of misconduct on the part of Keleher prior to that date were insufficient in law.

Mrs. Keleher married her white-haired dapper husband in 1926 and resided with him at her present residence in the Woodley Park Towers. He now resides at the Hotel 2400.

Mrs. Keleher says that the $100 a week maintenance awarded her by Judge Tamm Friday is inadequate for her support and asks for reascertainment of the maintenance due her.

Injunction Demanded

Also demanded is an injunction to prevent Keleher from transferring his substantial interests in stocks and real estate. She says that these investments, as well as gaming activities make his income over $30,000 monthly.

The suit charges that Keleher is presently engaged in gambling here in Washington, in Maryland and elsewhere.

Gala Fete Marks Dedication Of Arlington Teen-Age Club

Arlington's new Teen-Age Club No. 1—located in a former railroad waiting room and refurbished by civic-minded county residents—was dedicated yesterday with speeches, band music, and a dance.

Roughly, 50 tots, teen-agers, and adults crowded around the one-room, one-story building along the old Washington & Old Dominion Railroad track bed to watch the ceremony.

Highlight was the presentation to the club of an American flag by Boy Scout Troop 101, assisted by a delegation of Girl Scouts from Troops 1 and 54.

The club, located on N. Glebe rd. at Fairfax dr., had its venetian blinds, plumbing, radio-phonograph, glass, and lumber furnished by local merchants. It was completed by Christmas.

Playing for the dedication yesterday was a 21-piece band, contributed for the occasion by Local 16, American Federation of Musicians.

Master-of-Ceremonies Lee Potter, an Arlington builder, told the crowd that the new teen center "is the beginning of an organized teen-aged program so badly needed in Arlington."

Other speakers were Arlington Sheriff J. Elwood Clements, and County Board member Daniel A. Dugan. Following the dedication yesterday afternoon, a free dance was held in the new center.

Missing Mail Bag Is Found; $75,000 Gone

Waukesha, Wis., Jan. 15 (AP).—A missing mail bag has been found but the $75,000 in good and mutilated bills it contained Thursday was missing.

Two Milwaukee hunters walking on a rural road this morning found the bag, its straps slit, and an empty pouch within, Postmaster Jay Laing declared.

The sack disappeared Thursday night while being taken from the postoffice to a Soo Line train. The money was being shipped by the Waukesha National Bank to the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank.

Between 20 and 30 postal and railroad employes have been questioned but no clews found.

New Council Swearing-in Delayed a Day

Delay in preparation of official warrants of office for members of the new Montgomery County Council will postpone until Tuesday swearing-in ceremonies scheduled originally for Monday.

Thomas C. Kelley, president pro tem of the seven-member body which will replace the county commissioners under the new county charter, said yesterday the ceremonies on Tuesday will probably be held at 9:30 a. m. in the courthouse at Rockville.

The council's first business session will be held immediately afterward, he said.

Another council member, J. Douglas Bradshaw, said he understood the delay was caused by lack of familiarity on the part of State officials at Annapolis with the proper procedure in preparation of warrants for council members.

Montgomery is the first county in the State to adopt a council-manager charter form of government.

Council members will be introduced to the public today during a half-hour radio broadcast over Station WGAY at 1:15 p. m. Members will be introduced by Mrs. J. Rene Hemingway, president of the county league of women voters.

Future policy of the new governing body will be discussed during the forum and a question and answer session will be held.

After the broadcast, members will hold their third and final informal session before taking office. To be discussed, Bradshaw said, is general reorganization of the county government as provided by the "home rule" charter.

Quizdown Kids Who Knew the Answers

The Washington Post

Three boys and three girls of the Walter Reed School led all the way in yesterday's Quizdown, beating a male team from Fairlington School by 892 points to 450.

The weekly quiz show, sponsored by The Washington Post and broadcast over Station WTOP, was the second of four being contested by Arlington, Va., schools this month. Originating from the auditorium of Thomas Jefferson Junior High School in Arlington, it drew an audience of more than 600 loyal supporters and parents.

First expert before the microphone for Walter Reed, which is at 1644 N. McKinley rd., Arlington, was Judy Ann Schierlmann, one of the two perfect scorers in the contest.

Quick Correction

Judy Ann, who is almost 10 and lives at 5711 N. Washington blvd., Arlington, knew right away that the air we breathe goes to the lungs, but later on when the fourth grader got her second question, she had to think quickly to retrieve the right answer.

Quizmaster Vern Hansen asked her what we call a mass of ice moving over land. Too quickly, Judy Ann said "iceberg," but immediately realized she should have said "glacier," so the judges allowed the correction.

Tommy Ellis, 11-year-old Walter Reed (5A) grader, was the other perfect scorer. Without hesitation he said cotton is the product of the South that's called "king," and that newborn babies' eyes are usually "bluish." Tommy, who lives at 1321 N. Nicholas st., Arlington, hopes to be a scientist, actor or businessman.

Help Proves Costly

Nine-year-old Richard Lancefield of the fourth grade at Fairlington School, whose red hair and freckles needed television to do them justice, tried hard to name the process for purifying milk.

He finally did, but he first thought it was "homogenizing," and the help he needed from Vern Hansen to remind him of pasteurization cost him 75 points. "Richie," who lives at 4310 S. 36th st., Arlington, knew right away that the Atlantic Ocean is the one that borders the United States on the east.

Another interesting ambition brought out on Quizdown was that of Leslie Hubbard, 11, sixth-grader at Walter Reed, who wants to be a composite artist for the FBI—making up pictures of people being sought by the Federal agency.

Leslie, who lives at 1412 N. Nicholas st., Arlington, came close to a perfect score. He had little trouble with the world's largest island that isn't a continent (Greenland). When he was quizzed on the winter months in South Africa, he had the right idea, but started with July instead of June. The judges awarded him 67 points on the second question.

Others Listed

Other members of the Walter Reed team were Carol Edwards, 10, grade 5A, of 1027 N. Manchester st.; Edward Vogel, 9, 4A, 1005 N. Kensington st., and Patty Smith, 11, 6, 6030 N. 16th st., all in Arlington.

Other Fairlington School contestants were Albert Tate, 10, 5, 3479 S. Utah st.; John Vaughan, 11, 6A, 2117 S. Culpeper st.; Dicky Cather, 10, 4A, 4674 S. 36th st.; Dennis Mitchell, 10, 5A, 3469A S. Stafford st., and Phil Du Sault, 11, 6A, 4842A S. 28th st.

Judges in the contest were faculty members Miss Grace C. Hall and Rebecca A. Mauzy of Fairlington, Mrs. Eve S. Price and Miss Dorothy L. Cummings of Walter Reed, aided by John Shields, assistant program producer.

As the winning school, Walter Reed received a 10-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and an Emerson table model radio. Fairlington School was awarded a Rand McNally International Edition Atlas and a similar radio. The Walter Reed team members received ball-point pens, while the Fairlington contestants were given automatic pencils.

Pencils also went to other Arlington fourth, fifth and sixth-graders who sent in the questions used in the quiz.

The weekly Quizdown programs are under the direction of Mrs. Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP director of public service and education, and produced by Larry Beckerman. The Arlington programs are coordinated through the radio committee of the Arlington public schools, of which Miss Mary Barbour of John Marshall Eelementary School is chairman.

Correction

The Washington Post stated in a story yesterday that radio station WSID of Essex, Md., had been held in contempt of court in connection with publication of certain crime news in alleged violaton of a Baltimore court rule. Station WSID is one of five stations cited—or accused—of contempt of court. None of the defendants has been "held in contempt" in the sense of having been convicted of the charge. Judge John B. Gray, jr., of the Seventh Circuit, designated to hear the case, has set January 27 for the trial. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Bethesda Fire Laid to Trash And Cigarette

A lighted cigarette tossed carelessly into a trash box under a flight of wooden stairs was given yesterday as the cause of a fire that burned out the rear of a Bethesda (Md.) electrical appliance store.

Throngs of shoppers watched as firemen from Bethesda, Glen Echo and Chevy Chase brought the flames under control at the J. C. Harding & Co. store, 7008 Wisconsin ave.

Blaming the fire on an accumulation of trash behind the building, Bethesda Fire Chief A. J. Bargagni said he had been campaigning against such conditions for months.

Police said they notified all merchants in the 7000 block of Wisconsin ave. last Thursday to clean up the trash and debris that litters the alley in back because of complaints.

Most of the stock at the hardware store, which included television and radio sets and refrigerators, was saved, firemen said. Chief Bargagni estimated damage to the building at approximately $1000. Store officials would not comment on the total damage until completion of an inventory.

The store is only two doors away from People's Hardware Store, 7000 Wisconsin ave., which on November 10 suffered an estimated $10,000 damage from fire.

James Craig House Rebuilding Finished

Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—The reconstruction of a colonial dwelling has been completed as the second project in the 10 million-dollar postwar building program of Colonial Williamsburg.

Work on the James Craig house, next to historic Raleigh Tavern, began last April. Contractors worked from a photograph of the original house made in the 1890's at a young people's outing. Craig was a prominent Colonial jeweler. Buildings were first erected on his property in 1724.

Leigh to Run For Va. House Of Delegates

W. Lewis Leigh, 41, a Fairfax County attorney of Oakton, Va., yesterday said he will be a candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates in the August, 1949 Democratic primary.

Leigh

He seeks the post now held by Delegate Robert J. McCandlish, jr., who recently announced he will not seek reelection in the primary.

Leigh, a lifelong resident of Fairfax County, served as Deputy Commissioner of Revenue from 1932 to 1942. For the next four years, he was Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney, and since 1946 has been in private practice.

He is a member of the Fairfax County School Trustee Electoral Board, the body which appoints the County School Board, and a past president of the County Young Democratic Club.

He said he considers "immediate improvement" of Virginia's public schools the most important problem to come before the General Assembly at its next session.

Thousands Get Last Look at Historic Castle

Historic Henderson Castle, for decades the scene of many social triumphs, will be razed this week.

The 30-room brown stone mansion opposite Meridian Hill Park on 16th st. was thrown open to the public yesterday. Throughout the day, thousands of sightseers walked the bare halls, trampled the tangles of weeds that were once trim gardens, and marveled at the stark edifice.

Bamboo from a jungle-like wood beside the castle was uprooted and carted away by visitors. Tiles were torn from the fireplaces and tapestry was snipped from the walls. Sprigs of ivy were torn from the mass choking itself from earth to roof.

Final Look Today

The public will get a chance for a final look today. Tomorrow the Ace Wrecking Co. will begin destruction.

The Riggs National Bank holds title to the estate for an undisclosed party.

Daniel Goodman, vice president of the wreckers, said that so far as he knew there is no construction contemplated there.

The history of the castle goes back to the 1880s when Senator and Mrs. John B. Henderson, built the structure and stunned the Capital with an opening party said to be still unequalled here.

For many years, thereafter Mrs. Henderson, the former Mary N. Foote, ruled as grande dame of Washington society. She filled her home with rare paintings, fine carvings and other treasures.

From her mansion, she changed 16th street, keeping out businesses and apartment houses, cajoled ambassadors into building their embassies there, and tried to make the street the most magnificent avenue in the world.

The castle itself was modeled from one she saw on the Rhine. Its swimming pool is said to have been the first in Washington.

From it, she crusaded against tobacco, alcohol and meat. And she made it the source of headline news until her death in 1931.

Once she marched down from "the hill" to the street and poured into the gutter the contents of her wine cellar. And all the time, she wore the satin and brocade that was popular in her youth, and even in the bare-kneed '20's, she persisted in keeping her servants in long skirts.

Once a Night Club

In recent years, the castle has been a rooming house and an after-hours club.

One of the visitors to the castle was Jesse Shima, who was Mrs. Henderson's secretary before her death. He says of what he saw:

"It is ghostly. The inside is lonely. There are no lights, no warmness in it. It is a deserted old castle. I won't go back there."

Shima, who was bequeathed $200,000 by Mrs. Henderson, is now a grocer at 842 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Photo in Paper Brings Seizure Of Fugitive, 18

Publication of his picture in the "Inquiring Photographer" column of a local newspaper brought disaster yesterday to an 18-year-old District youth. Prince Georges County police recognized the likeness of Michael Prencipe, who jumped $2200 bond in the county last October. He was arrested yetserday in a downtown Washington 10-cent store.

Prencipe

Asked to make a prediction for 1949 in the "Inquiring Photographer" column, Prencipe, who gave the newspaper a false name and address, said:

"I think this will be a good year for everyone."

He may have revised his prediction after his arrest here by Deputy Sheriff George Shepp and return to the Hyattsville jail to face charges of housebreaking and grand larceny.

Prencipe was arrested last summer on a housebreaking charge in the county and was indicted by the grand jury in October. While he was free on $1000 bond awaiting a hearing on that indictment, he was arrested again on a charge of grand larceny. His bond on the second charge was $1200.

The youth failed to appear late in October for arraignment on the housebreaking indictment. Police have been searching for him since that time.

When his picture appeared in the newspaper Friday, police investigated and learned that he frequented a downtown drug store. The arrest followed.

At the time of his original arrest, Prencipe was living with his parents at 234 Randolph pl. ne.

He told police that since his disappearance last October he has spent most of the time on the road hitchhiking. He said he had "hitched" out to Los Angeles and back and had spent some time in New York City and Baltimore.

ice Committee in the Eightieth Congress. He served two terms previously in the California State Assembly.

Representative Morrison, a practicing lawyer in Hammond, La., came to Congress in 1942. He also served on the Civil Service Committee in the last Congress.

Recheck of the test vote last year on the Auchincloss home rule bill reveals a 9-8 vote favoring suffrage among the expected members of the new House District Committee who were recorded on the roll call vote. Lined up against the home rule bill last spring were Democratic Representatives McMillian, Harris, Abernathy, Smith, Teague, Jones and Davis, and Republican Representative Simpson.

Voting in favor of taking up the Auchincloss bill, which failed final passage in the House, were Democratic Representatives Klein, Deane and Kennedy, and on the Republican side, Representatives Bates, Bealle, Talle, Miller (Nebr.), Auchincloss and Allen (Calif.).

The expected reassignment of experienced legislators to the House D. C. group contrasts sharply with the upper house committee makeup.

Freshmen on Senate Body

All but two of the Democratic and all the Republican Senators appointed to handle District affairs are freshmen members.

Reason for the contrasting complexion of the two committees stems from different rules of the two bodies. House rules permit both majority and minority members to have one major committee plus the District assignment. In the Senate, however, majority members may serve on two major committees, plus the D. C. group, while minority members are limited to a total of two committees.

The differing makeup of the Senate and House groups gave indications that the lower house, with its more experienced District of Columbia legislators, will probably originate much of the more complicated local legislation this year. Hopes for action of home rule for Washington, on the other hand, rests on the Senate side, where District Committee Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) is an enthusiastic suffrage booster.

Civil Rights Group Schedules Demonstration

A "freedom crusade" will bring 3500 persons to Washington Tuesday in a demonstration for civil rights legislation, preceded Monday by a conference on the legislation, the Civil Rights Congress announced yesterday.

Among the representatives of labor, veteran, church and civic groups expected for Monday's civil rights conference will be "victims of the Eightieth Congress," including some of the "Hollywood ten" cited for contempt after they appeared before the Un-American Activities Committee, the announcement said.

The conference will begin at 11 a. m. at Laborers' Hall, 523 New Jersey ave. nw., with discussion of Negro civil rights. Mrs. Robert Mallard and Mrs. Isaiah Nixon, widows of lynch victims in Georgia, will attend, it was said.

On Tuesday, plans have been made for meetings at Turner's Arena, visits to Congressmen, the Department of Justice and the White House.

Federation Votes Reply

prior to passage of the Striner motion.

The meeting in the District Building ended in a tumult with Earl Otto, delegate from Chillum Heights, on his feet attempting to obtain permission of the gathering to introduce a motion regarding hotel rates during the inaugural period.

He was ignored by President John H. Connaughton, who banged his gavel and called: "A motion for adjournment is in order. All in favor signify by going home."

Dr. Striner, supporting his motion, declared the report charged the federation with specific actions, and it is up to the federation to make "dignified" answers to them.

Although issuance of such a reply was authorized only last night, it was learned then that it has already been prepared by a special committee and was approved January 5 by an 8-to-4 vote of the executive board, of which Dr. Striner is a member.

Committeemen Listed

The special committee is composed of Harry N. Stull, Stanton Park, chairman; Clifford H. Newell, Arkansas ave.; Leverett A. Meadows, Manor Park; J. B. Dickman, jr., North Cleveland Park, and Charles A King, Summit Park.

The existence of the special committee was challenged by Thomas E. Lodge of American University Park, also an executive board member, who said he voted against acceptance of the report. He said the committee is not a regularly sanctioned one and cannot be legalized under an emergency appointment as "no emergency exists."

Shortly before calling the vote, with the debate reaching a state of near disorganization, a 12-minute limit was set before cutting off discussion on a privileged motion by Harry S. Wender of Southwest.

"Further Cleavage"

Ralph W. Donnelly, Brentwood Terrace, opposed making any reply.

"That is just what they want us to do," he declared. "They have been waiting for our answer ever since they issued their report. We can't gain prestige by squabbling again and again over the question . . . It will merely cause a further cleavage in the community, splitting factions further apart."

Stull countered this viewpoint, saying, "Not only is the federation mentioned by name in the report, but member bodies are singled out. If we prefer to take the stand of doing nothing, it is better to close up entirely."

Wender, who pointed out he was one of the few mentioned by name in report, said he was "convinced that to say nothing is to do nothing," and that "we must grapple with the issue."

At the same time he asserted, "Many of the factual statements are true; we know they are true."

Bills Racing Deadline

normally do not work Saturdays and Sundays the legislation would, in effect, grant a four-day weekend off.

The bill sailed through the Senate by voice vote last Thursday amid cries of "waste" and "extravagance" from the Republican side.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee plans Monday to call up his committee-approved resolution exempting inaugural tickets from Federal levies.

If it clears the House, the upper body, if still in session, will be asked to act on the same day.

Was Assured of Passage

Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the Inaugural Committee, has explained that the parade, gala and ball tickets were sold tax-free on "assurances" that the authorizing bill would pass Congress.

Representative Wilbur D. Mills (D., Ark.), a member of the Ways and Means Committee, said last week that the Inaugural Committee "would probably go in the hole" if the resolution should not pass.

It was pointed out, however, there was no immediate deadline on the legislation since Inaugural officials have until the end of 1949 to file tax returns.

Democratic leaders in both houses have expressed certainty that the legislation would pass.

However, Representative Edward H. Rees (R., Kans.), former chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, lashed out at the proposal.

It would be "absurd" to exempt admission tickets to presidential inauguration events, he said.

"People who can afford to pay $10 to attend the Inaugural Ball or $5 to $10 to attend the Inaugural Gala show the night before the inauguration certainly can afford to pay the Federal tax," Rees said.

Okla. Town Under Watch

$1 Thursday for bus fare to Cushing, in Payne County.

The minister, unidentified due to fear of Godbey, didn't know who the panhandler was until Friday morning when he saw the suspected killer's picture in the Daily Oklahoma. He delayed telling officers until convinced it was his duty.

Through informants, officers have been able to trace Godbey's steps since Pruet was slain.

Pruet, who was prosecuting attorney in Jefferson County when Godbey was sentenced to 35 years, was fatally shot Tuesday in his downtown office. The slayer walked out of the office, entered an elevator and disappeared.

Witnesses to the shooting identified Godbey as the slayer from State prison pictures.

Godbey was convicted in 1932 for the armed robbery of W. W. Woodworth of Ringling, Okla., a banker.

During his trial and after his conviction, he threatened to kill Woodworth, Pruet, the trial judge and others who took part, officials said. He insisted he got a "bum deal" and threatened to kill his prosecutor's children if the prosecutor should be dead when he got out of prison.

The trial judge, Eugene Rice, is now Federal judge of the Eastern Oklahoma District. United States marshals in Muskogee, his home, report he is "out of circulation" until Godbey is captured. Woodworth and his family are being guarded day and night.

Of five men who attempted to rob the Ringling bank in 1932 and succeeded in robbing Woodworth of about $9, only two were captured. They were Godbey and J. C. Braley. Braley, who was pardoned by United States Senator Robert S. Kerr when he was Governor, now lives in Chicago.

FBI agents Saturday were reported to be questioning Braley in an attempt to learn more about the men who participated in the robbery. Barley, however, still says he is innocent.

D. A. Bryce, agent in charge of the FBI office here, refused to comment.

"I've worked some on the case today, but I can't tell you anything," he said.

A search has been under way throughout the Southwest since Thursday when the murder charge was filed. He was believed seen in Ardmore, just 50 miles from here, early Wednesday.

The Oklahoma State highway patrol reported earlier today that a man answering Godbey's description had been spotted in Weatherford, Tex., driving a car with a stolen Oklahoma license.

Godbey was released last November after serving only half of his sentence under Oklahoma's statute allowing prisoners to accumulate good time credit.

His last plea for clemency was in October, 1947. It was turned down by the parole board, largely because of his bad prison record.

He was transferred to the Central State Hospital at Norman from the prison in March, 1936 for treatment for epilepsy. He escaped in June of the same year and was returned to the hospital from Hillsboro, Texas.

He was taken to Norman again in April, 1937. In October he escaped a second time and was recaptured 20 days later. This time he was returned to McAlester.

Called Rough Character

H. C. McLeod, deputy warden at the prison, described Godbey as "a pretty rough character."

McLeod said Godbey was "a dopey" and had been disciplined several times for possession of narcotics inside the prison walls.

Prison and parole office records disclosed that Godbey once attacked a doctor with a knife in the prison hospital where he was being treated.

The hunted man had served four prison terms before he was sent to McAlester in 1932 at the age of 36.

His first was a nine-year term in the Texas penitentiary for burlary and theft. He escaped from prison in April, 1921, and was returned only to be pardoned in 1925.

The following year, in April, he was convicted on a burglary charge in Stephens County and released in July, 1927.

In September of the same year he was sentenced to three years in Leavenworth Federal Prison for breaking into a United States post-office. In December, 1930, he received his second Federal sentence. This time it was a year and a day in Leavenworth on a narcotics charge.

Montgomery at Hague

The Hague, Jan. 15 (AP).—Field Marshall Lord Montgomery, chief of the Western European Union defense team, arrived today. He will spend three days here probably discussing financing the alliance's military power.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Classification Act Revisions May Be Revealed This Week

That much-advertised revision of the salary-fixing Classification Act will be unveiled soon by the Administration in a message to Congress, perhaps this week.

All details haven't been buttoned up, but in general this is what it will propose:

That the 29 different CAF, professional and subprofessional grades be merged into a new schedule of 18 grades;

That the present salary range of $2010 to $10,330 be lifted to a new minimum of $2100 and a new maximum of $17,500 (the latter figure for bureau chiefs in certain extraordinary circumstances);

That the present clerical mechanical service be taken from the Classification Act and be placed under the wage board procedure

ANNOUNCING

Jerry Kluttz's Federal Employe Newsletter to be published by The Washington Post.

The objective of the newsletter will be to keep Federal workers outside of this city fully informed on developments here such as changes in pay, retirement, leave, top personnel, policy, etc. Any changes in Government that are of vital concern to any or all classes of Federal workers will be covered.

The newsletter will be clear, concise and informative. It will be published every other week with an occasional special letter to explain in detail major events such as the approval of far-reaching employe reforms.

Subscriptions are now being accepted at an annual rate of $8 each. They should be mailed to: The Federal Employe Newsletter, The Washington Post, 1337 E Street, Washington 4, D. C. The first issue of the newsletter will be ready for distribution February 15.

(This mean the CM workers—several hundreds are in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here—would be paid on a daily instead of an annual rate and their salaries would be fixed by local wage boards.)

That a separate wage schedule be set up within the Classification Act for the CPC's, crafts, protective and custodial employes, a schedule that would range from $1400 for messengers to $4000 for supervisors. However, it is also proposed that skilled tradesmen in the CPC setup such as carpenters, electricians, etc., be transferred to the jurisdiction of wage boards, a plan that would take several thousand additional employes out of the Classification Act;

That a system of longevity increases be put into effect for employes in so-called "dead-end" jobs. For example, an employe with a good work record who had been in the maximum of his grade for at least three years could be given another in-grade raise. He would be limited to three such raises and would have to wait a minimum of three years between each of them;

That the present rates of automatic in-grade raises be continued unchanged;

That three new so-called "super" grades be created above the present $10,330 maximum, but the Administration plan would limit them to people of special and outstanding qualifications, and finally,

That the present system of overlapping salaries between the grades would be scaled down to a minimum.

Each of the estimated 800,000 employes who would be under the proposed classification system would get an increase in salary, but most of them wouldn't be noticeable. The boosts would be as small as $20 and $40 a year. The maximum would be between $300 and $400 a year for a few employes in the present middle and top grades. Bureau chiefs would get increases of more than $7000 in some cases. The average increase would be around $85 a year.

By and large, the present rates of pay in the first seven CAF grades would be substantially the same as they are now. Proportionately the three pay raises voted by Congress since 1940 were far greater in these lower grades. The middle and high grade employes haven't had anything approaching a cost of living adjustment.

The Classification Act revision has several objectives which are: (1) to simplify schedules and their administration; (2) to bring about a closer relationship between salaries and jobs, a relationship that was thrown out of balance by the three previous raises, and (3) to give employes in the middle and top brackets enough money to help offset to some extent the higher living costs.

It goes without saying that the big mass of Federal workers won't like the revision plan since they won't benefit by it financially.

Also, it's no secret that Senate and House Civil Service Committee members are already at work on a revision plan that would be far more liberal for lower bracket employes.

NOMINEES: The House Civil Service Committee will have nine new Democratic members if the nominees to it are approved Monday by the Democratic caucus. This is the committee slate which will be proposed to the caucus:

MURRAY of Tennessee, would be chairman, and MORRISON of Louisiana, would be ranking member. Then would come MILLER of California; DAVIS of Georgia; WILLIAMS of Mississippi; WHITAKER of Kentucky (all veteran members); CARLYLE of North Carolina; McCARTHY of Minnesota; CROOK of Indiana; HERLONG of Florida; GORSKI of New York; RHODES of Pennsylvania; BUCKLEY of Illinois; THORNBERRY of Texas, and KARST of Missouri.

Miller turned down another committee assignment to retain his Civil Service Committee standing. Gorski defeated Butler who was a GOP committee member in the last Congress. Rhodes is an editor of a labor newspaper in Reading, Pa. Several other prospective committee members have labor backgrounds.

The GOP slate on the Civil Service Committee is official. Five of its 10 members are newcomers. The Republican members are:

REES of Kansas, HAGEN of Minnesota, CORBETT of Pennsylvania, ST. GEORGE of New York, SADLAK of Connecticut, JENISON of Illinois, BURDICK of North Dakota, WITHROW of Wisconsin, GROSS of Iowa and GOLDEN of Kentucky.

Withrow returns to the committee he served on when he was a member of Congress several years ago. He defeated Stevenson who is a coauthor of last year's liberal retirement act. Vursell of Illinois and Morton of Kentucky resigned to take other committee assignments.

Rail Station Is Preparing For Deluge

Authorities Expect To 'Handle' Train Every Two Minutes In Inaugural Rush

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

The appearance of Union Station and its environs this week may well recall the days of a popular saying—"Is this trip necessary?"

It is reasonably certain, however, that a negative answer will be as rare as the proverbial cough in a carload.

The Association of American Railroads has estimtted that a train will be "handled" at the station every two minutes at the peak of arrivals for President Truman's Inauguration.

Sidney Kerl, superintendent of the Washington Terminal Co., says there has been nothing to match the expected swarm of travelers since the heyday—not without headaches—of railroading in 1945-1946.

Special Trains

At least 23 special trains already are scheduled to arrive here between Monday and Inauguration Day on Thursday, along with more than a score of cars added to regular trains, Kerl said.

He likened the prospect of this week's boom to the war years when Union Station handled about 4000 cars and engines every 24 hours.

Passenger travel has dropped about 50 per cent since then, and an average of 600 to 700 fewer cars have visited the Washington terminal daily, he said.

More than 400 sleeping cars already are scheduled to bring groups and individuals from every sections of the country to the inauguration. Of these, at least 260 will be parked on rail sidings to serve as "Pullman cities" for persons who have berths and no hotel rooms.

The Association of American Railroads estimates 5000 persons will sleep in the trains for one or more nights during the week.

Kerl stressed the fact that there exists a great "unknown quantity," the size of which will depend largely on weather conditions.

It is the number of persons who buy cash coach or Pullman tickets at the last minute, hop a train and come to town for the celebration.

Part of the "known quantity," however, is the entire cadet corps of the United States Military Academy which will be "housed" in eight special trains at Eckington and Jersey yards. The B&O and Pennsylvania Railroads will set up commissaries at the yards to provide food for the cadets, Kerl said.

Terminal's Preparations

To cope with the unprecedented numbers of visitors expected, Kerl said the terminal will establish two auxiliary parcel checkrooms at each end of the huge concourse. Another service counter for shipping baggage will be set up near the present facility, he said.

Meal service will be augmented by a new counter at the east end of the concourse, where the Inaugural Committee's housing and hospitality committee will have an information booth.

The terminal itself will employ additional train information booths and provide special accommodations for press, radio and television personnel.

Weatherman Delays Forecast For Inaugural

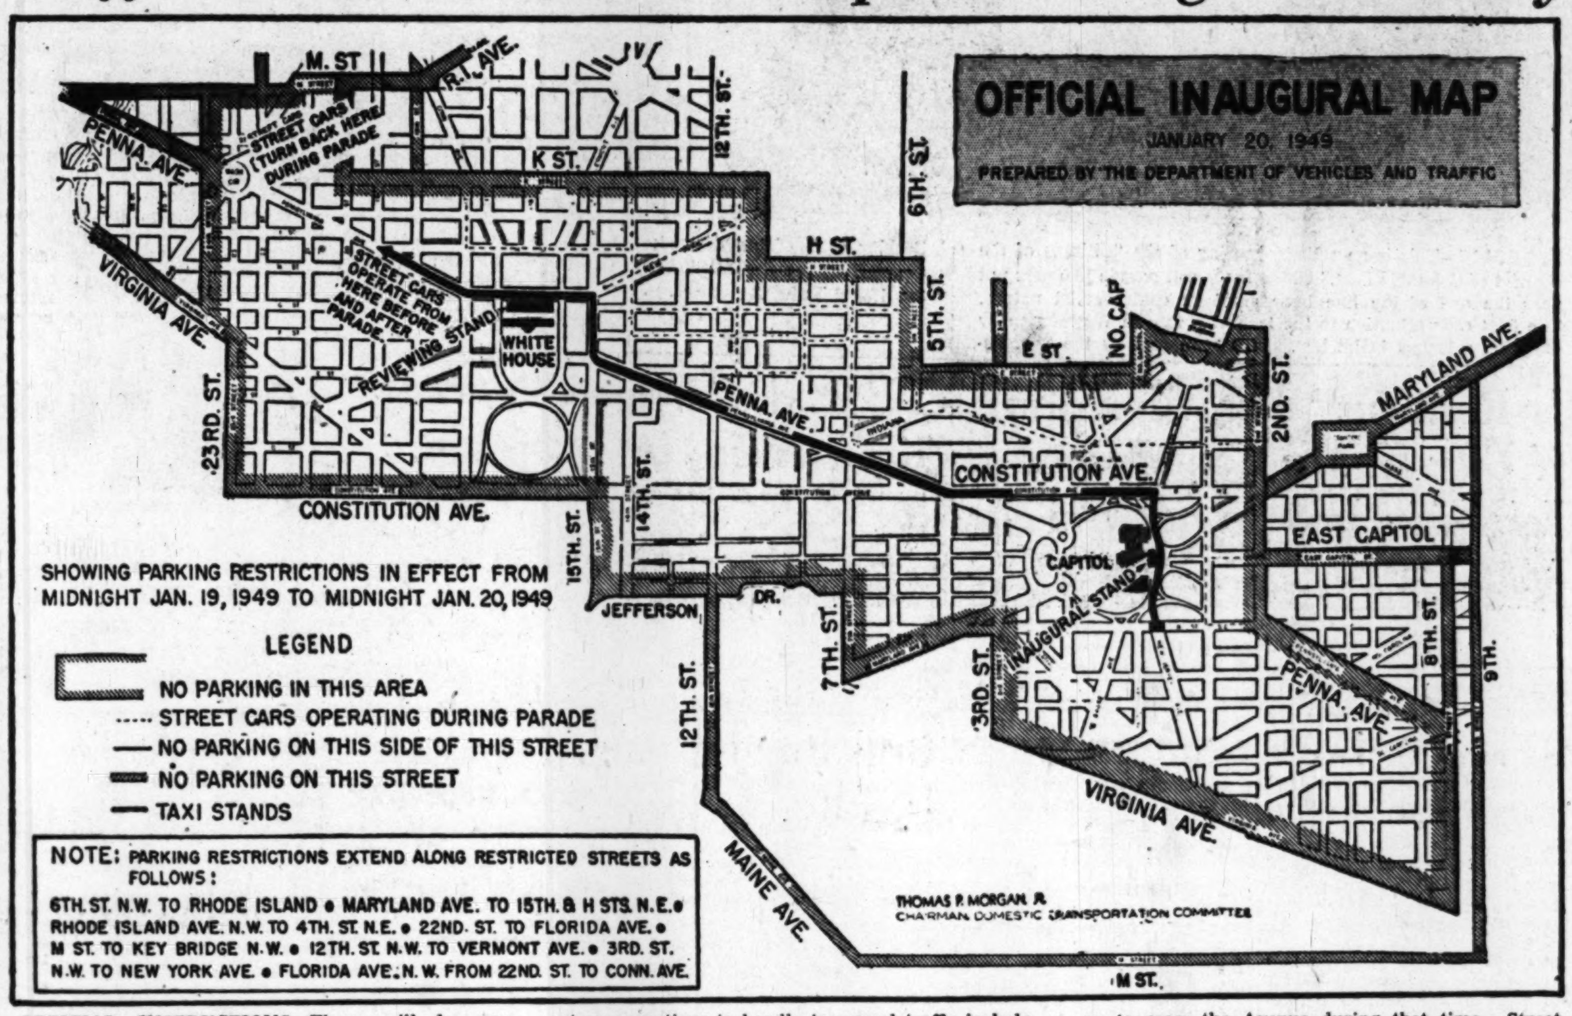
The weatherman yesterday just wouldn't say about next Thursday.

He's going out on that limb when he comes to it, which will be next Tuesday, when he makes a five-day forecast of weather, which will include what he expects us to have for President Truman's Inauguration.

Asked whether the blizzard now moving through the West might possibly arrive here at the same time as the Inauguration crowds, the weatherman said that Western blizzards are whittled down to cold snaps by the time they get East, and that we wouldn't get the West's blizzard, anyhow.

As to whether we'll get our own blizzard, or whether the skies will be blue for January 20, you can make your own book.

Traffic Restrictions to be Imposed Inauguration Day



OFFICIAL INSTRUCTIONS—There will be no parking in the enclosed area from midnight January 19 to midnight January 20. Any cars left on streets will be impounded. Other phases of elaborate preparations to handle inaugural traffic include police plans to close off Pennsylvania ave. entirely at 10 a. m. Thursday morning until after the parade. You'll have to go either to 23d st. nw. or to 8th st. se. to cross the Avenue during that time. Street cars will operate as far east as 18th st. on Pennsylvania ave. Thursday until the head of the parade reaches 7th st. nw.

Schools, Banks, Many Stores Closing Jan. 20

Greater Washington schools, banks and most of the larger stores will be closed next Thursday—Inauguration Day, it was announced yesterday.

All District schools will be closed both Thursday and Friday. The same holds true for Alexandria and Prince Georges County but schools in Arlington and Montgomery will be closed on Thursday only.

District courts will be closed as will be all courts in Municipal Court with the exception of one which will handle lockup cases starting at 9 a. m.—an hour earlier than usual

The following firms will close at 1 p. m., according to the Merchants and Manufacturers Association: F & W Grand Store, S. S. Kresge stores at 7th and E sts. nw., and 720 7th st. nw., G. C. Murphy Co., Neisner Bros., F. W. Woolworth Co. Coal yards will close at 11 a. m.

GHI Benefits Cover Jobless Of 65 or More

Persons past 65, even though jobless, may still continue to receive full benefits from membership in Group Hospitalization, Inc., if they were members before reaching that age, it was announced yesterday.

The new policy supersedes a former one which specified employment as a condition for those past 65 to get hospitalization benefits.

The number of persons affected under the ruling could not be estimated immediately but Joseph H. Himes, GHI president, said the new policy would not change current rates. It will not be retroactive.

About half the 375,000 Washington residents covered by Group Hospitalization are Government workers and their families.

In announcing the new policy, Himes said:

"We have always realized that the need for hospital care usually increases in later life, and we have wanted to protect subscribers against the financial burdens arising from illness and disability without regard for their age.

"But we also realized that before we could protect subscribers during their advanced years it was essential that GHI be able to assume the substantial additional responsibilities which will inevitably follow this action without jeopardizing in any way the protection of other subscribers. We are convinced this now can be done."

Soldier Found Hanged to Death At Walter Reed

An 18-year-old Army private was found hanged to death in the boiler room of a main building at Walter Reed General Hospital last night after he had been missing from his ward since 11 a. m. yesterday.

According to police Pvt. William J. Smith, formerly stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C., was admitted to the hospital on December 23 after he had been AWOL from Fort Jackson several times. He was placed in the ward for mentally disturbed patients.

Smith's body was found hanging by a piece of rope attached to an overhead pipe in the boiler room, by Henry Schroyer, an engineer at the hospital. He was pronounced dead by Maj. George Hayes, hospital physician.

15,000 Beds Are Listed in Private Homes

Hospitality definitely is not confined to the Deep South, the Inaugural Housing Bureau—with figures to prove it—reported yesterday.

Mrs. John C. McClintock, chairman, said Washington householders had made about 15,000 beds available at "extremely reasonable prices" for persons caught without accommodations for the inaugural festivities.

One committee official said there hasn't been "one case in 1000" in which volunteer room renters asked unreasonable prices. Rates are averaging from $1.50 to $5.00 a person a night, Mrs. McClintock said.

"There hasn't been one example of attempted 'gouging,'" she said.

Half of Rooms Taken

Rooms listed for individual visitors at the Housing Bureau, 509 14th st. nw., are altogether noncommercial. They are provided entirely by private homeowners.

The bureau switchboard was so clogged with calls offering rooms this weekend that officials began taking only the name and telephone number.

It was estimated that about half of the listed rooms have been taken, a fact which committee officials said assures many visitors of getting rooms without advance notice. They urged that requests be made as soon as possible, however.

To apprise incoming parties of available accommodations, the committee has established suburban information centers on main roads leading to Washington. Periodic announcements giving their location will be broadcast over local radio stations.

Four Branch Centers

They will be situated at 313 N. Glebe rd., Arlington; 201 S. Washington st., Alexandria; 7240 Wissonsin ave., Bethesda, and the Varsity Grill, College Park, Md.

Another information booth will be set up at Union Station, where train passengers may make arrangements for rooms directly with bureau representatives.

About 150 members of the War Information Service Alumnae, whose activities in Washington were familiar to thousands of servicemen during World War II, will assist in functions of the housing and hospitality committee.

They will man booths at 17 hotels from 10 a. m. until 1[illegible] p. m. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday to tell visitors what to see and where and how to go.

The housing bureau will remain open from 10 a. m. until at least 6 p. m. today, as well as during the next three days of this week. Representatives will be on hand Inauguration Day, too, to help latecomers find accommodations.

Small House Offered For Week at $350 Rent

By the United Press

Want a centrally located, completely redecorated two-bedroom house for Inauguration Week?

See Mrs. Jouett Shouse, wife of a Washington attorney and former chairman of the Democratic National Committee. She has one for rent for $350 plus an estimated $50 for utilities. Mrs. Shouse says she will turn the rent over to the Gen. Lucius Clay Fund to aid German children through the distribution of CARE packages.

The house, 1916 F st. nw., is one-half block from the new State Department Building. Mrs. Shouse describes it as "ideal for three."

Gala Concert Seat Sellout Revealed

The Inaugural Gala Concert, to be held in the National Guard Armory Wednesday night, has been completely sold out, it was announced yesterday.

Carter T. Barron, chairman of the Parade and Special Events Committee, said every one of the 5300 seats for the greatest "one night stand" ever staged by the American theater in Washington had been sold, "and if we had twice as many we could have sold them."

Mail orders, still pouring in from all over the country, were being returned unfilled yesterday and the public seat sale scheduled to open Monday noon has been canceled. No tickets will be available at Inaugural Headquarters in the Tariff Building, 7th and E sts. nw., or elsewhere. Ticket prices ranged from $2.50 to $10 each.

Trumans Head Guest List

President Truman and Vice President-elect Barkley and their official families head the last of distinguished persons attending the 8:30 p. m. program.

Leaders in the social, political, military and financial worlds will occupy the other 120 boxes in the Armory, which is located at 2001 East Capitol st.

More than 700 theatrical artists and instrumentalists will participate in the program, scheduled to run about two and one half hours.

In the field of classical music, Lawrence Tibbett, Feruccio Togliavini, Dorothy Maynor and Lucy Munroe are among those to appear.

Among those participating in the field of popular entertainment are: George Jessel and Melvyn Douglas, masters of ceremony; Gene Kelly, Jane Froman, the Dancing De Marcos, Lum and Abner, Abbott and Costello, Alice Faye, Phil Harris, Lena Horne, Joan Davis, Margaret O'Brien, Edgar Bergen, Gene Autry, Justin Laurie Singers, Washington Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing, and others.

Many "Name" Bands

Among the orchestras and bands that have been announced are those of Phil Spitalny and Lionel Hampton.

The armed forces will be reprensented by the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine bands.

The National Symphony Orchestra will play under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler, founder and former director of the organization.

The orchestra will appear about 11 p. m., following a concert from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. at Constitution Hall where it will be led by guest conductor Georges Enesco, the Rumanian conductor and composer. Guest soloist at the Constitution Hall concert will be Erica Morini, violinist.

There will be 100 patrolmen on duty in the Armory's parking lot for the gala concert and the Inaugural Ball the following night. The parking area, free to motorists, will be floodlighted, and a loudspeaker system is being installed

General Paul to Join Red Cross as Adviser

Lieut. Gen. Willard S. Paul (retired) will join the American National Red Cross headquarters staff about March 15 as consultant and special adviser, Basil O'Connor, Red Cross president, announced yesterday.

Paul has a distinguished record for his work in establishing the Army Ground Force's supply system after Pearl Harbor and as commander of the Twenty-sixth Infantry Division. He retired December 31 as director of personnel and administration for the Department of the Army.

Capital Prepares to Handle Immense Inaugural Crowd

events: 25 State societies are holding social functions of some variety. There will be exhibits, dances, the big Inaugural Gala and Inaugural Ball, dinners, receptions, teas, fireworks—the works.

The Inaugural Committee which, under the chairmanship of Melvin D. Hildreth, has been working at top pace since early December, has wound up the major phase of its preparatory work. Latest word is that most events sponsored by the committee are now either complete or near sellouts.

With Government workers almost assured of a four-day long weekend, beginning Thursday, police are making every effort to keep vehicular traffic out of the congested downtown area during the 24-hour period in which the inauguration takes place.

Streetcars Stop at 10 A. M.

Streetcars along the parade route will stop running at 10 a. m. on Thursday, but visitors and residents who use public transportation can be assured of getting within one or two blocks of the line of march. There won't be any place to park a car downtown except on a lot, and some of these are telling their regular customers that their regular rates won't apply for January 20.

Maryland and Virginia police have been asked to keep as much traffic as possible out of Washington on Inauguration Day. Motorists will be urged to park as far away as Laurel, Rockville, Alexandria and Arlington. The Capital Transit Co. has promised pick-up bus service to outlying points.

Inauguration Week will formally begin today, with devotional services in all Washington's churches and synagogues. At President Truman's own church, the First Baptist, Dr. Edward H. Pruden will give a rededication message, and the choir will sing patriotic selections.

Ministers also will take part in the opening, at 1 p. m. today, of the Freedom Train, at tracks at 14th and D sts. sw. It will be the last public appearance of the train, which bears 127 of the Nation's most historic documents.

The Nation's leaders in government, business and society will begin to arrive in the Capital tomorrow to attend some of the events which lead up to the "big day"—Thursday.

High mark of the preinaugural fetsivities will be the gala celebration on Wednesday night at the National Guard Armory.

On Thursday, President Truman will be given the oath of office at 12 noon by Chief Justice Fred Vinson in stands erected on the east front of the Capitol.

He is expected to make an address ranging from 15 to 20 minutes following his inaugural. He will walk to the office of the Secretary of the Senate, Leslie Biffle, for a buffet lunch, then will take his place in the President's section, to be driven to the White House.

At the White House, he will review the parade—official starting time 1:30—for an estimated 2½ hours. At 5 p. m. he is due at the National Gallery of Art, where invited guests will attend the President's reception.

At 10 p. m., the Inaugural Ball, at the National Guard Armory, will get under way. President Truman, his wife and daughter, Margaret, are slated to appear for the ball, to which guests will be admitted only by invitation.

Parade Day's Big Point

For the general public, the big point of the day will be the parade, more than thirty bands and more than forty floats will participate in the parade. There will be 40,000 marchers.

Marching armed forces units will cover a distance length of 4000 yards. The parade will proceed at a rate of 3.4 miles per hour along the traditional route.

More than 1500 boys and girls, members of the Washington high school cadet corps and Boy and Girl Scouts, will serve as ushers and ticket takers, and will be detailed to first aid stations along the line of march.

A "sky umbrella" composed of Air Force bombers, jet-propelled fighter planes and "Flying Boxcars" will blanket the parade air route.

Perhaps the most to-be-looked-for unit in the parade will be the steampropelled calliope, representing Kentucky, which is scheduled to signify the end of the parade.

When it is all over, Pennsylvania Avenue will be ready for the street cleaners, and most Washingtonians will be ready for bed.

Seats at Capitol Not Specifically Reserved

No one, not even Senators and Representatives, will have specifically reserved seats at President Truman's swearing-in ceremony at the Capitol.

That was the word issued last night by Leslie L. Biffle who heads up events at Capital Plaza.

"Many holders of these tickets," Biffle said, "have the mistaken idea the numbers appearing on the tickets are seat designations." Certain sections are reserved for various groups of spectators, but the specific seats, for everyone, are on a first-come basis."

The numbers on the tickets, Biffle explained, are merely a counting device for the Inaugural Committee.

Bridge Finals Are Entered By 32 Pairs

By Marian Barre

Out of 60 pairs, 32 qualified for the open finals last night in the northern Virginia bridge tournament at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

Top qualifying scores went to the following partnerships: Mrs. Thomas Hamlin and William Million, J. G. Stone and R. H. Skinner, Mrs. Margaret Hamilton and Arthur Schlesinger, Ralph Spritzer and Fred L. Karpin, all of Washington, except Mrs. Hamilton and Schlesinger, who are from Baltimore and are defending champions.

In the consolation section, 34 partnerships competed. Both games were in play late last night.

The mixed pairs championship concluded late Friday night was captured by Miss Mary Hellen and Charles Shapiro of Baltimore, who defeated Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lingley of Arlington by half a point. Mrs. A. P. Stockvis and Pierre Billard of Arlington finished third.

Mrs. H. C. White and Paul Kibler of Washington were fourth.

The open team of four, concluding event of the tournament, goes into play at 1 p. m. today. All teams will play through both rounds without eliminations.

FBI Man to Address Mount Vernon P-TA

The regular monthly meeting of the Mount Vernon Elementary School P-TA will be held on Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium, corner of Mount Ida and Mount Vernon aves. The guest speaker of the evening will be George Carroll of the FBI. He will speak on juvenile delinquency.

Bill to Hike Salary of D.C. Workers Gets 'Hill' Priority

Rep. Miller Says He Will 'Insist' Measure Be First Job of Committee

A ranking Democratic member of the House Civil Service Committee last night said he would "insist" that his committee's first legislative job be a $330 pay boost for District classified workers.

The shot in the arm to the city's 7600 employes under Civil Service classification came from Representative George P. Miller (D., Calif.), who has filed a bill to give them the same pay hike granted Federal workers last July.

With D. C. pay legislation on the Senate side presently tied in with the bill granting increases to 223 top Federal office holders, Miller's pledge for independent action now appeared the fastest and best hope for the local government employes.

The Senate Democratic leadership last week dropped provisions for District pay increases from the presidential salary bill in a move to win final passage before the Inauguration Day deadline.

"There was no justice, morally or financially," said Miller, "for denying D. C. workers the same pay raise given to Federal employes. It's a blot on this country and the Eightieth Congress.

"It's an injustice that should be corrected at the earliest possible moment," Miller added.

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), another member of the Civil Service group and sponsor of a pay raise bill covering both classified and unclassified District workers voiced strong support to his colleague's move.

"While I favor my bill, which also takes care of the city's 11,0000 unclassified workers, over the Miller proposal, I certainly shall not put the brakes on his bill," Davis said.

The broader Davis bill desinged to grant a retroactive $330 pay raise to all District employes except the superintendent of schools, is before the House District Committee.

Biggest roadblock in the path of the District of Columbia pay hike still remains the unsolved problem of where funds will be found to finance it. Raises for classified workers alone will cost two million dollars.

Apartment Project Set For Rosslyn

A multi-story apartment hotel is being planned in the Rosslyn section of Arlington, the Arlington County Board learned at its meeting yesterday.

Attorney Lawrence Douglas, representing the unidentified hotel sponsors before the board, asked that an amendment to the zooning law be made to permit construction of the projected building.

He asked that any apartment hotel building more than 90 feet in height built on land within 2000 feet of the Potomac River be exempted from zoning laws regulating front and side yard dimensions, and lot area per living unit.

The board agreed to advertise the proposed amendment, and set February 12, 1949, for a public hearing.

Douglas said the proposed apartment hotel would be built by a New York firm on 16 acres of land in Rosslyn now zoned industrial. Even if the amendment passes, the builder will have to obtain the board's special approval to begin construction on the site.

In a letter to the county board, Albert A. Carretta, member of the Arlington Public Utilities Commission, reported rate analysts had found that the Rosslyn Gas Co.'s "costs of distribution and rates charged to consumers . . . are among the highest in the entire country."

Rate specialists J. Paul Blundon and Harold Snyder are conducting the gas rate study at county board request. Yesterday's letter to the board was an interim report.

If the final survey bears out the tentative conclusions reached in yesterday's letter, the board has indicated it will ask for a hearing on the gas company's rates before the Virginia State Corporation Commission.

Trumans Greet Early Arrivals at Missouri Dance

A personal greeting from the President of the United States and the First Lady was the reward of Missourians who came early to the Missouri Society dance last night.

President and Mrs. Truman, who arrived at 9:30 p. m. to attend the society's preinaugural dance in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, remained for 40 minutes exchanging "hellos" with friends from home.

In another section of the Shoreham Hotel, the main ballroom, the New York State Society played host at a preinaugural dance to the University of Rochester alumni. The University of Rochester banner and the New York State flag were prominently displayed.

Lloyd A. Schermerhorn, president of the local Rochester Alumni Association, and Mrs. Schermerhorn were the guests of honor.

Area News In Brief

Post Square Finally Free Of Starlings

The birds have flown Post Square Park and, since they are starlings, there is no tear shed, no requiem.

What caused the welcome exodus is a mystery to William A. Xanten, District Superintendent of Sanitation, and to John W. Batson, Superintendent of Trees and Parking.

"It might be that some one put a couple of owls up," Xanten speculated, explaining that owls and starlings get along about like Hatfield and McCoy.

But while a chorus of howls had long been in evidence against the pests no owls could be discerned.

Nor did Batson offer any clew to the mystery.

"Maybe someone shot one of them," he conjectured. "That would be likely to make them leave."

Startlings and other birds are protected under District law from being killed. This law has blocked past moves to get rid of them.

In the meantime the feathered pests continue to congregate at the District Building and other downtown structures.

For the time being at least, cars parked in the Post Square area are safe from them. And as one motorist put it, "I hope they don't drop in again soon."

Jane Sparks a 'Riot'

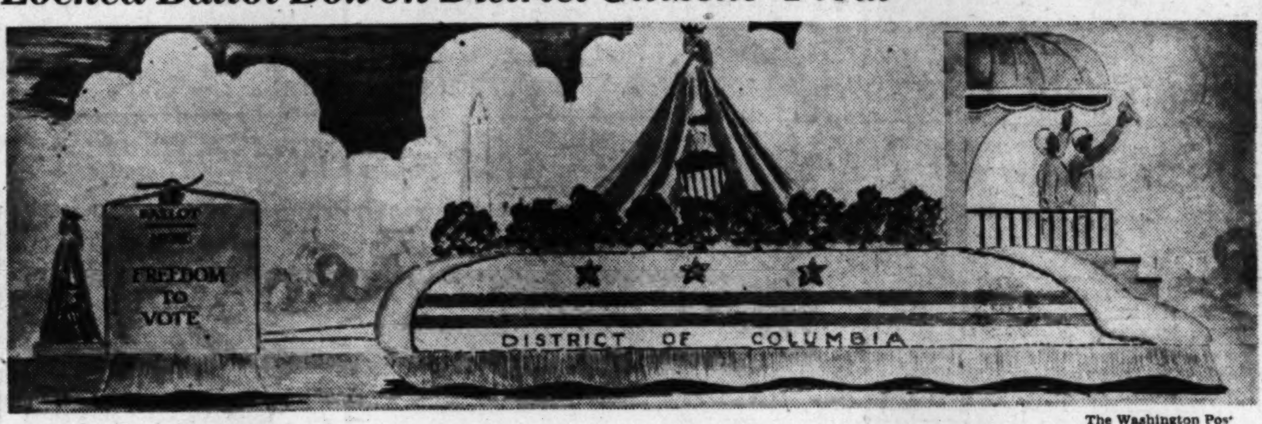
A detail of eight policemen was called to the Capitol Theater yesterday afternoon when some 300 youngsters stormed the front of the theater and the alley behind it, hoping to get autographs from Jane Powell, actress and singer.

Some of the children waited for hours at the stage door, and a chant of "We Want Powell!" filled the allew until Lieut. Thomas J. Rasmusen and the seven other policemen persuaded the eoger group that Miss Powell wasn't coming out. Between shows, she was rehearsing for the Inaugural gala in which she will appear, a theater publicity man explained.

Spoiled Food Condemned

Twenty-one condemnations for a total of 16,838 pounds of spoiled foodstuffs were made last week by the District Health Department food inspectors. In all, 1415 establishments were checked and two cases were brought to Municipal Court resulting in fines and forfeitures of $25. Squash and carrots were the two largest condemnations.

Locked Ballot Box on District Citizens' Float



The Washington Post

SYMBOLIC—This is an artist's drawing of the "Citizens of the District of Columbia float," which Inaugural parade planners put near the end of the line because of its controversial nature. The float calls attention to the lack of a vote in Washington by dragging a locked ballot box. It is sponsored by the Truman-Barkley Club of the District; the District Democratic Central Committee; the Central Suffrage Conference and the Washington Home Rule Committee. Jody Miller, "Miss Washington," will represent Columbia

Ex-Resident Of City Hangs Herself in Jail

A former Washington woman, identified by police as the wife of a Treasury Department employe, was found hanged in a Berkeley, Calif., jail cell yesterday after a series of tragic events.

Police identified her as Mrs. Alice C. Hopkins, 40, wife of James Hopkins who reportedly was awaiting transfer to Washington for a promotion in the Treasury Inspection Department.

Police related this series of events leading up to Mrs. Hopkins' death:

She was arrested Friday on a charge of being intoxicated in an automobile.

She was taken to jail, and her husband was contacted by telephone and asked to take her home. He said his wife had started drinking after an operation and was hard to control and he thought it better that she be left in jail overnight.

Policewoman Jacqueline Berry said she later telephoned Hopkins at his wife's request and heard Mrs. Hopkins ask him to bail her out of jail.

Making the rounds of the cells later the policewoman found Mrs. Hopkins' body. She apparently had torn a slip of cloth from a mattress cover, tied a noose around a crossbar in the cell and hanged herself.

In a scrawled note was this message:

"You don't know I've gone through a thousand hells tonight."

When taken into custody, Mrs. Hopkins gave her name as Alice Dalton and the address of the home of her mother, Mrs. Nellie E. Dalton, widow of a doctor.

Calvin Brown Found Dead In Berwyn

Calvin Wilbur Brown, 77, of Grand Manan, New Brunswick, Canada, was found dead yesterday a short distance from the Berwyn, Md., home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Bewley, where he had been a visitor since last November.

According to members of his family Mr. Brown was stricken with a heart attack as he returned to the house after having gone with three of his grandchildren to a nearby highway to meet his son, James S. Brown of Beltsville, with whom the children planned to spend the weekend. His body, lying face downwards in a shallow stream, was discovered by his son-in-law.

A retired salesman, Mr. Brown was a native of New Brunswick, but he and his wife were frequent visitors to their son and daughter in nearby Maryland. For several years they had spent their winters here, returning to Canada for the summer months.

Besides his wife and the son and daughter living here, Mr. Brown is survived by another son, Royce C. Brown, and a daughter, Mrs. Edmund Stanley, both of Grand Manan, and seven grandchildren. Arrangements for the funeral, which will be held here, have not been completed.

Col. H. A. Gardner, Retired, Dies at Home in Arlington

Col. Herbert Allen Gardner, retired, 62, of 3175 21st. N. Arlington, Va., a member of the Army Quartermaster Corps for 30 years and veteran of both wars, died unexpectedly at his home yesterday.

Colonel Gardner retired in January, 1947, and had lived in Arlington for the last 11 years of his life.

Last summer, Colonel Gardner bought a 250-acre island in Mahone Bay, near Chester, Nova Scotia, where legend had it that pirate loot was buried.

He made a hobby out of treasure hunting, and searched his island with a war surplus mine detector after his retirement.

In addition to his wife, Mrs. Ruth Gardner, Colonel Gardner is survived by three brothers, Col. Everett and Russell Gardner of Indianapolis and Capt. E. R. Gardner, USN, stationed at Northwestern University, Chicago.

U. S. Eyes Europe 'Flu' Epidemic

By the United Press

Public health authorities were alerted last night to watch for any signs that an influenza epidemic sweeping Europe has invaded this country.

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, said the European epidemic "may reach this country" but added "there is no indication" so far that it has.

What worries health authorities most about the European epidemic is that they do not know whether the viruses responsible for it are similar to those for which vaccines have been developed in this country.

Mild in Nature

"Unlike the disastrous epidemic of 1918," Scheele said, "the present (European) epidemic is mild in character and is causing few deaths."

This country, he continued, has had "no significant outbreaks of influenza" thus far this winter.

"In fact," he said, "the incidence of this disease reported during the past half year is lower than that reported for the corresponding period in every other year since 1945.

"The figure for the period from July 31, 1948, to January 8, 1949, is only 36,278 cases reported, as compared with 362,248 cases three years ago. Two years ago it was 32,975; one year ago, 36,696."

The Health Service and the Army, Navy and Air Force maintain an influenza information center at the National Institutes of Health to keep "in constant touch with the situation both here and abroad," Scheele said. They have set up an inter-agency committee to conduct a world-wide program for controlling the disease.

Cablegrams from European authorities reported as of January 13 that the European epidemic had hit Italy, Austria, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Czechoslovakia.

Dr. Norman H. Topping, chairman of the inter-agency committee, said science hopes to control influenza through prompt identification of new strains as they appear and incorporating them in vaccines.

Old Masters

Art Tour Nets $190,000 for Children's Aid

Rembrandt, Rubens and Botticelli never knew centuries ago as they labored with oil and canvas that their paintings would some day help to clothe the children of a war-torn Germany.

But their art, with that of other old masters in Europe, has raised a fund of about $190,000 to buy clothing and bedding for the children in the United States zone of Germany, Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall announced yesterday.

The fund has resulted from a tour through the United States of approximately 150 of the 202 famous paintings that were brought here for safe keeping after being discovered by forces of the Third Army in a German salt mine.

Interest in the paintings was so great that after they were viewed by nearly a million persons here in the National Gallery of Art, gallery officials, after an agreement between United States and German leaders, packed most of the works and sent them on a Nation-wide tour. An additional 710,000 persons saw the art while it was on tour, Army officials estimated.

The pictures are currently on exhibit in Los Angeles and will be shown in St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Toledo. The tour will end after the first week in April, the Army announced, and the pictures will be shipped back to Germany.

Reduction in Florida Orange Shipment Urged

Lakeland, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—An immediate reduction in Florida orange shipments to not more than 1800 cars a week was recommended today by Marvin H. Walker, general manager of the Florida Citrus Commission.

"Even 1600 cars next week would be enough," said Walker.

We will throw away price benefits of the California freeze if we supply markets with too much fruit right now," he reported.

Derailment Victims Got D. C. Blood

Five of the 524½ pints of blood distributed by the Red Cross Regional Blood Center here last week were used in treating persons injured in derailment of the Orange Blossom Special train at Milford, Va., Monday.

The blood was already on hand at Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg, where the 26 persons were rushed for treatment, Miss Ellen Knox, chairman of the blood recruitment committee for Fredericksburg, said.

First visited by the Red Cross Bloodmobile last October 5, Fredericksburg is one of the many communities in nearby States served by the Washington Regional Blood Center.

Of the 524½ pints distributed during the past week, 364½ went to District hospitals and 160 pints to hospitals in Virginia, West Vrginia and Maryland.

$60 in Shoe Solves $1087 Store Theft

When two detectives played a hunch and asked Chester Field Turner to remove his shoes and socks yesterday, they solved the mystery of $1087.91 stolen from the safe of a G st. store.

Turner was embarrassed and police were elated to find three crisp 20-dollar bills stuck to the sole of his left foot.

Detective Sergts. D. J. Slattery and Benjamin D. Clarke persuaded Turner to show them where he had hidden the rest of the money and checks stolen from the Brooks Store, 1109 G st. nw.

Under a board covered by a pile of coal in the store basement, Turner showed police the rest of the loot—all but two dollars.

Police had received an accurate estimate of the missing money from Store Manager David Stambler, but Turner insisted for almost an hour he had stolen only $1085.91 instead of $1087.91.

Finally, however, he admitted he had spent the two bucks on the number pool, 25 cents a day for eight days on No. 751.

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson held him under $5000 bond, charged with grand larceny.

Twenty persons had access to the safe, Stambler first told police, who uncovered no clews in a morning of questioning.

Returning for an afternoon session, they decided to concentrate on Turner, for he had worked there for only two weeks, and it was his job to lift heavy file cabinets.

The missing money bag had once rested next to the file cabinets.

Turner is 46 and lives at 713 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Britain Loads a Tinder Box in Red Sea Village

By Frank Gervasi

Veteran foreign correspondent specializing in Mediterranean affairs; author of "To Whom Palestine?," and for the past three years Washington correspondent for a national weekly

UNLESS you are a more than casual student of Middle Eastern affairs, the chances are overwhelming that you never heard of Aqaba. It is a small village of mud-brick dwellings and some 3000 normally peaceful Arab fisher folk who seine the blue gulf of the same name at the head of the Red Sea. It lies under a hot sun at the southwestern-most corner of Trans-Jordan, where that territory borders on the Negeb, the region awarded by the United Nations to Israel in the partition of Palestine. You may hear and read much about Aqaba in days ahead.

It was at Aqaba that King Solomon once smelted iron. There the ancient caravan routes from the Holy Land and Egypt converged on their way to the Orient. And there, the other day, the British landed a fully armed force of upwards of 1000 men in an action which may put Aqaba in the headlines for some time to come. The act could be the prelude to a new war in the Middle East and of a larger struggle later. The immediate antagonists would be Britain and new-born Israel. Their struggle, if it eventuates, might involve the whole Middle East and, not inconceivably, the whole world.

End of One 'War'

A WEEK ago it looked as though a generation of strife between Arabs and Jews over Palestine—culminating in a costly, bloody, year-long war—had ended. Israel had achieved a decisive military victory over Moslem armies which sought to prevent creation of the Jewish national homeland within the territorial limits laid down by the United Nations partition plan approved November 29, 1947. Israel's Arab enemies had either indicated a willingness to make peace or were, as in the case of Egypt, actually negotiating an armistice under the watchful eye of Dr. Ralph Bunche, acting head of the U. N. Mediation Mission, on the Island of Rhodes.

But if the British have their way, peace in the Middle East, strategic and oil-rich land bridge between West and East, is not to be. Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin has sought to justify the landing at Aqaba by saying that King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan had invoked the Anglo-Trans-Jordan treaty of 1947, asking assistance in defending his territory's sovereignty against the Jews.

This "justification" must be weighed in the light of these facts: (1) Britain tried and failed to induce Egypt similarly to invoke the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of 1936. (2) Abdullah had indicated his willingness to make peace with the Jews. (3) Abdullah was put in power by His Brittanic Majesty's government and can hardly be considered a free agent. (4) A resolution of the U. N. Security Council of May 29, 1948, called upon all interested governments to refrain from putting more troops into the fight while the cease-fire order was in effect and efforts toward mediation and pacification went forward. But first, some background.

Egyptian Force Trapped

THE British landing at Aqaba came as the immediate climax of a series of military acts which the Israeli could only interpret as hostile. On October 14 the Jews began an offensive to clear all Egyptians from the disputed Negeb. The U. N. had authorized the Israelis to send food supplies to several Jewish elements in forward positions on Negeb territory which they held when the cease-fire order came. The Egyptians shot up the Jewish convoys. The Jews couldn't supply the forward areas by air and resorted to arms, contending that the Egyptians had already violated the cease-fire anyhow.

The Egyptians then held the brief Negeb coastline and a pocket at Faluja. Just as the Israeli forces were about to wipe out the Egyptian brigade at Faluja, came a U. N. request—although not an order—for Jews and Arabs to return to their October 14 positions. This the Jews, in effect, straddled by expressing a willingness to withdraw all excess troops except for such settlement police and frontier guards as were needed to prevent an Egyptian counter-offensive from catching the Israeli unaware. Dr. Bunche accepted the Israeli offer.

But, at the insistence of the British, the Security Council on November 16 ordered Egypt and Israel to negotiate peace. The Egyptians refused and the situation remained militarily static until, in December, the Jews themselves initiated bilateral negotiations with the Egyptians. The latter were willing to dicker provided the Jews released the trapped Egyptian brigade at Faluja. This the Jews agreed to do only if all Egyptian forces withdrew from the Negeb. As of December 15 the situation was critical, with the Egyptians refusing either to negotiate or withdraw.

Brief Surge Into Egypt

SINCE Egyptian military forces remained on Israeli soil, the Jews could only assume that these were present with hostile intent. On December 22 the Jews began an offensive to throw their enemy out of the Negeb and back into that Egypt whence Moses led the Jews to Palestine.

The momentum carried the Jews forward for about 30 miles into Egypt itself. At one point, in fact, the Israelis—whom the Arab world and many non-Arab seers expected to be defeated in a "holy war" and possibly exterminated—were only 87 air-line miles from the Nile. After securing their Negeb frontier by raiding airfields and other Egyptian installations in the vicinity,

See ISRAEL, Page 6, Column 1.

Britain "solved" its Palestine problem only eight months ago by withdrawing upon the expiration of its mandate. The solution apparently was temporary. The photo shows lorries loaded with the goods of British civilian employes, leaving Jerusalem for the evacuation port of Haifa late last spring, just ahead of their troops

Koreans Not Gushing Over U. S. Aid

By Allen Raymond

Mr. Raymond is Far Eastern correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune

TOKYO, Jan. 15.—Whatever remains of civilization in Korea is there by grace of the American Army and the American people. If the Army pulls out entirely before training and equipping an adequate defense force for the new South Korean Republic, all civilization that would be recognizable to the average citizen of the Western world will vanish quickly. So will the people in Korea who have believed in America and its institutions. They will be liquidated.

I would give little for the life of Dr. Syngman Rhee, the nation's first President. Gen. Lee Bum Suk, Prime Minister and Defense Minister, might live a little longer and emerge as a dictator in a state that would be indistinguishable from the other slave states of this earth—except its subjects would be poorer and more ignorant. When the American soldier embarks from that barren peninsula of Korea, a long night will befall it.

We walked into Korea in August, 1945, under the illusion that we could work with Communist Russia to give liberty to a land long dominated by Japanese dictatorship. We had an argument with Russia that there should be a trusteeship over that country till the people within it were fitted for freedom, which they never had known in all history, and for which they were not at all prepared. Then came the so-called "cold war," which today is pretty hot in south Korea—resulting in massacres of women and children. Against its will the country was divided, and its new-found freedom headed toward anarchy.

Under pressure from clamorous Koreans, drunk with joy at release from Japan, both the United States and Russia abandoned the plan for temporary trusteeship, and each created a nation after its own image. The Russian job was fairly easy.

It takes a people of some political maturity and "know-how" to govern themselves by parliamentary compromise, under principles of law, with protection for minorities and individual human rights. The Koreans are no such people.

A Creature of Japan

ONLY a small minority, mostly trained by Christian missionaries of diverse faiths, have even the faintest conception of human dignity. Life is cheap in Korea, as it always has been. In the average Korean, there is only the beginning of a social consciousness, extending beyond the immediate tie of family existence. A bitter struggle for a livelihood has absorbed all his energies for centuries.

If it wasn't actually instigated by the United States administrators, the desire to learn has at least been well fanned by one small, almost forgotten corps of the American Army.

That corps is the Twenty-fourth Corps, which wears a pure white heart with a border of blue as a shoulder patch. Its commander during three arduous years in Korea—up to the day of south Korean independence—was Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge. A blunt, plain, honest and kindly combat soldier—no diplomat and no statesman—the general accomplished a great deal for Korea while he was there.

His forces evacuated the 700,000 Japanese who had run the country with brutal exploitation. They stopped an incipient Communist revolution which was all set to go, since the Communists were the only organized, politically conscious force in the country when the Americans walked in.

Passed On to People

THE Twenty-fourth Corps ruled south Korea by military government for a year. Then it formed an interim government, partly elected and partly appointed. Finally it supervised, under the eyes of United Nations observers, the first free national election conducted by secret ballot which Korea had ever known. In the election the voters had their choice of numerous candidates from numerous parties for a legislature which today is master of south Korea.

After a long delay—one which has been much criticized—the Twenty-fourth Corps military government, with civilian advisers, put through a land reform program within that portion of Korean farm land which had been owned by the Japanese. The reform created 500,000 farm-owning families out of tenants who had been paying 60 per cent of their crops to the landlords for the right to till the soil. Under the farm purchase plan, erstwhile tenants are today paying 20 per cent of their crops to the state under a 15-year purchase plan. At the end of this period the title to their land is to be theirs. Another 5 per cent of the crops goes to the state in taxes.

The American program, incidentally, outdoes the vaunted farm reform in the Soviet north, where charges average about 30 per cent of the crops and where only members of the Communist Party may have a share in land to which the state and the state alone has title. By cutting down the legal rent on property still owned by Korean landlords to 30 per cent of the crop, this American land reform in the south is also turning such capital as exists in Korea into commerce and industry, where it is more needed.

Miracle in Education

BESIDES creating a new farm-owning population and ending the economic exploitation of tenant farmers, the greatest job done by the American Army during its stay in south Korea has been in education. When the Army moved into Korea, it was estimated that only 21 per cent of the population had ever attended school. The remaining 79 per cent could neither read nor write.

Under American direction, the number of Korean children in elementary schools has increased from 1,500,000 to 2,225,000, the number of Korean teachers from 13,700 to about 35,000, and the number of elementary schools from 2694 to 3442. About one million adults are today attending classes in reading and writing. It is believed that the literacy rate has jumped from 21 to 83 per cent of the population.

The Americans have published 14 million textbooks in the simple Korean alphabet or hangul established nine normal schools for the training of teachers and raised the number of agricultural high schools from 60 to 120. But Koreans still have a great deal to learn before they can even know what goes on in their own country.

Another important American accomplishment in south Korea is the restoration of the fertility of its soil. The country now stands a fair chance of being able to feed itself by next year, and with a little further help should even be an exporter of food in 1950.

Before the war, the south Korean rice crop averaged about 3,750,000 tons a year because the Japanese fed the soil with about 102,700 tons of fertilizer annually. But by the time the American Army arrived in 1945, the rice crop was down to an annual 2,500,000 tons, and there were at least three million more persons to feed than in 1941.

We brought in more fertilizer than ever, so that the 1948 rice crop has reached about 3,500,000 tons and will be more in 1949. At the same time, the American people staved off starvation by the outright gift of food.

Grateful for What?

DOES the average Korean appreciate all this? He certainly does not. He doesn't even know about it, in many cases, since he never reads or hears a radio. Among that portion of the Korean population open to propaganda, the Russian story that American imperialists are out to exploit him just as the Japanese did is widely believed.

A newspaperman's check on the man-in-the-street in Seoul disclosed last November that about every other man questioned wanted the Americans to get out of Korea as quickly as possible—just at the time when Dr. Rhee's legislature was asking American troops to remain. Koreans need education.

The start which United States educators have given the country in schooling well may be our greatest contribution. It certainly should be, if the teachings are carried on when we leave—but this is doubtful. Already the spoilsmen of a new political government are grafting in Seoul. A German-trained Minister of Education is centralizing the new school system and preaching supernationalism.

In the field of restoring south Korea's industrial production and foreign trade, the American accomplishment has not been so impressive.

See KOREA, Page 6, Column 2.

Our New Policy Jolts the Japanese

By Hessell Tiltman

Mr. Tiltman, author of many books on Pacific affairs, is chief Far Eastern correspondent for the London Daily Herald

TOKYO, Jan. 15.—General MacArthur's occupation of Japan has changed emphasis again.

For almost a year—since the Draper Mission recommended that the United States take steps to speed Japan's economic recovery—the prime motivation within GHQ at Tokyo has been the rebuilding of Japan as the workshop of Asia and a pro-American outpost in the Far Pacific.

Following recent developments in China, which threaten to result in a Communist-inspired "New Order" in East Asia, to that objective has been added another—the fashioning, by MacArthur directive, of a docile, disciplined and united Japanese nation.

Following receipt at Tokyo of Washington's 9-point plan for the stabilization of Japan's economy, General MacArthur addressed to Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida a strong letter, condemning "improvidential political conflicts, unobjective labor strife and destructive ideological pressures," which was interpreted by many responsible Tokyo observers as, in effect, temporarily suspending America's effort to democratize Japan.

Tightening Taut Belts

MANY Japanese, acutely conscious of the housing, transportation, fuel and clothing shortages and the fact that Japan's national diet has been maintained above the "disease and unrest" level only by heavy imports of food at America's expense, were confused by MacArthur's call in the same document for "increased austerity in every phase of Japanese life."

The confusion was increased by the supreme commander's New Year message, in which he praised the Japanese for working "to lay imperishable foundation stones in the political mold of freedom and dignity and peace," and declared that "in no land anywhere are men more free . . . a serenity of calm has indeed enveloped your islands for which every law-abiding citizen fully shares the credit."

MacArthur meant, of course, that, thanks to the new constitution and other reforms, the Japanese are legally free. Actually, they remain rigidly disciplined—by their own reactionary leaders; by the oyabun, or bosses, who infest all branches of the national life; by SCAP directives, and by their own Confucian and feudalistic thought processes and concepts of obedience to authority from cradle to grave. It is important that the distinction be made, lest the American people be misled.

The Communists' Chance

BEBORE MacArthur's latest orders to the Japanese nation are criticized as harsh, however, it would be well to consider two factors—one positive and the other negative—existing in Japan today.

The positive factor is a recent stepping-up of Japanese Communist activity at the grassroots. The Communist Party—the only disciplined political party in Japan in the Western sense of that word—sees Communist gains in China, and the increase in Communist activity in other parts of Asia, as presenting an opportunity for which it has been waiting.

Whether or not the Communists' program is coordinated with the timetable of other Communist parties in Asia is not known, but as one of their leaders put it to me, they are "fighting an election all the time, not just before polling day."

Disunity within the Socialist Party favors them. So does the prestige engendered by Communist successes in China, and the anti-American propaganda line of the Chinese Communists, which is often identical with the propaganda poured forth by the Japanese radio during the Pacific war. With 116 Communist candidates nominated for the general election January 23, it is widely expected that they will win between 10 and 20 Diet seats, compared with 4 seats in the last Diet.

The Communists are the only party not involved in recent political corruption scandals. They have managed to infiltrate many of Japan's "key" trade unions. And they were, typically, the only Japanese political partisans who worked through Japan's traditional six-day New Year holiday.

A Hold on Workers

THE FACT that few observers in Japan believe the Communists will become a serious challenge in the near future is not the point. The real danger is that their increasing strength among the workers might win for them a tactical position in which, by fomenting labor discontent, they could seriously delay the rehabilitation of Japan's economy.

That fear is regarded by many here as sufficient justification for the Supreme Commander's action in cracking down on "improvidential political conflicts" and "unobjective labor strife," even if to do so means the temporary suspension of some privileges conferred upon Japan's workers by the MacArthur reforms.

Japanese production rose from 50 per cent of the 1930-34 average in April, 1948, to 61 per cent in October. In view of the recent large increase in population due to the repatriation of Japanese from overseas, and the natural increase from the high birth rate, some within SCAP are of the opinion that nothing short of the production level attained by Japan prior to Pearl Harbor will enable the country to attain self-sufficiency, and end its dependence on American taxpayers.

Any political activity which interferes with production is, therefore, contrary to the interests of both Japan and the United States.

Have to Be Prodded

THE NEGATIVE factor at work here is the simple fact that too many of the Japanese have been too content to "leave it to MacArthur." It recently required an order from SCAP to get Japanese authorities to set about the job of putting their war-worn roads into shape.

While there is plenty of austerity in the daily lives of the little people of Japan, the nation as a whole has not buckled down to austerity measures as stringent as those under which the British have been living and working since the war. The Japanese nation is not working as hard as before the war. And when, as a modest initial dose of "austerity," the Japanese government ordered an increase in working hours of public servants from $36\frac{1}{2}$ to 48 weekly, in an effort to improve administrative efficiency, a majority of the officials concerned ignored the order. The "Central Struggle Committee" of the Japanese National Federation of Government and Public Workers Unions expressed flat opposition to the order.

The plain fact is that the Japanese have had their noses in the Oriental equivalent of the pork barrel too long, and it was high time they were reminded that Washington, too, helps those who show some interest in helping themselves.

The situation was aptly summed up by a SCAP official who wisecracked: "I wonder just how much the Japanese would take, cash down, to let us get out of here?"

The United States certainly has no intention of getting out. All the signs point to this occupation continuing for many years, with MacArthur at its head so long as he chooses to remain on the job. But it is clear that this year will see a determined effort to get MacArthur's Japanese wards to roll up their kimono sleeves and cooperate more diligently—if not more enthusiasticsally—in the task of working out their salvation.

Tokyo municipal employes are shown demonstrating for a 300 per cent pay raise, when the occupation was new. Now they are rebelling against their own government's "austerity" order increasing their work week from $36\frac{1}{2}$ to 48 hours

France Would Hardly Miss Pondicherry

(Pondicherry, key to French India, is one of the five small settlements which India wants to take over and France wishes to retain. Steven V. David of the Associated Press staff in New Delhi was the first foreign news correspondent to visit Pondicherry in several years.)

By Steven V. David
Associated Press Staff Writer

PONDICHERRY, French India, Jan. 15.—Looking at Pondicherry, you wonder why India and France are arguing about it.

Pondicherry, on the southeast coast of India, is the administrative center for 200 square miles of territory known as French India. It is not important commercially and, by treaty, cannot be used as a military base. There is not much here France would miss.

The same goes for the other four French settlements in India—Karikal and Yanam, on the east coast; Mahe, a village on the west coast, and Chandernagore, in the heart of Bengal, 30 miles from Calcutta.

Nor would India, which wants to make all five settlements part of its territory, gain much except the satisfaction that another foreigner had been removed from the subcontinent.

Whether French India will remain that or merge with India is to be decided by plebiscite. The time and procedure for the plebiscite will be determined by municipal assemblies, which have been elected in all but Mahe. An uprising of pro-Indian factions in Mahe forced postponement of the election there.

Premature, Say French

EACH side says it is sure to win the plebiscite. The French administrators say the people "realize they are better off here than they would be in India." They observe that French Indians are French citizens with all the rights of French citizens. They cite Pondicherry's lower taxes and advanced labor legislation. They say the lower classes are happier because the caste system is not so binding.

They acknowledge that the time may come when French Indians will want to merge with India. Their argument is that the citizens don't want to do so now, when India's future is still uncertain.

India proceeds on the assumption that the five "pinpricks on the map of India" are naturally part of Indian territory. Indian officials here echo Prime Minister Nehru's statement that French India has existed because Britain permitted it to exist. They say the French realize they cannot hold on for long, but are trying to "postpone the evil day."

Pro-Indians offer an answer to the question: "Of what importance to France are these tiny settlements?"

They say there would be immediate repercussions through the French empire if French India were lost. It would affect the situation in Indo-China and spur nationalist movements in Madagascar and Algiers. They claim it might bring the downfall of whatever government happened to be in power in Paris.

Socialists Undecided

FIGHTING the political battle are four parties—the Indian Congress, the Socialists, the Progressive Democrats and the Communists. The Congress, of course, is the pro-merger group. The Progressive Democrats and the Communists are pro-France.

The Socialists appear to hold the key, and at the moment most of them are on the fence.

Pondicherry itself is a strangely quiet city with a colorful past. There was a time when more than one ship a month stopped at this port. Smuggling was common, and fine French laces and good French wines could be had at bargain prices. Those days are gone now. Pondicherry seems to have fallen asleep.

Walk through the narrow, almost deserted streets of the European quarter, faded gray and pink walls on either side, and you doubt that people live there. Stroll down to the port, with its single pier, and you will find no sign of commerce. The main entrance to the governor's mansion is guarded by a dark sentry in a red fez. But there is no one to guard against except idle ricksha men and a few strolling citizens.

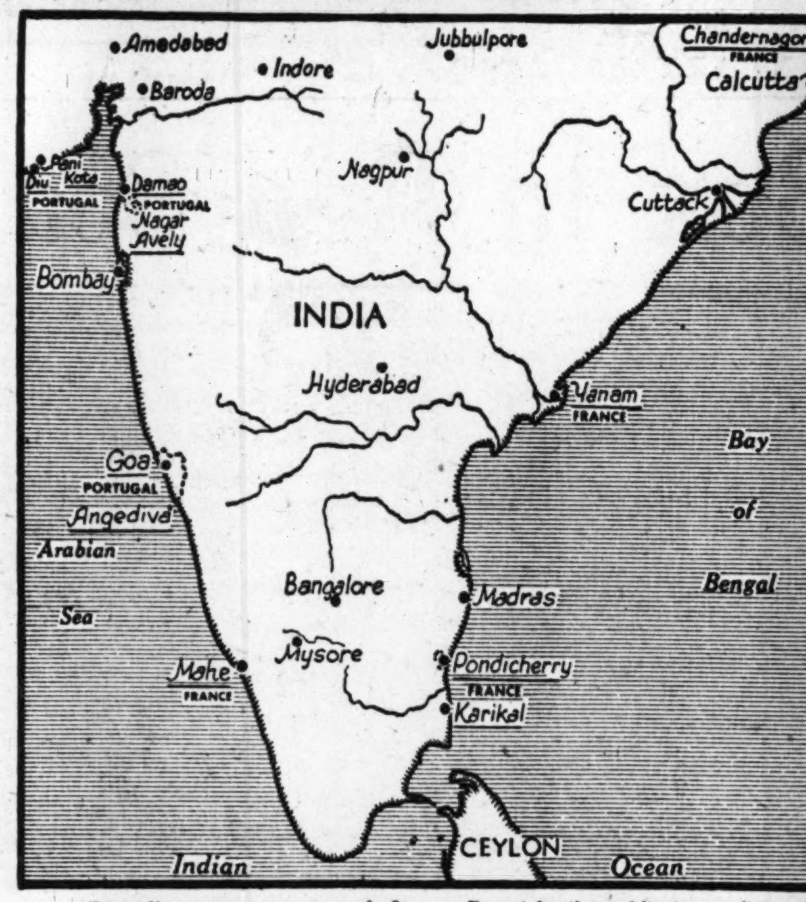
The curious quiet extends even to the bazaar, always the noisiest part of town in this section of the world. There is little traffic; there probably are no more than a dozen cars in Pondicherry.

Except for the architecture and the official language, Pondicherry could be part of the Indian union. The people are citizens of France, but they are indistinguishable from south Indians.

Most business is done in Indian rupees, the rest in overprinted francs sent from Indo-China. The newspapers come mainly from Madras, the big Indian city 100 miles away. It isn't necessary to get a visa to enter Pondicherry from India.

The young men who administer Pondicherry admit French India is not important commercially. They tell you it costs France money to run the settlements. Yet it is obvious they would be pleased if the people voted to remain in the French empire.

India is interested in ridding the subcontinent of foreign powers. Tiny Portuguese India is next and last on the list.



Long British Charter Expires

Portugal Reclaims Rich Port

WITHOUT BENEFIT of troops, controversy or even big headlines, the compact little port of Beira passed from private British management to the Portuguese government January 1. It is No. 2 of the ports on the 1500-mile coast of Mozambique (Portuguese East Africa).

Far more important than that ranking, however, Beira stands third in tonnage of all southern African ports. It is the handiest sea outlet for vast areas of Mozambique, Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and the Belgian Congo.

These regions contain rich resources that could help European recovery, especially with improvement of Beira's rail and handling facilities.

Beira is 120 miles southwest of the delta mouth of the Zambezi River, and 530 ship miles north around a land bulge from Lourenco Marques, Mozambique's capital and chief port. Its development is entirely modern, says the National Geographic Society.

Starting as a Portuguese military post in 1884, its port operations date from 1891, when a Portuguese government charter extended virtual sovereign rights to the British capitalized Mozambique Co.

By the turn of the century this company opened a 212-mile railroad westward to the Manica gold fields on the Rhodesian border, and the gold hunt there became a gold rush. When the line was extended to Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia's capital, Beira-to-Capetown by rail, 2037 miles, became a reality.

Early in the 1920s a rail line from Beira north to Murraca on the Zambezi opened the port to the tea, cotton and tobacco of Nyasaland. Completion in 1949 of a branch from this route up the Zambezi to vast coal fields around Tete will make Beira a coal exporting and bunkering port.

With the expiration of the long commercial charter, the territory became the new District of Beira of Mozambique's Province of Zambezia. The future of the port, whose exports have been 95 per cent British in the recent past, lies in Portuguese hands.

Airlift Complex Long Before Takeoff

By Brack Curry
Associated Press Staff Writer

FRANKFURT, GERMANY, Jan. 15.—Operation Vittles on the Berlin airlift starts in a Kansas wheat field.

Five thousand miles from Berlin, the farms and mills and ranches of America set in motion the flow of food to the blockaded city.

Wheat and flour come from the Midwest. Meat from Texas. Milk from Wisconsin. Eggs from New England.

From America's bounty flows the bulk of the food for western Berlin's 2,225,000 people. Every section of the United States contributes.

Denmark, Holland, Britain and western Germany supply some. And a little will come soon from Hungary, behind the Iron Curtain.

A complex operation must unfold before a single sack of flour is hoisted into an airlift plane.

The right kind of food in the right amounts must be at seven different airfields in western Germany at the proper time. It must be packaged to withstand rough flight conditions. It must be pre-cooked or concentrated to save vital cargo space. It must "keep" while stockpiled in western Germany or Berlin.

And all this is being done. Not one airlift plane has been grounded due to lack of cargo, say American officials here.

Storage Space Tight

THE boss of this behind-the-airlift operation is Maj. Gen. Charles P. Gross. As chairman of BEALCOM—the Berlin Airlift Coordinating Committee—Gross coordinates the flow of supplies to Berlin.

It requires delicate timing and close coordination with the American and British air forces, United States and British army transportation officers and German railway and food officials.

Airport storage space is small. So the stockpile of foods must be held to a minimum at the airfields. But supplies cannot be allowed to pile up beyond the capacity of warehouses. An average of three days' supply is held on railway freight cars. These are rolled up to the loading aprons of the airfields to discharge their cargo.

During the winter, a two weeks' supply of food will be stored at a Frankfurt warehouse in the United States zone and another in the British zone near Wunstorf Airfield.

Food is the biggest single item on the airlift. For its supreme goal is to provide Berliners with their daily food ration.

Military cargo represents about one-eighth of the total tonnage. United States Army cargoes, for example, amount to about 500 tons daily to Berlin. The German civil economy requirements run to about 3000 tons a day.

Host of Categories

THE American and British food rationing and distribution staff, which runs the food side of the lift, is headed by Paul E. Quintus of Gardner, Iowa. Quintus is a former Agriculture Department marketing specialist.

This group works out the various tonnages of food required each month to maintain a balanced diet in Berlin. This is a complex mathematical operation, for all of western Berlin's 2,225,000 people do not have the same ration.

The population is divided and subdivided into dozens of different categories based on age, profession, labor performed and state of health.

With cargo space at a premium, Quintus' staff decided to use dehydrated foods to cut volume. These are first cooked and then dehydrated. So they can be prepared for eating with little cooking. And this saves fuel in fuel-short Berlin.

The biggest food item on the lift is flour. Most of it is imported. Rye flour will be added shortly, American officials say, for some United States wheat is being traded to Denmark and Hungary for rye.

If fresh potatoes were shipped, they would weigh more than western Berlin's total food requirements. Dehydrated potatoes weigh only one-fifth as much as fresh potatoes. About half of the lift's potato load is German grown, the remainder imported.

OTHER food items going to Berlin include: Dried milk—skimmed and whole—from the United States. Fresh milk takes too much space. Dried vegetables, mainly German grown with some from Holland. Tea and coffee. Dried yeast. Cereals, including breakfast food, macaroni and spaghetti, all from imported grains processed in Germany.

Dehydrated beans and peas. Fats are mainly imported. A certain amount of butter from the German economy is added for hospitals. The meat ration is met with American dried eggs, German and imported fish and canned meat, mostly from the United States.

The first fish shipment to Berlin had 20 per cent wastage in each box. This was cut to 6 per cent by lopping off the heads and tails before shipment. Sugar comes from German production. Cheese was added to the ration November 1. It's mainly German with some Swiss and Danish imports.

Anglo-American officials are trying to spice Berlin's diet by adding honey and dehydrated fruit.

Low Freight Rates

THE internal trade section directs the flow of industrial goods on the airlift. It has concentrated consumer and industrial supplies scheduled for Berlin manufacturers in five German warehouses in the Frankfurt-Wiesbaden area.

From them the trade section keeps orders filled on time in Berlin. German manufacturers in the bizonal area pay the same freight rates on the airlift as they would by rail.

Manufactured goods also are shuttled from Berlin to the bizonal area. Since the airlift began, about 5000 gross metric tons of German industrial products have been sent to the west through Templehof and Gatow airfields in Berlin.

These goods are mainly motors, generators, telephone and mining equipment. Quick delivery of these helps Bizonia's economic recovery. And many manufacturers in western Berlin are thus able to keep their factories open, giving employment to thousands.

Two 'Marshall Plans' Helped Mt. Rainier's Adopted Town

By Thomas Hardie

BOHARS, France, Jan. 15.—An experiment in international good will, begun a year ago by a class of Mount Rainier, Md., school kids, has helped to revitalize this once-quaint Breton village.

The plan was simple. The third grade of the Mount Rainier Elementary School, 42 youngsters 7 and 8 years old, merely "adopted" the 869 citizens of this war-stricken French community.

Dubbed "The Little Marshall Plan," it has meant blankets for Bohars' children, new clothes for its men and women and additional food for the entire town.

It really began more than four years ago, in September, 1944, before the American children (now fourth-graders) could even read the morning headlines.

At that time American troops were pushing south toward the port of Brest, 3 miles away. In the process they almost leveled innocent little Bohars.

Of 156 homes, 47 were completely destroyed and 57 were damaged seriously by American artillery. In addition, the village landmark, a centuries-old church in the center of town, was three fourths destroyed by the retreating Germans.

Got Six Truckloads

ON Thanksgiving, three years later, the Mount Rainier youngsters hit upon their plan for aiding postwar Europe. Through their teacher, Miss Vivian Marshall, and the charitable organization, American Aid for Europe, they picked Bohars for "adoption" and undertook an ambitious campaign to collect food and clothing.

Under the sponsorship of Mayor Floyd B. Mathias of Mount Rainier, the class declared a local "Save Bohars Week" in late January, 1948. The children rang doorbells, wrote some 7000 letters to United States, Hawaiian and Alaskan newspapers, and ended up by collecting six truckloads of contributions.

The Mayor of Bohars, M. Prosper Salaun, summed up the sentiments of the village when he said recently:

"It was a magnificent gesture."

More than a ton of canned food and 50 large crates of clothing, plus individual gifts, arrived from Mount Rainier last spring. It took three days to distribute the goods. They were rationed out by the mayor as the townfolks filed by the ramshackle barracks quarters of the parish priest, M. l'Abbe Le Guen.

Now the visitor may see babies wrapped in woolen garments bearing Washington department store labels. And the mayor's house girl will dash upstairs to display two handsome dresses which, she proudly says, are "for Sunday only."

ERP Saved Mills

FOOD from Mount Rainier has been important in augmenting a meager postwar diet, although as M. l'Abbe points out, there have been several embarrassing moments when strange American food meant to be eaten raw has been cooked, and vice versa.

The Bohars grandmother is in Breton costume, including wooden shoes and white lace "coiffe." Her granddaughter is snug in a cap and jacket from a Washington department store via Mount Rainier, Md.

Canned corn had everyone "mystified" for several days, but now they love it.

The Mount Rainier plan has been seconded by the Marshall Plan itself, the European Recovery Program. M. Salaun says that withcut wheat and wheat flour from America, the town would have been "bankrupt" long ago and most of its citizens would have been forced to move away. For all of the 8000 metric tons of wheat and wheat flour used last year by the village's only industry, its four mills, arrived under the ERP.

The Washington visitor is overwhelmed by the respect and love shown toward the United States. Word of one's arrival spreads quickly. Millers, and farmers, and elderly women wearing the white lace "coiffe" of Brittany, hurry to thank their friend from abroad.

M. l'Abbe interrupts evening mass (held in a damp, wooden shed) to point out to the visitor the efforts at reconstruction. And the mayor taps his best wine to show his appreciation.

Still in 'Tempos'

IT IS obvious, however, that Bohars still has a long way to go. For example, just after the war, 240 persons were forced to live in "temporary" barracks. But today, 160 are still there.

M. l'Abbe is campaigning for 35 million francs (about $100,000 today) to rebuild his church. And the village's 50 school children, crammed into two small rooms in a makeshift, former German army quarters, still lack warm stockings and undergarments.

Bohars' hope for a "bigger and better" future is best expressed by one of its schoolroom decorations: the Tricolor of France and the Stars and Stripes, bracketing a photo of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Italian Communists Court Cave-Dwellers

By Barrett McGurn

MATERA, ITALY, Jan. 15.—The depressed standard of living which Communist agitators are exploiting in Italy is illustrated dramatically in this ancient community near the heel of the Italian boot. More than 15,000 persons are living in caves which have been inhabited perhaps without interruption for more than 3000 years.

Most of the caves are natural or artificial holes in soft rock. The cave community hangs high on the walls of a deep ravine. Some of Matera's modern cliff-dwellers have unfenced front yards which plunge straight down for as much as 150 feet, but most have a front wall to guard against falls.

A good example of the cave homes is that of Mrs. Annunziata Lucebianca, a neat and apparently inexhaustibly patient housewife. Like almost all the 2141 other inhabited caves, Mrs. Lucebianca's cave has only one "room." When I visited there, Mrs. Lucebianca, in the dim light of a single dull reddish bulb, was at work at a loom, weaving cloth for her husband. By days of application she would be able to weave him enough cloth for three suits for only $20, she explained.

The cave was neat, but the single electric bulb was the one modern comfort it boasted.

Pig Is Tenant

A 200-POUND PIG lay in the doorway, leashed to the wall. Like half the other cave-dwellers of Matera, the Lucebiancas cannot afford a stable and so they keep their livestock in the same space with the family.

The caves have neither running water nor toilets. They have no cross-ventilation, and as a result the moisture of many breaths condenses on the cavern roof and falls in drops.

For a kitchen Mrs. Lucebianca has a tiny alcove dug out of the wall. She burns wood but there is no proper method for drawing off the smoke, so much of it hangs heavily in the cave.

Washing down the grotto floor is a major problem, for the cave is 3 feet below street level. Drains are nearly impossible in the caves because one cavern is above another. A hole drilled in the floor would puncture another cave family's ceiling.

Like other cavern housewives, Mrs. Lucebianca disposes of the family refuse by carrying it to siphon-equipped hoppers in the middle of some streets. These connect to a crude sewer. Twenty-five years ago refuse was dumped in a nearby brook.

Line Up for Water

THE CAVE WOMEN of Matera get water by waiting in line at one of the community's half-dozen fountains. Often there are as many as 20 women in line but formerly the cave people had to collect water for drinking in their funnel-shaped front yards. Now the yard water is used only for laundry.

Italy's Communist-directed labor confederation (the C.G.I.L.) has been busy among the cave-dwellers and has had considerable success. Signs in red paint urge support of the strikes which have been imperiling the success of the Marshall Plan.

Communists have given the tenant farmers of the caves hope of possessing their own land, so communism has won many converts. If anti-Communists can give the cave men a similar hope communism will lose its appeal, Vincenzo Corazza, Matera's town engineer, and one of the community leaders, asserts confidently.

Corazza is campaigning to get part of Italy's share of the Marshall Plan for rehousing of the Matera cave men. He estimates he would need 5 years and 12 million dollars to house the families on level land nearer their farms.

Signs of Hope Seen

COMMUNISTS are conducting a propaganda drive throughout Italy to the effect that problems like those of Matera cannot be solved except through "a profound structural change," evidently meaning the overthrow of capitalism. According to the Communists no fewer than 49 per cent of Italy's homes are without running water, 33 per cent without toilets and 25 per cent without kitchens. (It is generally agreed that the 35 million rooms in Italy are 10 million fewer than the country needs for decency).

Although many of the cave-dwellers have lent an ear to these claims, the Communists are still short of the success they would like. In large part the cave residents have remained loyal to the Roman Catholic Church. In addition many see signs of hope.

The Ambrosecchias across the street from Mrs. Lucebiana, for instance, have a horse instead of a donkey now in their one-room home. They still cannot afford a stable but the presence of the bigger, stronger beast is evidence of progress.

Hopes for 2,000,000 Fixed on Negeb

By Fitzhugh Turner

ASK a citizen of Israel why his young state needs the Negeb, and he'll answer, "To absorb immigrants." Ask further how Israel proposes to make this barren desert support a population: Where are the jobs? What can the Negeb produce?

Your Israeli will give you answers to these questions, too. He may mention petroleum—oil men are drilling for it under the shifting sand. He may mention chemicals from the Dead Sea, potash and bromides enough to last the world a thousand years. He may mention fish from Akaba, where the sea teems with mullet and mackerel.

He'll certainly mention farming and the project—the Lowdermilk Plan—to harness for irrigation the distant Jordan, a creek that masquerades as a river.

But he may not tell you what only some Israelis yet know—that a major plan to make the Negeb thrive depends, of all things, on castor oil. This is the story of the Negeb's castor oil.

Israel plans to double its population in the next 9 or 10 years to 2 million Jews or more. Fertile parts of the country already are getting crowded. Without the Negeb, the immigrants will have no place to go.

There is room there. Negeb, in Hebrew, means "south." It's a great, three-million-acre southern triangle of Palestine containing some of the most desolate country you can imagine. Its area is almost as large as all the rest of Palestine. Its population, at the moment, is about 50,000 Bedouin and 2000 to 3000 young Jewish pioneers.

They All Want It

Egypt and Trans-Jordan, and Britain, too, value the Negeb as a strategic barrier across a traditional invasion route. This has been responsible for much of the controversy in the United Nations involving the desert area. It has also contributed to the tenacity of the settlers, who have been fighting off Arabs intermittently for more than a year.

The young Jewish boys and girls live in 24 desert colonies, strategically situated for defense. These colonies are called Mitzpol, which means something like "agricultural experiment station." The oldest date from 1943. In the midst of their brown hell, the colonists have created islands of greenery with what water they can hoard. Between fights, they have grown some of the largest tomatoes, some of the juiciest watermelons to be had.

They've also conducted a great deal of experimentation. They've found that the castor tree can thrive in the Negeb, and Jewish scientists have learned that it is a very useful tree, indeed.

The scientists are members of the Daniel Sieff Research Institute at Rehovoth, between the Negeb and Israel's metropolis of Tel Aviv. They had gained some fame for extracting painkillers and other drugs from citrus rind when they turned to castor beans. As of last spring, before wartime secrecy intervened, they had developed a special kind of castor tree which produced a heavy crop, rich in oil.

Oranges and Cows

THEY reasoned, understandably, that castor oil can hardly build a state. So they sought other uses. Out of castor oil, they produced a plastic capable of hundreds of applications. They also invented a process to take the poison out of the poisonous residue supplying a protein-rich castor-bean feed for cattle. This is vital in a country so short of feed that its cows eat oranges.

The plastic, in raw form, is a clear liquid. One of its inventors, Dr. Leon Haskelberg, says it is more versatile than nylon—and stronger. It makes solid castings in any color; it makes thread and textiles. Its uses are almost myriad in the building of a brand-new industrial economy like Israel's.

A difficulty remains—the pods, and their scarab-like seeds, must be picked by hand from the bushy trees. At present, one of the institute projects is to develop a machine picker.

Green Desert

WHAT the scientists envision is a desert covered with green castor-tree plantations, with here and there a colony to house the men and women who cultivate the trees. On the coast and inland, they see factory towns, with plants to make the plastic and other plants to convert it into manufactured goods.

They see the Negeb flowing with irrigation waters, blossoming with growth—with even a ship canal snaking across from Tel Aviv to Akaba, carrying the goods of Israel through the Red Sea to the East.

It may sound extreme to anyone who has seen the Negeb in its present condition. The world however, has witnessed what Jews have done in the sands of the Sharon and in the swamps of Galilee. Where once there was desolation, there now are prosperous farms, agricultural settlements, towns, hospitals, schools.

The Negeb may offer a more formidable challenge, but it would be a rash oracle who claimed it can't be done there too.

Truman Forces Issue in Steel Expansion Fight

By Fred J. Zusy and Clarke Beach
Associated Press Staff Writers

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has demanded a showdown in the bitter fight raging between steel industry leaders and certain Government officials and legislators.

Crux of the controversy is the question: "Is the steel industry expanding fast enough?"

Practically all industry men reply "yes." Many say that production will catch up with demand within two years.

Their opponents say that present expansion programs are so inadequate that a continuing shortage of steel is in prospect and that it will prevent the Nation's entire productive plant from reaching full capacity.

More steel plants are needed, they add, for defense reasons. Some might be destroyed in war, and in any case another war would bring far greater demands for steel than the last one did.

Men in the anti-industry camp have even proposed that the Government build additional steel plants if industry refuses to build fast enough.

Cry of 'Socialism'

THE President in his message to Congress on the State of the Union indicated he agreed that this should be done if it is true that more plants are needed than industry is willing to build. First, however, he proposed that Congress "authorize an immediate study of the adequacy of production facilities."

If it is found necessary, he continued, Congress should "authorize Government loans for the expansion of production facilities." Congress, he went on, should "authorize the construction of such facilities if action by private industry fails to meet our needs."

The cry immediately arose throughout the steel world that such a proposal was socialistic and amounted to nationalization of the steel industry.

In the world background of the dispute is the plan of the Labor Party in Britain—second biggest steel-producing nation in the world—to nationalize the steel industry there by May, 1950. The Labor Party insists that steel expansion be carried on more rapidly than private industry indicates it wishes to proceed.

Tops Wartime Peak

HERE are the crucial statistics on American steel:

1. The steel industry, engaged in a massive postwar expansion program, says it now has the capacity to produce 96,120,930 net tons of raw steel annually, greater than ever before in war or peace. (The Commerce Department concurs in this figure). Wartime peak capacity was 95,505,280 tons in 1944. Further expansion now planned is expected to boost capacity to 98 million tons by 1950. Steel capacity has increased 17.5 per cent in the past 10 years.

2. But the planned boost won't be enough, say the men on the other side of the question. C. Girard Davidson, Assistant Interior Secretary, says steel production should be increased by 10 million tons annually. Two influential Democratic legislators, Senator Murray of Montana and Representative Patman of Texas, also say our steel production capacity is 10 million tons short.

A present shortage of steel is admitted by practically all quarters within the industry. Steel magazine, an industry publication, said in December that the steel shortage "gives every promise of continuing for months."

Iron Age, a trade weekly, said recently: "If steel is as short by the end of 1949 as it is now, there will be more fireworks over the capacity problem than the industry has seen yet."

1949 Target Date

BIG steel makers predicted in the summer of 1947 that steel supply would catch up with demand by the end of 1949. What they think now they have not revealed. Commerce Department steel specialists won't even guess publicly if supply is even within reaching distance of demand.

The big steel men made their 1947 predictions before a Senate committee. One of the most hopeful was Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corp., which makes about one third of all American steel. He said:

"I predict that within two years—within two years, or in a shorter time—if the new facilities (planned in the industry's own expansion program) could be added, that production and demand will be in balance domestically in this country."

Senator Murray commented that "the industry's estimates of demand in recent years have been conspicuously and dangerously incorrect."

He added that a 1941 industry estimate "that no additional capacity was needed for an all-out war was in error by the * * * 15 million tons which the Government and the industry had to add before the war was over. The war might have been prolonged if the Government had accepted the industry's figures."

Plants Absorb Steel

DAVIDSON said this in a recent speech:

"The Eastern steel barons are opposed, as they have always been, to any enlargement of our capacity to make steel. These men of little faith are in constant dread of a depression which might leave them with 'too much' steel."

But the steel men say that to increase the steel-making capacity faster than the present program, will reduce, rather than increase, the immediate supply of steel. Their reason is that it would take a vast amount of steel to build the steel-making plants.

Also, they say, construction costs are now so high that to build more plants would make it necessary to raise steel prices again.

Acheson Stays One Short Jump Ahead of Majority Thinking

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

MORE than three years ago—the ink had just dried on the United Nations Charter—the National Council for American-Soviet Friendship met in New York to hear the handsome Assistant Secretary of State, Dean Acheson.

He arrived complete with superb vocabulary, dramatic mustache, resonant voice and approved haberdashery. It was quickly obvious he had also arrived with a very serious switch in thinking among the top foreign policy makers.

He felt it was all well and good to sympathize with the constant Russian complaint that she had to have friendly governments on her borders, the plea Moscow was then using to dictate the new Polish government. But, said Acheson, Americans would expect Russia to seek such security without disturbing the rights of other peoples.

The speech got little attention, but Acheson's coworkers now say that he was one of the first to warn that Russia was not living up to her pledges.

Since 1940 Acheson's stand on public affairs has been in just about that position: A little in advance of official State Department policy and of the program the majority of Americans would accept.

Now he has been asked to take the helm, as Secretary of State. Washington and the world will be waiting to see whether he can keep that stance—a little in advance of the majority's wishes.

Tried to Be Friends

ACHESON first came to the department in 1940, when President Roosevelt asked him to break off seven successful years with a Washington law concern and become Assistant Secretary of State. It meant a big loss in income, but Acheson agreed.

His attitude on the top problem—the role of Russia in the war and the peace to follow—about paralleled the attitude of most other top Government men. He worked for patient consideration of Soviet quirks, as many Americans did, when little was known about the Russians.

Then Russian stubbornness began to show up. Acheson sent up that trial warning in New York.

A month earlier he had shown he would fight power grabs anywhere. He told a news conference this Government would never sign a military alliance with the "present Buenos Aires military regime."

Shortly Argentina went to the polls and put the Peron clique into power by vote. American policy accepted the verdict of the polls.

In the first half of 1946, most Americans wanted only to beat a hasty path to normalcy. Acheson again sounded off on what was then a conservative note.

He told a meeting that rapid demobilization of our troops had been a mistake. He doubted their return home had accomplished as much as the more rapid stabilization which might have come to the world if American troops had stayed abroad a little longer.

He was then Acting Secretary of State. Secretary James F. Byrnes had to spend months of 1946 abroad.

Handled Yugoslav 'Incident'

JUST then the Yugoslavs shot down some American planes. Acheson carried the ball on that, conferring frequently by radio with Byrnes. The upshot was the American Government demanded and got apology and restitution from Yugoslavia.

In midsummer of 1946 the Soviets demanded new talks about the Dardanelles, the passage from the Black to the Mediterranean Sea, and said they would want bases there. This was a threat to Turkey's independence. Acheson won approval to send Moscow a note which said Washington would oppose Russian bases on the Dardanelles. Moscow dried up, but the argument may still flare.

In early 1947, the British said they could no longer carry the security of Greece. The burden fell on the United States. Acheson sold the Administration on the "Truman Doctrine", a major turning point in American foreign policy. It put us on the line to stop the spread of communism.

Much earlier, in November, 1944, Acheson had taken the first such step, although it wasn't recognized at the time.

At a Montreal meeting of UNRRA he insisted on 50-million dollars aid for the Italians. Europeans protested that Italy had been an Axis partner. Cynics said it was an American bid to buy Italian votes for Roosevelt in the 1944 election.

Now State Department men admit that secret reports already showed a strong Italian Communist Party and that this was a step to stop it.

A Realistic Benefactor

ACHESON'S path at conferences was smoothed because Uncle Sam was also Santa Claus. But Acheson at several points has insisted on careful spending.

At the first UNRRA conference in 1943, he cut the original budget from two and one-half billion dollars to two billion dollars. He has warned publicly that American aid must be tailored to American ability to give.

On the other hand, he has fought against a parsimonious policy for the Marshall Plan. He was one of the authors, and he told a congressional hearing the sum must be large enough to put Europe back to work; that merely keeping Europe on relief would be foolish.

In 1946, Acheson announced that another change in American aid was on the way. He would approve aid only after special American agreements were written with friendly governments.

That ended UNRRA. It ended aid to the Soviet bloc, and it paved the way for the Marshall Plan.

Acheson spoke of "regional arrangements" as possibly the best current bulwark against war, but he left the department for law again in July, 1947, before the regional arrangements idea had taken full flower. By then he had become Undersecretary to George C. Marshall.

Another Hot Spot

NOW the United States Government is discussing the most serious such agreement in its history: A military pact with five Western European powers. Acheson returns to leadership as the final decision must be taken.

On the cold war, he agrees with other American leaders: He thinks it is dangerous but will not necessarily lead to war. He thinks the cold war may last for many years.

He takes one step further. He thinks one certain way to change Russian policy may be for us to carry through our plan to strengthen the free governments of Western Europe.

He says: "Communism only takes advantage of weak and unstable situations. But the Communists meet a stable situation with complete realism. They adjust to it."

Error Helped Create Famous TB Hospital

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—A famous tuberculosis hospital, entering its fiftieth year this month, grew out of a mistake.

It is the National Jewish Hospital in Denver, the first free, nonsectarian hospital in this country for the tuberculosis needy. Its first patient in January, 1899, was a young Catholic girl. Since then it has treated 40,000 patients, all without charge, and has been at the forefront in research on TB and care of patients.

It also has grown into a truly national organization, with central offices in New York City and other offices in Philadelphia, Detroit, Dallas and Chicago.

But it might never have been started except for one mistake.

Merely a Help

THIS error was the popular belief that a change of climate itself would cure the white plague, and particularly that a trip West was the best thing. Actually, a change of climate may help. But that alone is not enough, and won't cure the tuberculosis patient.

Primarily, he needs a complete rest. Today much of the treatment is surgical and medical, demanding skilled nursing and medical care. This is found more in or near big cities.

But in the late 1800s the idea that a high, dry climate was a touchstone for curing TB was widespread. It became a lure that pulled hundreds of persons westward, by train, by mule, by wagon, even afoot.

Denver was one mecca. But once there most of the TB victims couldn't support themselves. Or at least they couldn't make a living and get the vital rest they needed.

They flooded into Denver in such numbers that public-spirited citizens took action to start a hospital. It was opened in 1899 with cooperation of B'nai B'rith, the national Jewish fraternal organization.

Its motto is, "None may enter who can pay—none can pay who enter." In 50 years the hospital has given more than three million days of free patient care to persons of all faiths from all over the United States. Forty per cent of the patients come from New York City, the headquarters here reports. More than 60 per cent of the patients are of the Christian faith.

About 8 out of 10 of the patients leave the hospital either cured or materially recovered.

Avoids Disfigurement

A RESEARCH department started in 1919 expanded the hospital's national influence. From its work has come a method for isolating and studying tubercle baccili, a cheaper, quicker test for TB, detection of an immunity factor and testing of numerous new drugs.

Rehabilitation is carried to the bedside, when the patient is unable to attend classes at the National Jewish Hospital. This student is learning watch repairing without leaving his pillow

In surgery, the hospital is one of the places using lightweight plastic balls to pack the chest and immobilize an infected lung. This method avoids the disfigurement which comes from removing several ribs to collapse a lung. Dr. Allan Hurst, medical director, reports the method is quite successful when used on the right cases.

The hospital, now seeking to expand its 250-bed facilities, also has become a teaching and training center for specialists in tuberculosis control. The World Health Organization sends specialists there, and experts from the hospital teach at Veterans Administration centers. World-wide, tuberculosis is the second worst disease affecting mankind, ranking after malaria.

The hospital also has been a leader in rehabilitation of patients. Sometimes, even when well recovered, they aren't physically strong enough to return to their old jobs. Many discharged patients overtax themselves and land back in the hospital.

Vocational training has been expanded into retraining for new jobs. A construction worker, for example, may be trained for a new job that takes less physical effort. Retraining begins shortly after he arrives, and after doctors have determined what his physical limitations will be, if any.

Inflation's Hard on Endowed Institutions

By Lawrence N. Eldred
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 15—Before they are ripped apart under the strain of today's money troubles, some of the Nation's private institutions are having to find ways to strengthen themselves.

Much of the income of universities, museums, hospitals, fund-raising organizations and welfare agencies is rooted in prewar endowments, but their expenses are tied to the postwar inflation kite.

Booz, Allen & Hamilton, management counsellors, contend in a current brochure that while they can do nothing about the income side, they can relieve strain at the other end by advising how expenses can be reduced.

"Since 1940," the firm said, "nearly every institution has undergone a sharp increase in demand for its services. Higher learning ranks have been swelled to more than twice their prewar size by returned veterans.

"Hospitals have experienced greater use of their facilities as membership in medical prepayment plans has grown more than 500 per cent in the last eight years.

"With 15 million more people in the country than in 1940, other institutions have felt the pinch as well."

Rates Won't Match

COSTS of both goods and services have risen more than 60 per cent above the prewar period, and in few cases have increased rates been adequate to match the cost spiral, the firm declared.

On the other hand, it added, "Large fortunes which were once the mainstay of private institutions are being eaten away by Federal estate and gift taxes and State inheritance taxes. And the income tax laws put a damper on the accumulation of new fortunes on which private agencies may draw.

"For example, individuals earning more than $100,000 in 1929 retained an aggregate net income after Federal taxes of $3,717,000,000. In 1945, those in the same bracket had a total net income after Federal taxes of only $453,000,000, less than one eighth the 1929 figure.

"To complicate the financial situation of institutions, income from investments has been reduced materially in the last two decades. It takes approximately 50 per cent more endowment today to yield the same return obtainable in the 1920's."

Free Feeders

THE only way out of the dilemma is through good performance and good management, the counsellors declare.

In one case history cited by the firm, a psychiatric sanitarium was constantly exceeding its income yet its administration was inadequate for its needs. The medical staff was involved in routine administrative chores instead of doing the necessary clinical and therapeutical work.

An item on the cost side showed the institution was spending $4000 a month to provide extra free meals for employes, guests of patients and friends of the staff.

The counselling firm suggested that routine chores should be done by laymen, leaving the medical staff for medical duties. Free meals should be controlled within well-defined personnel policies.

IN ANOTHER case the executive director of a famous museum had been attempting to operate with an organization which had long been outmoded.

"The numerous divisions were headed by curators, each of whom was practically autonomous in his own field. Operators of the institution were almost completely decentralized, resulting in much unnecessary duplication of effort."

When an Eastern university found itself overwhelmed by the postwar influx of students, it was found the administration was badly out of balance, with more than 100 key executives reporting to the president.

Wheat Pacts...and the Decline of Spinach

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A STUDY of international commodity agreements—including an international wheat agreement—has been begun by a working party of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization.

The commodities under study, besides wheat and flour, are sugar, coarse grains, rice, cotton, fats and oils (limited to edible oils, plus linseed oil), coffee, rubber, wool, dairy products, cocoa and tea.

Represented in the working party are Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, India, the United Kingdom and the United States. George R. Paterson of Canada is chairman.

The law under which the 152 national forests passed under the management of the Forest Service was passed half a century ago, Lyle F. Watts, Forest Service chief, pointed out in his annual report last week.

Throttling Thor

EXPERIMENTS in stopping lightning at its source were made last summer at the Priest River branch of the Northern Rocky Mountain Forest and Range Experiment Station, a report by the Forest Service reveals.

The experiments were conducted at the request of the service by Dr. Vincent J. Schaefer, General Electric research chemist who originated "cloud seeding" to make rain.

Many lightning storms can be "stopped cold," Schaefer believes, if the individual cumulus clouds, particularly those formed by mountain uplift, are properly seeded with frozen carbon dioxide. About 1000 forest fires are caused each year by lightning.

Decline of Spinach

YELLOW and green leafy vegetables are gaining in popularity, Agriculture Department reports show. Production of the following increased from 10 to 40 per cent in 1948 over the 10-year average: fresh sweet corn, lettuce, cabbage, celery, cauliflower, cucumbers, escarole, green peppers and carrots.

Decreases were reported for beets, asparagus and green peas. No change was shown for tomatoes, lima beans and snap beans. Spinach was down 13 per cent.

Nearly half the Nation's farmers, operating about one third of the cropland, carried on conservation practices in 1948 under the agricultural conservation program. Such programs are in effect in 3000 counties.

THE Forest Service is going to experiment this year with fees for visitors. The schedule of charges will be 50 cents a day for an auto party of not more than six persons, or $3 a week for camping facilities; 25 to 50 cents for a party of six for picnickers—5 to 10 cents extra for each person above six; no charge for children under 12.

Extra Helpings

HERE'S one of the reasons for the potato surpluses of the last few years that have been driving Agriculture Department officials nuts:

In 1919 the United States harvested 3½ million acres of spuds. The average yield was 90 bushels to the acre. The average American ate 153 pounds.

Last year the average yield was more than 212 bushels an acre, and per capita consumption was only 120 pounds. Only two million acres provided millions more bushels than 3½ million acres did 30 years before.

Conservation practices not only mean better crops, but increased wild game. Tests by the Missouri Conservation Commission in Boone County, Mo., show that stocking areas with quail without better land use changes does not result in a rise in the quail population, even in proportion to the normal reproductive rate of the released birds. Where proper conservation measures have been employed, twice as many birds were found in 1947 as in the spring of 1946.

HYBRID strawberries—cultivated varieties crossed with wild berries—are showing marked resistance against spring frosts. Tests at the Plant Industry Station at Beltsville, Md., showed the hybrids only slightly damaged by a 23-degree frost last April 30 that destroyed nearly all the blossoms on other plants. Three out of four of the flowers on one hybrid bore fruit after a severe frost on May 10 that killed every bloom on most varieties.

Freedom Train

It is appropriate that the Nation's Capital should be the last stop of the Freedom Train before it is disbanded. The seven-day exhibit beginning today on a spur track adjoining the Bureau of Engraving will give thousands of Washingtonians a chance to view the great documents that have become welded into the country's history—a chance that many persons missed because of the briefness of the train's visit earlier during its tour.

The real significance of the Freedom Train, of course, is not the physical presence of these documents and replicas, but the meaning and inspiration they convey. For more than 3,500,000 persons in 320 cities, the tour sponsored by the American Heritage Foundation has been a graphic course in civics. Schools and citizen organizations, labor unions and chambers of commerce have banded together in municipal programs to add significance to the visit. In two Southern cities—Memphis and Birmingham—the train did not stop because of the refusal of local authorities to permit showings without racial segregation. This in itself was a moral victory with implications far beyond the immediate event. The benighted action of public officials brought censure from many local groups, as well as a host of invitations from other cities in the South where there was a better appreciation of the fundamental tenets of American democracy.

The primary effort of sponsors of the Freedom Train is to impress visitors with a sense of the responsibilities that accompany the rights set forth in the train's exhibits. This can be achieved most effectively, of course, by meaningful applications in individual communities—though the Heritage Foundation offers a primer in a free booklet entitled Good Citizen which contains an amazing compendium of citizenship information as well as "The Freedom Pledge." Coming as it does during Inauguration Week, the Freedom Train's finale ought to draw a response from Washingtonians that will help stimulate periodical tours of the kind now ending.

Common-Sense Loyalty

The Atomic Energy Commission has done well to stand its ground against attacks on its security clearance of Dr. Frank P. Graham in connection with his work as president of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Energy. The sniping seems to have started with the charge by a radio commentator that in approving Dr. Graham to receive classified information the commission overrode its own security review board headed by former Justice Owen J. Roberts. There has been no official verification of this contention. But if the commission actually did disregard the Roberts board, since disbanded, it was clearly within its authority. Final responsibility for atomic security rests with the members of the Atomic Energy Commission. Presumably they are in the best position to weigh individual cases in the broad context of the national interest.

Dr. Graham is a man of unusual intellectual attainments and unusual energies for the causes he believes right. Like Dr. Edward Condon, he is an individualist. Some of his contacts as president of the University of North Carolina, sponsor of various social welfare movements and servant of the United States on a variety of missions, including the United Nations Good Offices Committee in Indonesia, may have been heterodox. But in view of Dr. Graham's demonstrated antipathy toward totalitarianism of all kinds, such exposure cannot conceivably reflect on either his loyalty or his power of discrimination.

In announcing Dr. Graham's clearance last December, the AEC noted that the purposes of Dr. Graham's associations "were in keeping with American traditions and principles." Further, it found that "such associations have neither impaired his integrity and independence, nor aroused in him the slightest sympathy for communism or other antidemocratic or subversive doctrines." One other observation by the commission bears repeating because of its pertinence to loyalty investigations in general: "It must be recognized that it is the man himself the commission is actually concerned with, that the associations are only evidentiary, and that common sense must be exercised in judging their significance." These are precepts that can be disregarded only at the peril of stifling intellectual curiosity and shackling independent thought.

Big Deals

The big problem raised by the President's recent message on the state of the Union is precisely what he meant by the "Fair Deal," which he promised to "every segment of our economy and every individual." How does it differ from the "New Deal" promised by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, and the "Square Deal" promised by Theodore Roosevelt in 1904? Why have all these assorted deals been applauded in turn with gratified expectancy by a nation which has been taught that the making of "political deals" does not, generally speaking, accord with the highest standards of republican statesmanship?

Now the noun "deal" is derived from the Old English dael, meaning simply a part or a portion. Thus one speaks of "a great deal," which is to say a very large portion. Formerly, one might speak also of "small deal," or even of "no deal," as when, for example, Chaucer refers to someone who spoke much and pleasantly; but in what was said there was "neuer a deale of trouthe." Gradually, the word came to be applied to any sort of division and so to the division of cards among gamesters. Thus a "square-deal" would mean an apportionment of the cards according to the sequences in which they occur at the top of a properly shuffled pack. The term, though not the practice, seems to have been common about a century ago among the Mississippi River steamboat gamblers, and affords a good illustration of the metaphysical rule that no idea may be conceived until its opposite has also been conceived. A "square deal," then, is merely one which permits every player to profit by his luck, if he has any; thus it apparently signifies that the nature and the rules of chance must take their course; in a word, laissez faire.

A "new deal," however, signifies merely that the cards already dealt shall be recalled, reshuffled and reapportioned. The "new deal" may or may not be a "square deal"; it all depends upon the character of the dealer and also perhaps on the visual alertness of the other participants in the game. However, the notion that Mr. Roosevelt seems to have wished to suggest was innovation for its own sake, and this was warmly approved by an electorate which had made up its mind that any change must be for the better.

At first glance Mr. Truman's "fair deal" seems an improvement on Mr. Roosevelt's "new deal." The word "fair" comes to us from faeger, which means lovely, beautiful, pleasing, delightful—almost anything that may be construed as the opposite of ugly, foul, loathsome and so on. Thus we still speak of fair weather and occasionally of fair ladies. The context of Mr. Truman's message seems to give this interpretation some support, for it implies a deal which shall seem equally lovely to all the players. In this construction, then, a fair deal is one in which everybody will be dealt a minimum of four aces. This, however, is manifestly impossible if "fair" simply means just, equitable, reasonable or something like that, a connotation it has acquired as the result of the platonic identification of what is good and what is beautiful.

But in the common usage, the word "fair" has undergone what is called a semantic dilution. It has come to signify "passable," "not too bad," "about as well as could be expected," as, for example, in school reports or hospital bulletins. All in all, it seems to us that Mr. Truman's phrase is hardly less ambiguous than those employed by his eminent predecessors.

On The Right Side

Although the Senate Labor Committee is divided on the question whether to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and subsequently consider proposals for amendment of the restored Wagner Act, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, the committee's chairman, has joined forces with those in favor of the so-called one-package approach. That is very good news, for if responsible legislators—men of influence like Mr. Thomas—were to yield to union pressure for immediate repeal of the hated Taft-Hartley Act before substitute proposals have been drafted, the country would be left for an indefinite period without protective legislation for suppressing strikes that threaten the national welfare. Then, too, as this newspaper recently pointed out, restoration of the Wagner Act in unamended form would make responsible administration of the law impossible, since the NLRB would have to be reconstituted without any assurance that no further changes in its composition or in its duties impended. With both Senator Thomas and Representative Lesinski, who is slated for the chairmanship of the House Labor Committee, pledged to support of the one-package plan, the chances of securing a workable, balanced law to replace the Taft-Hartley Act are greatly improved.

Ticket Taxes

Many strange and wondrous things are done in the name of inaugurating a President of the United States with proper pomp and sufficient circumstance. The printing and selling of "tax-exempt" tickets for all inaugural functions, without legislative waiver of the tax, is quite in character. This is to be the grandest inauguration spectacle ever put on—at any rate the most supercolossal—and little matters like the Internal Revenue Code don't stand a chance.

To be sure, the ticket sale follows precedent—inauguration tickets have traditionally been tax free. The arrangements committee simply anticipated that Congress would give it ex post facto authority in special legislation. The expectation is probably well founded. And this committee ought not to be left out on a financial limb for doing what its predecessors have done.

The precedent, however, is a bad one. In coming through with a pardon for the committee's confident nonobservance of the tax law, Congress ought to serve notice that this will be the last time. Tax exemption for tickets to parade seats may possibly be justified on the ground that this is a function belonging to the people who elected the President and who want to see him. Tax exemption on tickets to the high-priced, by-invitation-only Inaugural Ball is another question. And in any case the tax status ought to be clarified in advance of ticket sales and not afterward.

Espionage Bill

Attorney General Clark's bill to tighten up the espionage laws covers a wide area, and it will need thorough scrutiny by Congress. Some parts of the measure seem to us obviously desirable. The fact that the Government is now unable to punish anyone for the theft of security documents from the State Department 10 years ago dramatically illustrates the shortcomings of the present law. The loopholes ought to be closed, however, with a minimum of interference with our traditional freedom, and the Clark bill appears to leave a good deal to be desired on this score.

Probably the least controversial of all Mr. Clark's proposals is repeal of the statute of limitations insofar as it applies to espionage cases. In general the statute of limitations is a desirable safeguard against the bringing of charges long after memories have dimmed and evidence has been lost. From the very nature of espionage, however, years may elapse before the crime is uncovered. We do not think any injustice is likely to be done by permitting prosecution for this serious offense at any time that evidence sufficient to make a case is brought to light.

It seems entirely reasonable, also, to require the registration of persons who have been schooled in espionage or sabotage in foreign countries. By registering, of course, such persons would destroy their usefulness to any foreign government. Only inactive spies could be expected to record themselves. But the effect of this provision would be to increase the hazards of spying in the United States—a wholly desirable objective. Likewise, it seems to us, Congress may well specify penalties for Government employes who carelessly let security documents get into the hands of persons unauthorized to see them.

The Department of Justice goes much beyond these added safeguards, however, and asks for authority to catch spies through wire-tapping and for penalties applicable to any person found in unauthorized possession of secret documents. The bill would also make it a crime to pass information "which could be used to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of any foreign nation" whether or not done with evil intent. That might even cover information disclosing a national scandal, which would certainly injure the United States in the eyes of the world. To penalize mere unauthorized possession of secret documents, moreover, might lead to dangerous suppression of information. Congress ought never to forget that freedom of information is even more vital to democracy than the catching of spies. The plea for limited wire-tapping rights also seems to be a step backward. If wire-tapping should be legalized "in the interest of national security," where would resort to it end? Congress ought to make certain that whatever measure is adopted to strengthen our security will not do so at the expense of basic liberties.

Tardy Checks

The Postoffice, it seems, had a lot of trouble delivering the mail just prior to November 2. At least, that's the impression to be had from the flurry of checks purportedly written before that date that have shown up at Democratic headquarters. These mysteriously delayed contributions have brought the Democratic treasury a healthy surplus of $100,000—a distinct contrast to the days just before the election when the party loyalists were cabbaging around for enough money to pay for radio time.

Aside from the President and that small band of followers that shared his intuition, the Johnny-come-latelies are said to include some of the biggest names in the Democratic Party, and one might wish that the Community Chest would inspire a similar stroke of conscience. Mr. Truman is a generous and forgiving man, and doubtless he understands the error of those persons who last summer located a long line of Republican ancestors only to discover that they had consulted the wrong genealogy.

WHERE NO WIND BLOWS

No man's grave, however deep,
Is certain for concealing sleep.
Earth and grass may close him over—
Wind and water will uncover
What was buried and unbidden,
Bring to light what men have hidden.
Wind has bared an ancient town,
Water leveled mountains down,
Thus revealing how and why
Men have fallen there to die.

Lest the martyred dead should speak,
Tyrants, dig their trenches deep;
Deeper down than water flows,
Deep . . . deep . . . where no wind blows!

Young's Administration

Fifteen months have intervened between your masterful editorial, "Young's Scapegoat" (October 25, 1947), and the one of January 6 titled "Our Inept Mayor."

The first mentioned editorial listed a long string of abuses relating to administration of the Police Department of which the Commissioner is the top boss, and rightly laid the blame on his door-step. Yet that editorial closed with only a gentle crack on his knuckles.

The second editorial, berates him severely, says he is inept and suggests that if he does fill out his present term it will be necessary to launch a campaign against his reappointment. Solely because he spoke plainly to a group of Congressmen and the editorial mind feels he insulted them.

I do not believe any interested citizen of this city was humiliated by Commissioner Young's remarks.

The case against Commissioner Young should rest solely on his administrative record. That record was duly weighed in the "Young's Scapegoat" editorial and he was found wanting. The case against his administration has been further clinched since that time by the continued errors in the administration of the Police Department.

Let any campaign against Mr. Young be waged on his administration of his office. Go after him and his underlings in the Police Department who have done more to humiliate the citizens of this city than any remarks the Commissioner made to the legislators. SNIKSAH.

Religion In The Schools

In the sixth paragraph of my letter on religious education in Virginia which you published on January 11, the statement appears, ". . . the religious teachers are supervised . . ." This should read, "the religious teachers are not supervised."
MARTHA R. ATKINS.
Hamilton, Va.

Mrs. Martha R. Atkins speaks of approximately $50 per year each that teachers are paid for the 36 hours in schools having the weekly hour of released time. She seems to consider it teachers' time lost for the taxpayer. Do teachers waste this time? Have they no work for which they are glad to have an extra hour released from actual teaching? She mentions, too, the maintenance of school buildings from tax funds. Are school maintenance expenses more because a room is used an hour a week to teach something other than reading, writing and arithmetic? ZORA W. BUTLER.
Washington.

Mrs. Atkins seems to be angry because her child's religious teacher has shown her child her mother's sin. The Bible condemns cigarettes as much as it condemns murder, stealing, and other vile sins and crimes. No, it doesn't mention the word "tobacco" or "cigarettes," because they weren't known in Bible days. However, God's word says "Spend not your money for that which is not bread," or similar words.

Too Much Jazz

John Crosby's article on the public's taste in music, published on January 2, interested and pleased me. I had long suspected that there were many listeners who were not satisfied with the steady diet of jazzing and crooning fed us, but I did not realize that over half of the listeners prefer better music. Apparently the advertizers and the program directors do not.

Witness the early morning hours when something restful would ease the painful processes of preparing for another workday. Everywhere you turn is the cheapest of jazz, commercials and, worse than the commercials, the waggish clowning of the announcers. Out of the half dozen stations in this area at least one might soothe and cheer us with the melodies of Gilbert and Sullivan, light Viennese waltzes or our modern folk songs, like those from "Oklahoma" or "Carousel."

Let me pay tribute to the classical programs from WQQW. But some of these are a little severe for the casual listener and for AM they stop at dark. And the hour of symphonies every night from WINX is much appreciated.

Except for these programs the evenings are almost as barren as the mornings. The Kaltenborns, the mysteries, the giveaways and the big national programs are fine, but there are many of us who prefer to eat and read and work with a background of melody such as Musak pipes into the restaurants and hotels for the dinner hour.

Many of us would be happy if by agreement at least one station in Washington would at all time be broadcasting a melodic program for those who cannot stand jazz and who do not demand the classics. I do not think that this would be a combination in restraint of trade.

"Liberal" Republicans

A group of 13 self-styled "liberal" Republican Senators, met to launch a drive against Senator Taft as chairman of the Republican policy committee, and elect Senator Lodge of Massachusetts in his place.

On the list of 15 measures in which there was a clear line-up between liberals and reactionaries, only one of these "liberal" Republicans, Senator Morse of Oregon, had a two thirds good record. Two others of the 13 voted right 8 times out of 15. Ten of the 13 did not vote right even half the time. Senator Lodge, himself, voted right only as often as did Senator Taft whom he was opposing.

These so-called "liberal" Republicans all voted wrong on the effort to extend reciprocal trade agreements for three years, thus showing their basic economic isolationist attitude. All the "liberal" Republicans but one voted wrong in overriding President Truman's veto of the antilabor Taft-Hartley law. All of them voted wrong on the effort to enact the anti-inflation controls asked by President Truman.

All but Senator Morse voted wrong on the effort to enact an excess profits tax law, and all but Senator Tobey voted wrong on the successful effort to override President Truman's veto of the soak-the-poor tax law.

All but two voted wrong on the bill to exempt the railroads from the antitrust law and only one voted right when Congress restricted the application of the Social Security legislation by knocking out about 750,000 people from its beneficiaries.

Apparently this maneuver against Senator Taft was merely an effort to gain an entirely undeserved liberal reputation for a few Republican Senators who are not in fact liberal, but who realize that the bulk of the people really support the program of Harry Truman and want to extend the New Deal rather than retreat from it.

Friendship For China's People

I wish to express deep appreciation for the Rev. Ward McCabe's statement in his letter of January 10. "We cannot abandon every simple, confused Chinese citizen who criticizes Chiang, call such a citizen Red, and write him off forever."

This is, of course, exactly what we are inclined to do. We find ourselves putting all Chinese into two categorical groups, Nationalist and Red, and then trying to choose which we will help and support.

The truth is that the Chinese do not fall into these two categories. There are Chinese in this country and in China who long for American understanding of the fact that many thoughtful Chinese want democracy for their government, earnestly wish that their people might speak to our people without benefit of political channels, and share their basic problems with those of us in this country who might be able to help solve them.

That is, they do not believe that their government can at this point bring what their people need either in understanding by others, or by development of security. They do believe that individuals, once they comprehend that the Chinese to a very great extent repudiate the Nationalist regime while at the same time they repudiate the Communist expansion, would work with them in the development of water power, transportation, medical aid and birth control, improved agriculture, and education.

These things, many of them at least, Christian missions have worked for but the essential form of mission work is one not easily adaptable to the present need.

What the Chinese people need is the certainty that American people are not going to throw them into one or the other of the two equally hopeless classes.

Mr. McCabe has truly pointed out that Russian influence clearly existed early in the Chinese Nationalist Party. It should further be pointed out that at that time Russian communism had not degenerated into dictatorship (a point missed, I believe, in the Bolton report) but was still in the rather idealistic stage which would naturally appeal to any people carrying on a revolution against domination. The ideal of democracy still exists in many Chinese as, I pray, it does in us, and it is the real defense against any dictatorship—it is the core of freedom.

The responsibility that rests on Americans, as I see it, is therefore to think and to decide how we may make contact with freedom-loving Chinese; how we may establish services which have no intended political meaning but which may slowly and surely give the Chinese a measure of security. Whatever government China eventually has will be greatly affected by these spots of constructive development and by the little people here and in China who feel a bond of oneness in a struggle which was not won by all the men and money provided through governments.

How To Win The Cold War

By Andre Visson

Coordination Vital

THOSE who may still be unaware of the immense impact of the cold war on our daily lives should have a look at the United States budget. Of the 41 billion dollars marked for expenditures—the largest in "peacetime"—about 20 billions are assigned, directly or indirectly, for fighting the cold war. Our own security, our contribution to the security of our western European allies, as well as our economic aid to them, impose this enormous burden upon the American taxpayer.

As heavy as this burden may be, no American would resent it if only he had confidence that it would prevent the present cold war from developing into a shooting one. Unfortunately, the way we are waging the cold war does not always inspire great confidence in the wisdom of our strategy.

We are, beyond doubt, much stronger than our adversaries—the Soviets and their satellites. We are stronger militarily, economically and, above all, morally. But we have a lamentable weakness which must be overcome if we want to win the cold war without bleeding ourselves to financial and economic exhaustion. This weakness lies in the lack of coordination.

THE western European nations must achieve greater coordination in their economic and military efforts. We must achieve greater coordination in our economic and military aid to Europe. And it is not easy for democratic nations to do this. Even our totalitarian adversaries, using totalitarian methods, are having increasing difficulty in their policy of imposing coordination on their satellites.

But for the Western democracies it is infinitely more difficult to effect coordination. Coordination cannot be imposed; it must be accepted freely. And while western Europeans, as well as Americans, realize in growing numbers that coordination is indispensable, that without it we cannot attain our vital objectives, there is still too much confusion, too much uncertainty and, especially, too much unwillingness to make sacrifices, without which no democratic-style coordination can be achieved.

What are our vital objectives? They are security and prosperity. Only when we have attained them will we know that we have won the cold war. Since it has become a truism that security and prosperity are interdependent, we find ourselves compelled to spend billions of dollars for both our own arming and for our military and economic aid to Europe. But we must understand the fundamental differences inherent in the two types of aid.

THE North Atlantic agreement—just drafted but still a secret—is a defensive instrument. The ERP, which began to function nine months ago, is a dynamic idea, and therefore an offensive instrument. The complete success of ERP can do more to weaken and shake off the Soviet grip on eastern and central Europe than the successful establishment and functioning of the North Atlantic group.

The North Atlantic agreement is aimed at blocking military expansion and making the Soviets realize that they will take a severe beating if they cross the present line, which runs across Germany and western Europe. The ERP is aimed primarily at blocking the Communist ideological expansion in western Europe. However, an ultimate goal is to make the people behind the iron curtain realize that they will never attain anything like the prosperity which, with our aid, western Europeans hope to attain four years from now.

But we must make it clear to western Europeans, and to ourselves, that unless there is greater cooperation within ERP, within the North Atlantic group, and between these two programs, we can never win the cold war.

Baron Snoy, the Belgian delegate to the European organization of the Marshall Plan countries, rightly pointed out that there was "no precedent in history" for what this organization has been able to achieve in nine months! But this is only a beginning. And Robert Marjolin, the secretary general of the organization and one of the ablest Frenchmen of his generation, with real European concepts, has properly emphasized the need for coordinating Europe's hitherto national economic plans into one master plan.

But we too need a master plan for the coordination of ERP and the North Atlantic agreement, if we want to win the cold war. How this can be done will be examined in the next article.

Matter of Fact

Tying Our Haymaker in a Sling

By Stewart Alsop

THE President's budget poses a simple but fateful question which Congress is now called upon to answer. The question is this: Is it wise for the United States now to reduce decisively its offensive strength in the one area in which this country is clearly capable of real superiority over its only potential enemy? Obviously this is about as important a question as any which confronts Congress.

There has been much sound and fury about the defense budget, and there will be much more. But the essential facts are simple enough, and they should be fully understood.

Whether with 10 divisions or 12, the American Army cannot, in peacetime, approach anything like numerical equality with the vast Red army. Moreover, the Soviet Union and its satellites are even now virtually isolated economically from the rest of the world, and no one supposes that a naval blockade would have any decisive effect in case of war.

Thus, as Winston Churchill has pointed out, the real balance of power between the Soviet Union and the non-Soviet world rests on the fact that the American long-range Strategic Air Force is believed capable of delivering atomic bombs to the industrial heart of the Soviet Union. That is the one element which balances Russian superiority on the ground and Russian invulnerability from the sea.

B-36 Performance Surprises

THIS IS, basically, the reasoning which led Congress last spring to authorize the organization of a 70-group Air Force. This reasoning is, of course, based on one assumption—that in case of war the American long-range bombers could, in fact, reach their targets.

Since this capability has often been questioned, certain facts should be emphasized. First, the new, immensely long-range B-36, destined to become the basic weapon of the Strategic Air Force, has been criticized for slowness and vulnerability. In fact, according to Air Force experts, the B-36 has now proved fully 25 per cent better in range, bomb load and speed than was originally anticipated.

Second, as regards range, it is obviously highly unlikely that potential air bases in England, the Middle East and the Far East would all fall simultaneously to the Red Army in case of war. But even if this were to happen, the B-36, according to undoubted authority, could now take off from Maine or Alaska and, by refueling in the air, could reach the main industrial targets in the Soviet Union and return.

Finally, the most exacting experiments, including maneuvers over heavily defended England, have convinced the men who would have to do the job that the necessary targets could be reached with no more than a 10 per cent combat loss, and probably with considerably less.

A further fact should be understood. The Air Force does not and cannot consist exclusively of long-range strategic bombers. There must be sufficient fighter strength to defend the continental United States. There must be fighter defense for bases abroad. And there must be fighter and short-range bomber support for the Army.

THUS the 70-group program allowed for only 20 long-range bomber groups. Of the 48 groups to which the Air Force is reduced in the budget, only a slightly higher proportion, perhaps 15 groups, can consist of strategic bombers. Since the Strategic Air Force and the American power to take the offensive immediately in case of war are virtually synonymous, this means a reduction of 25 per cent in American offensive power.

This reduction in American power will save the taxpayers something over a billion dollars. To maintain present air strength and achieve the 70-group target in 1952, would require an Air Force appropriation this year of about 6 billion dollars, as against the proposed appropriation of 4.6 billion dollars. But is the saving worth the price?

A Strategic Air Force is, of course, no substitute for an Army and Navy. To be sure, the fact that the three services have sliced the budget pie into almost equal slices gives rise to an obvious suspicion. That is that the slicing was done, not by means of an objective assessment of strategic needs, but by the simple method described in Kenneth Graham's "The Wind in the Willows": "A pistol for the rat, a pistol for the mole, a pistol for the toad, and a pistol for the badger." This suspicion suggests an area of useful congressional inquiry.

Yet, even if the suspicion is justified, the fact remains that the Army plays an essential role in the developing strategic concept which calls for holding a rearmed western Europe in case of attack by the Red army. Moreover, if this whole concept is not to fall to the ground, the Navy must be enabled to make the great effort to surmount the threat of the new high-speed Snorkel submarines. But above all else, Congress must seriously inquire whether a reduction of American strategic bombing capacity does not imperil the whole precarious balance of power between the Soviet Union and the Western world.

On that balance, more than on anything else, the peace of the world depends. Peace in these times is not cheap, but it is a great deal cheaper than war.

Little Impact on Culture

New Blow for Racism

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

RACE, in itself, has had little to do with the origins and growth of human civilization, according to a Smithsonian Institution investigator.

The conclusion, by Dr. John R. Swanton, ethnologist, is presented in his paper on "Primary Centers of Civilization," one of 18 scientific articles in the annual report of the Smithsonian Institution.

Ultra-white and ultra-black races, Dr. Swanton pointed out, have not developed primary centers of culture, though they were in contact with them and doubtless made considerable contributions.

Three of the world's major civilizations, he explained, developed among dark, narrow-headed whites, the so-called Mediterraneans of the Near East. But in all three centers, particularly that of Egypt, there are mixtures of lighter white races and negroids.

Center to South

THE two other primary centers, China and America, arose among members of the race usually classified as "yellow," he reported. The Mayas and Peruvians, highly-cultured South American Indians, were designated as civilization founders in the New World.

A more significant factor than race, Dr. Swanton concluded, is location. All the civilizations have arisen in areas containing heterogenous populations or close to areas of divergent cultures, he pointed out. Culture centers of both the Old and New World, he added, were near the central parts of the continents and close to main mountain chains.

The Smithsonian annual report contains articles by its own staff and outside experts on subjects ranging from mollusks to bats, telegraphy to atomic energy and ancient submerged islands to airplane propulsion.

Among the most readable is the Bikini-revisited report of Dr. Leonard T. Schultz, curator of fishes of the National Museum, who reported he found little scarring of life in its lower forms at the atomic explosions site.

The same species of fish and other marine organisms were found in about the same abundance as before, Dr. Schultz reported. Nor did there appear to be any change in ways of life or any noticeable decline in vigor.

Only Blast Damage

THE Bikini resurvey, made a year after the bomb tests, showed that though millions of individual fish and other sea denizens were killed by the explosion, the forms of animal life were probably less sensitive to destructive radiations than man and the higher animals, Dr. Schultz said.

There may have been profound genetic changes in surviving organisms, he said, but those could not be expected to make their appearance for several generations in sufficient degree to be measured.

A special article on bats, by Dr. Brian Vesey-FitzGerald, British naturalist, explained their ability to avoid collision in flight in total darkness.

The bats, he said, constantly emit squeaks with a vibration range between 25,000 and 75,000 a second, mostly above the limit of human hearing (about 30,000). Extremely sensitive to echoes from these vibrations, bats accordingly can judge the location of objects in their paths within a fraction of an inch on the darkest night, or when they have been blinded.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Reds Arm Both Jews and Arabs

By Drew Pearson

TRAGEDY of the Palestine situation is that two sides—Soviet agitators and British imperialists—have been using it as a battleground. Meanwhile, the United States has been vacillating all over the lot regarding Palestine peace.

Soviet aid to Israel has come in the form of arms from the giant Skoda Works in Czechoslovakia, flown to Tel Aviv frequently in American private planes. This was first reported by this columnist last July 18, and has been going on for a long time.

British aid to the Arabs, to counterbalance this, has taken various forms. Not long ago a British field artillery regiment moved from Palestine through the Suez Canal to Cyrenaica. When they got to Cyrenaica they were minus weapons, but the Egyptian army had more weapons.

Meanwhile, King Abdullah has announced the organization of a "Royal Trans-Jordan Air Force." There is only one place where he has secured arms in the past—England.

Meanwhile, also, six tanks manufactured for the British in the United States have been captured by the Jews in the Negeb; the SS Derryheer unloaded British war equipment at Basra, and British "Fury" fighters have been delivered to Rashid Airfield in Iraq.

Latest arms deal, however, is the most alarming. The Arab army of Iraq has just completed a deal with Czechoslovakia to buy small arms and airplanes. These will come largely from the Russian-controlled Skoda Works—with Moscow's enthusiastic blessing. In other words, Russia is using the Palestine fighting as an excuse to arm not only the Jews but the Arabs throughout the Near East.

This can lead to only one thing—continuous and perhaps contagious war.

Note—John Wiley, United States Ambassador to Iran, has been in Washington pleading with the State Department to send more arms to Iran. He reports that the Red army is now concentrating on the oil-rich Iranian border.

Real Estate Lobby Rebuffed

HERE is the way one Congressman answered the real estate lobby when invited to a gala real estate dinner in the Presidential Ballroom of the Statler Hotel.

The lobby carefully arranged to have the Congressman — Steve Young, Representative-at-Large from Ohio—receive his invitation from an Ohio realtor. But when Ivan H. Gore, president of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards in Columbus, wrote him, Young declined as follows:

"This is my 'No, thank you' to your invitation to attend your banquet on Wednesday, January 12, in the Presidential Ballroom of the Statler Hotel, Washington.

"The last Congress left homeless veterans still homeless and only the real estate lobby happy. Citizens, generally, in my State did not like that. They said so. They made some changes.

"In electing me as their Congressman, I am sure they expect me to do my own thinking, make my own decisions and pay for my own meals. After all, our Government pays me to do that."

Steelman's Cleaning House

WALL STREET members of the National Security Resources Board aren't at all happy under new Chairman John Steelman, the Alabama-Arkansas boy whom Truman put in charge of this key defense organization.

Thus is the board supposed to make sure that never again will the Nation be caught short without rubber, quinine, tin, manpower and production, as it was immediately after Pearl Harbor. Though Republicans under Arthur Hill, head of Greyhound Bus, have run the Resources Board, Republican members of Congress recently wrote a scathing report criticizing the board's failure to stockpile strategic materials.

Hitherto, Resources Board personnel was appointed by Defense Secretary Forrestal—largely from Wall Street. However, Steelman, Assistant to the President and especially assigned to this clean-up job, has already fired George E. Felton, director of production, and is suspiciously eyeing Matt Robinson, New York investment banker.

Two groups inside the board are pulling in opposite directions. One is the Wall Street group, hitherto in complete control and now led by the amiable, ambitious Robinson, former assistant to deposed Chairman Hill. On the other side are Kenneth Johnson, also a Republican, and James O'Brien, head of the manpower division.

Although manpower was one of the most important factors in the recent war, it was largely neglected by the Resources Board. Chairman Hill never did get round to setting up a labor-management committee, despite frequent protests inside the Cabinet by Undersecretary of Labor John Gibson.

When asked why he failed to establish such a committee, the Greyhound Bus magnate replied:

"Why doesn't labor come to me?"

Steelman, who now replaces Hill, was once chief of the Labor Department's Conciliation Service and once handled labor relations for the A. & P. stores. He is trying to get the board back into balance.

Assignment for Chiang

TESTIFYING behind the closed doors of the Senate watchdog committee recently, former Ambassador to Russia Bill Bullitt urged that Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault be given the green light to reorganize his famed Flying Tigers.

Bullitt also urged that an American "fighting" general be sent to take over the Generalissimo's command—either Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gen. Mark Clark or Gen. Albert Wedemeyer.

"If Chiang Kai-shek's armies are so desperately in need of leadership," asked Senator "Long Tom" Connally of Texas, "why doesn't Chiang go into the field himself?"

Connally also questioned Bullitt sharply on corruption inside the Generalissimo's government. Bullitt admitted that there was considerable corruption, but denied that Chiang himself was a party to it.

The Gallup Poll

Rights Program Has Slim Margin

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S civil rights program, which has stirred up so much controversy in the last year, meets with a mixed reaction from voters polled in a coast-to-coast survey:

1. Among those who have heard of the program, opinion is closely divided on whether it should be passed as a whole, with a small margin in favor of passage.

2. The antipoll tax and anti-Jim Crow features find substantial support, but national opinion is closely divided on the FEPC part of the program. There is also divided sentiment on whether the Federal Government should try to step into lynching cases, or whether the problem is best left to the States.

3. Southern whites in the survey show strong opposition to all of the above features except the abolition of poll taxes, which the majority of those questioned say they favor.

In all sections of the country, however, a substantial number have either not heard about the civil rights program or have no opinion on whether it ought to be passed as a whole by Congress.

Approximately two thirds of all persons interviewed (64 per cent) had heard of the Truman civil rights program, while about one third (36 per cent) had not.

Those who had heard about it were asked:

"How do you feel about Truman's civil rights program? Do you think Congress should or should not pass the program, as a whole?"

The national and sectional vote:

	Pass	Not Pass	No Opin.	Haven't Heard
National	27%	22%	15%	36%
N. Eng., M. Atl.	32	14	14	40
E. Cent.	31	18	16	35
W. Cent.	23	19	19	39
South	13	58	10	19
F. West	26	20	14	40

The poll in the South was conducted among a cross-section of the white voting population. The Negro population would without doubt be overwhelmingly in favor of the civil rights measure. An institute survey among Northern Negroes last April found a vote of 58 per cent in favor of the measure, 2 per cent opposed, while 40 per cent either had not heard of it or had no opinion.

The following additional questions were asked in today's survey:

"One of Truman's proposals concerns interstate travel. Do you think Negroes should or should not be required to occupy a separate part of a train or bus when traveling from one State to another?"

Should be required 43%
Should not 49
No opinion 8

Southern white voters interviewed showed a ratio of 5-to-1 for requiring segregation in travel.

"Some Southern States require every voter to pay a poll tax amounting to about a dollar a year before they can vote. Do you think these poll taxes should be abolished (done away with)?"

Abolish 69%
Retain 21
No opinion 10

Southerners in the poll also voted in favor of abolishing the tax in those States where it still is in force.

"At present, State governments deal with most crimes committed in their own State. In the case of a lynching, do you think the Federal Government should have the right to step in and deal with the crime—or do you think this should be left entirely to the State government?"

Federal Government should step in 43%
Leave to States............44
No opinion 13

The vote of Southern whites was better than two to one against Federal action.

"One of Truman's proposals concerns employment practices. How far do you yourself think the Federal Government should go in requiring employers to hire people without regard to their race, religion, color or nationality?"

All the way...............34%
Part of the way...........8
None of the way..........44
Don't know 14

In the South the vote was heavily in favor of keeping the Federal Government out of the problem.

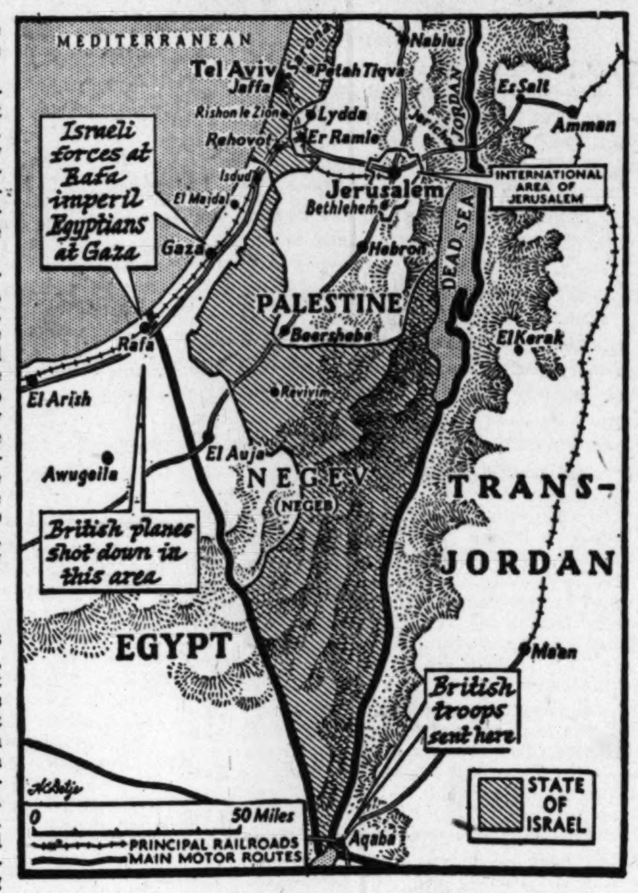
the Jews withdrew. They were on Egyptian soil exactly three days.

At that point the British realized that Egypt, last and strongest of Israel's enemies, was beaten. The Jews had achieved militarily what had been decided on November 29, 1947, by the U. N.—nationhood according to geographic limits defined by the partition plan.

The Jewish success was a British, or, more exactly, a Bevin, failure. Throughout the U. N. negotiations and debates on the subject, the British had sided with the Arabs and against the Jews. Their last futile effort to uphold the Arab cause—actually to retain a foothold in a Middle East which had virtually rejected them—was sponsorship of the Bernadotte Plan which gave the 5000 square miles of the Negeb to Trans-Jordan and, indirectly, to Britain for use as a military base.



The map locates new activity on the supposedly quiescent Palestine front. British planes were shot down over Rafa, on the Palestine border. The British announced they had sent troops to the southern tip of Palestine to guard the Trans-Jordan port of Aqaba on the Red Sea

The Rafa Incident

IT IS CLEAR from all dispatches that the British, on January 7, decided to achieve by force what was denied them in the tribunals of the U. N. On that day a flight of 12 RAF planes undertook an armed reconaissance over Rafa, a frontier town half within Egyptian territory, half on Israeli soil. The planes carried wing bombs. They had, according to Israeli sources, participated with Egyptian planes in an actual bombing raid on Jewish positions. Then they returned for high-level photo missions and low-level visual observation.

One plane was knocked down at 28,000 feet by an Israeli fighter over Israeli soil. The RAF pilot admitted he had been over Jewish territory. Four other RAF planes, including an armed Mosquito, were shot down by the Israelis, two in dogfights, two by antiaircraft fire.

British efforts to "explain" the rekky-raids have not convinced anyone. Some British sources, as official as HMG's seal but otherwise unidentified, sought to throw reporters off by declaring that the missions were made at the request of the U. N. and, later, to provide information requested by Washington. These excuses have been thoroughly discredited.

The uproar over the British flights was still in full cry when news came of the landings at Aqaba. The presence of British troops in this sensitive area within a few days of the Rafa incident cannot be explained as a last-moment decision to preserve the integrity of Trans-Jordan. That country wasn't threatened. It had been defeated by Israel and there were no Jewish troops on Trans-Jordan soil at the time. Trans-Jordan had long before indicated its intention of making peace.

Britain announced that it had "acceded" to a "request" for help from Trans-Jordan on January 8. The announcement had barely been transmitted by radio and press services when news came of the Aqaba landing. A troop ship is not loaded with men and equipment, hauled up the Red Sea and unloaded so quickly. The move must have been long contemplated.

Oil Discovery 'Leaked'

WHAT, then, is Britain's—more properly Bevin's — game? Britain tried to hang onto the Negeb via the Bernadotte Plan which also gave Jerusalem to the Arabs. The Catholic Church, unwilling that Christianity's holy places be placed under Moslem domination, opposed the plan and stopped the British, aided at that moment by the United States, from ramming through its adoption.

But the British still want the Negeb. Why? Because, for one thing, the Israelis have discovered oil in that region and were unable to keep the fact a secret. The British would deprive the Israelis of that oil and so decrease Israel's chances of becoming an economically viable state.

The British also want the Negeb as a military base in the Middle East. The Egyptians don't want them in Egypt or the Sudan. They have no place else to go. They are unwelcome in Syria, Labanon, Iraq and Saudi Arabia. They would only be welcome in Trans-Jordan if that country's King believed he had a chance of gaining the Negeb by providing hospitality for British troops.

Israelis fear that the British will provoke an incident at Aqaba. Their hope is that the U. N. will acknowledge that the British have violated U. N. mediation and pacification orders, brand them as aggressors and demand their withdrawal. Meanwhile Israel is pressing for an armistice with the Egyptians at Rhodes.

But those negotiations may have been prejudiced by the British action. Such direct British intervention as their landing at Aqaba may have given the beaten Egyptians new heart to carry on the struggle against Israel, so prolonging the bloodshed in the Holy Land and daily increasing the danger of a new world war.

Zionism a Bulwark

THE latest British action cannot be excused, even if hinged to the West-East struggle. Britain may have acted to retain a foothold in the Middle East against the day of a war with Russia on the mistaken theory that the Jews will side with Moscow rather than the West. Anyone even vaguely familiar with Zionism, the motivating force behind creation of a Jewish state, knows that there is no meeting ground between Zionism and any totalitarianism, whether brown, black or red. Zionism is the product of totalitarianism persecution. It could not survive in a Moscow-type Communist society and would, actually, be the West's strongest ally in the Middle East against the Soviet.

Britain has flouted the authority of the U. N. embarrassed the State Department in Washington and thrown a lighted faggot into the oil world which could set off a global explosion. It is to be hoped that, despite the obvious difficulties, Israel and Egypt will sign an armistice in Bunche's presence in Rhodes. This might convince the British that a retreat would be the better part of valor. Otherwise a war between Israel and Britain is inevitable. British permanence in Aqaba can be interpreted to mean only that they're looking for trouble.

It Will Take More Education To Make the Koreans Like Us

After three years of effort by Korean unskilled labor and by such industrial engineering personnel as the Army could get from happier surroundings in the United States, south Korea's industrial plant is today operating at perhaps 25 per cent of its prewar level. It was up to about 30 per cent before the north Korean government shut off needed electric power. Some Koreans are now being trained to run their own factories and power plants after the Americans leave.

What of the future? The industry of south Korea, like that of Soviet-sponsored north Korea, is to be socialized. It fell naturally into socialization, since there were no native capitalists in all Korea to take it over when the Japanese left, and the country is certainly no magnet for foreign capital. By their very nature, the mills of the south are integrated into the same economy as the mills of the north.

Ninety per cent of the commerce of all Korea was conducted with Japan before 1945, but today all Koreans hate the Japanese with so cold an enmity that trade with that country can only revive slowly.

THE future of Korea, both north and south, hangs today upon the answer to just one question, and that question will not be answered within the country itself. It will be answered by the Government of the United States.

Will the American people abandon to Communist slavery some 20 million primitive, backward Orientals, whom they once set free from the Japanese and started to educate?

Just last month the Army announced plans for withdrawing the Seventh Infantry Division from Korea at an undisclosed date. Another division and some service troops, however, will be left, and at last report, a regiment or more will stay indefinitely.

So far, aside from supporting American armed forces in south Korea, the Korean aid program has cost the American people about 200 million dollars a year —most of it spent on saving the country from starvation.

That peril is almost ended. But half that expenditure will have to be met for several years if the country is to approach self-support and if its new-fledged citizens are to be taught how to run a democratic government.

East's Mild Winter in the Balance

By Rowland Evans, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

THIS is the time of year when weather wiseacres wax woeful and recall the wonderful white winters of yesteryear.

They say we're in a "cycle," that the weather is getting warmer and that winters in the old tradition are disappearing. Is it true? The country's best weather brains say nobody can tell for sure. They say there is no proof to indicate the existence of fixed-length cycles.

"We can't put much stock in weather cycles," says Jerome Namias, chief of the Weather Bureau's extended forecast section. "We can't prove their existence today, and we'll never be able to."

But what about the rest of this winter's weather? Is it going to be cold and snowy or warm and rainy or what?

To get an idea, look back at the past autumn. Atmospheric conditions which developed during October and November are still substantially in control of the Northern Hemisphere. If they rout the opposition of other developing conditions trying to build up a new controlling pattern, the weather might continue as it has for the past three months.

That would mean a warm, wet East and a cold, dry Southwest. It would mean more thick fogs over central Europe.

Snake-Track Pattern

EASTERN States built up a large excess of temperature and precipitation during the fall. Alabama had disastrous floods. Most of the Southwest experienced unusually cold and dry climate.

Why? The answer lies in the movement of air at altitudes of 20,000 to 40,000 feet.

Here the air moves at tremendous speeds in a west-to-east direction. The speed and precise direction determines what goes on down here.

The Weather Bureau keeps a keen eye on the upper air by use of radar-tracked balloons and recording devices. When accurate, long-range forecasting becomes a fact, it will be through better understanding of the upper air band.

Early last fall bulges appeared in the smooth west-to-east flow of upper air. The air took a meandering path, moving from west to northeast, then down to southeast and back to northeast in a huge S-like pattern.

There is nothing unusual about such movement, but it means one thing—"active conditions."

Namias explains that, weatherwise, "active" means extreme departures from the norm. Thus, the East had one of its wettest and warmest falls.

Moist Air From Gulf

BUT why should north-south variations in the prevailing west-east winds cause these conditions?

Picture a vast river of air 30,000 feet over the United States. It starts in the far Northwest, curves gently southeastward to the Gulf of Mexico and then turns northeastward toward Maine and Nova Scotia, where it again curves back southeastward.

When our westerlies get into that wavy pattern they tend to draw off the cold Alaska-Yukon polar air and leave it scattered all over the Western part of the country. As they curve through Texas and start northeastward, they drain a lot of the moist, warm air over the Gulf of Mexico and deposit it all over the East.

Under this pattern, the area which will receive most precipitation is the one most influenced by the south-to-north element in the westerlies—in last fall's case, our East Coast. And the area which will get coldest and driest is the one most influenced by the north-to-south element.

Weathermen call this the pattern of troughs and ridges. The troughs occur where the air flows at its southernmost limits; the ridges where it bulges farthest north on its way around the hemisphere.

Atmospheric pressures which develop at sea-level in this pattern are directly dependent on the position of ridges and troughs. High pressure areas lie generally south of the ridges and low areas generally north of the troughs.

Pattern Is Changing

DURING late fall, central Europe lay just south of a pronounced ridge, which produced a pretty constant "high" over most of Germany. Highs are likely to produce fogs. That's the reason for last fall's dense fogs so hampering to the Berlin airlift.

If autumn's pattern maintained itself through the winter, the East could expect more warm and wet weather, the Southwest more cold and dry. But a change has been observed by Namias and his top assistants. They note that the ridge-through pattern is slowly shifting westward.

This means the geographical areas which previously underlay ridges now tend to underlie troughs, and vice-versa. In other words, as a ridge moves west a trough follows it. It means the East Coast will stop drawing the warm, moist Gulf air and will begin to receive the much-colder air from Canada. And the Southwest will get less cold air and more warm, moist Pacific Ocean air.

Whether the new pattern will continue to develop, or whether an entirely new atmospheric pattern will emerge as the controlling force in our winter weather, won't be known for several weeks.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

IN A half dozen pages of "Reflections On Gandhi" in Partisan Review, George Orwell succeeds in sketching a remarkably interesting picture of the man—and one comprehensible even to those unversed in things Indian.

"To what extent," asks Orwell, "was Gandhi moved by vanity—by the consciousness of himself as a humble, naked old man, sitting on a praying mat and shaking empires by sheer spiritual power—and to what extent did he compromise his own principles by entering into politics, which of their nature are inseparable from coercion and fraud?"

On the subject of Gandhi's pacifism, Orwell is especially illuminating. It differed from western pacifism, he points out. Its motive was religious, but it was also, he claimed, a definite technique, a method capable of producing desired political results. Gandhi would never pretend that in a war both sides were the same and it made no difference who won.

It is possible, Orwell concedes, that Gandhi did not understand the nature of totalitarianism and saw everything in terms of his own struggle with the British government. In that struggle he was always able to command publicity. And if you believe in "arousing the world," publicity is essential. Is there a Gandhi in Russia at this moment? And if there is, what is he accomplishing?

These and other questions need discussion. But, says Orwell, "it seems doubtful whether civilization can stand another war and it is at least thinkable that the way out lies through non-violence."

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, newish publication backed by Jock Whitney and edited by Gerald Piel, formerly science editor of Life, deserves more attention than it seems to be getting. It is handsomely presented and should appeal to scientists, students and interested laymen. Success, of course, will depend on its not being too simple for the learned and too technical for the rest.

This issue typically covers a wide variety of topics. A new theory about cancer is expounded by Groff Conklin in "Cancer and the Environment." Erich Fromm, psychoanalyst and author, examines Sigmund Freud's theory of the Oedipus complex and finds, from history and Sophocles' plays, that the complex is not primarily sexual, as Freud held, but is characteristic of patriarchal society and family life.

Other articles are by David I. Blumenstock, on "The Upper Atmosphere;" Carl B. Boyer, "The Invention of Analytic Geometry;" Bradford Washburn, on "Mapping Mount McKinley," and Wilton M. Krogman, on "The Record of Human Illness."

JOHN BARTLOW MARTIN, reporter extraordinary, explains how he happened to write his first story for the Saturday Evening Post, "What the Coal Miners Say About John L. Lewis."

During a strike, says Martin, Lewis and the miners are denounced. When there is no strike, "there is a tendency to ignore the whole subject. So I figured it was time someone did a straight objective article on just what the miners think of Lewis. The best way to make a story out of this, was to visit a typical coal town."

And this, according to The Washington Post's "Inside Information" bulletin, is how he found it. He eliminated Illinois and Indiana, where he had preconceived ideas and contacts. He chose soft coal, not anthracite, which is less important and more special. And he chose a northern coal field to avoid the peculiar problems of the South. From there, he narrowed the choice to St. Michael, Pa., a community too small to be on the map.

PREMIUM grade gasoline has been greatly overrated, claims Richard Tupper in the American Motorist. Most people are full of misconceptions about its powers. Regular grade gasoline is suitable for practically all cars now in use, states Tupper. Premium gas has a somewhat higher octane rating and, therefore, has less tendency to "knock" when the motor is under load.

DENTISTS' fees and diagnoses vary astronomically. No one expects dentists to charge identical prices, but they can be expected to agree on work that needs to be done. And prices charged should bear some reasonable relation to each other. Results of a survey made by Cosmopolitan are published in "What Should Your Dentist Charge?", by McLeod Morgan. Agnes Lynn Marshall writes on "Hypnosis."

A TALE involving a huge treasure, kidnaping and murder is told by Edmund L. Palmieri and John Kobler in Life. Totaling more than 66 million dollars, the treasure was being taken north toward the Swiss border by the fleeing Mussolini and a few of his followers, when the party was intercepted. How the bulk of the treasure found its way into the hands of the Communist Party is here related for the first time.

Life also runs magnificent pictures of the Midwest blizzard.

Much Maligned Translator At Last Gets Recognition

By W. G. Rogers
Associated Press Arts Reporter

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Pity the poor translator, whose mistakes are always pointed out by critical busybodies, whose virtues are usually ignored, who is often just a necessary evil to his publisher, an unknown name to the public, and a pest to the author he translates.

Some one did pity him. The Denyse Clairouin Award of $500, in honor of a French Resistance heroine, was inaugurated in 1947 with the gift of a check to Justin O'Brien for his translation of Gide's "Journals." It has just been awarded a second time to Louise Varese for her translation of Baudelaire's "Paris Spleen."

To translate is "sort of like working out a puzzle," says Mme. Varese, wife of Composer Edgar Varese and for 15 years a resident of Greenwich Village. First she reads the book through to get the idea of it and learn its style; then she reads it again to check on her first impressions; the next step is to do a rough draft, by typewriter, and finally to correct and polish.

Three of her translations appeared in 1948. Besides "Paris Spleen," which was published by New Directions, there were Proust's "Pleasures and Regrets" and Sartre's "The Chips Are Down," both published by Lear. Beginning in 1944, she has translated seven other books by Rimbaud, St.-John Perse, Bernanos, Jacques Lemarchand, Julien Gracq and Paul Valery, and now she is in the middle of Stendhal's long "Lucien Leuwen."

She is paid a flat rate or on a royalty basis. If she had nothing else to do she estimates she could translate four books a year.

First drafts run the danger of remaining too French, and last drafts not French enough, for she likes to keep some of the original flavor.

24 Former New Dealers Outline A Program to Avert Depression

ADOLF A. BERLE, JR. . . . Former Assistant Secretary of State | CHESTER BOWLES . . . Former OPA Administrator | LEON KEYSERLING . . . Vice chairman, Council of Economic Advisers

By Sterling North

SAVING AMERICAN CAPITALISM: A Liberal Economic Program. By A. A. Berle, jr., Chester Bowles, Alvin H. Hansen, Leon H. Keyserling and others. Edited by Seymour E. Harris. Knopf. 373 pp. $4.

CAN CAPITALISM survive? Can the democratic way of life survive? Can we avoid a major depression and its probable concomitant tragedy of war or revolution?

Twenty-four of the best liberal economists and social scientists in the United States have here banded together to outline what they believe is our only method for avoiding disaster.

It should be stated immediately that all of these erstwhile New Dealers and their friends detest and fear communism, look with some measure of skepticism upon pure socialism in any form, and are probably more frightened of extreme statism than many of their "conservative" critics.

They believe in American capitalism, but not monopoly; they believe in private enterprise bolstered by public enterprise; they know that in a world of big business, big agriculture and big labor the Goverment must be at least big enough to act as umpire for the good of the much-abused general public.

More specifically (and controversially) they are all devotees of the "Keynesian Revolution," inadequately known to the layman as "public spending," as a necessary balance wheel to avoid the dangerous peaks and valleys of the business cycle.

Government Responsibility

CHESTER BOWLES, in his chapter entitled "Blueprints for a Second New Deal," states Lord Keynes' theory in its simplest form:

For every dollar's worth of production of goods or services there must be created one dollar of potential purchasing power if we are to maintain full production and full employment. Otherwise inventories pile up, men are laid off and a decline sets in.

Since the citizenry and industry cannot be counted upon continuously to maintain the balance between production and purchasing power, only the Government can make up the difference in times of recession.

Most of this book deals with the need for blueprinting Government action in advance of the next catastrophic decline. These men want no boondoggling. They want no "brilliant improvisations." What they do want is a hard-headed, completely planned, adequately detailed program which can go into high gear the moment we begin to see dangerous signs of wholesale unemployment.

They believe taxes should be almost automatically geared to the business cycle—high in boom times, low in depression years.

They believe that Lilienthal won his debate with Ickes on decentralization, and that many regional authorities like the TVA should be set up with Federal funds (but regionally controlled for the vast benefit of the valleys where these power and flood control projects are located).

They are ardent conservationists with specific suggestions for saving our tragically endangered top soil, forests and dwindling minerals.

Bitter Toward Builders

THEY are slum clearance enthusiasts who realize that for an annual expenditure of less than 1 per cent of what the war costs us each year every slum in the United States can be replaced with good low-priced housing.

They are bitter critics of the inefficient and unsound private building industry (to which they might have added the building trade unions), which has made good low-cost housing impossible without Government aid.

They are almost uncritically prolabor.

They know less about agriculture than they do about urban problems, less about international relations than about domestic spending.

And, finally, they suffer under the serious illusion that civil liberties can survive under a number of political systems other than democracy. This is yet to be proved, and is probably the most dangerous supposition in the book.

At the very least, here is one side of the great debate presented with a high degree of literacy and intelligence. It should be the subject at every forum and town meeting in America if we are to avoid the horrors of another and even larger depression.

In a Nutshell...

WHITE MAGIC. By C. Grant Loomis. Mediaeval Academy of America, Cambridge 38, Mass. 250 pp. $5.

THE MIRACULOUS happenings associated with the saints and other good men of Christianity in the first 15 centuries of the faith is the subject of this anthology. It is divided into such categories as legends of divine birth and precocity, healing and travel. The examples cited within these categories are chosen to illustrate the range of imagination, and the saints range alphabetically from Aaron to Zoyl. C. Grant Loomis is associate professor of German at the University of California and an authority on sacred legend. His book is addressed to students of religion, literature and folklore.

NOT NEGOTIABLE. By Manning Coles. Doubleday. $2.25.

INTERNATIONAL crooks don't bother with such trifles as the Jodhpur Emerald in these latter days of Iron Curtains and hard and soft currency. They use stolen Nazi plates to run off counterfeit pounds and francs, and thereby threaten the financial stability of western Europe. British Intelligence, in the person of the dashing Tommy Hambledon, and a nicely complementary character from the French Surete team up to wreck this gang of scoundrels. The latter range from a former gauleiter's mistress to a truant baker boy, and there is a whole festoon of subplots to satisfy the romantic, the psychoanalytic and the plain bloodthirsty.

FOR PEAC COMES DROPPING SLOW. By Gerald Donohue. Naylor Co., San Antonio. 200 pp. $2.75.

STEPHEN TODD, a New York newspaperman, is assailed by indecisions when he returns from World War II, but a death in the family calls him to the Texas ranch country. There he resolves his problems in making a choice between the city girl and the country girl. Pleasant, well written light romance by a Texas newspaperman.

DARK ABYSS. By Clifford Knight. Dutton. $2.50.

THIS STORY is set in the currently fashionable opulence of Palm Springs, and is heavily influenced by the psychiatric cycle which seems to spin on and on, but the lady who dominates the action is a true throwback to the early Jim Cain. She merely dresses better and speaks more grammatically than the calloused characters of "The Postman." Edith Hicks goes into action after her epileptic husband does a fatal dive to the bathroom tiles, apparently from natural causes (this is never satisfactorily cleared up), then runs the gamut of homicide for assorted motives. There is a furious amount of shuttling between Los Angeles and the desert, and the drone of the motor tends to lull you, especially when you seem to have seen the scenery before.

FRAMED IN GUILT. By Day Keene. Mill; Morrow. $2.50.

THAT TITLE is a rather heavy handicap for any writer, but if you'll stick with Day Keene only as far as the clubhouse, you'll probably go the distance. He uses the old device of mistaken identity, but you'll hardly recognize it in transatlantic trappings, with threads running from a wartime "marriage of convenience" in England to the rancho of a $3000-a-week Hollywood writer. It is neatly woven, with interpolated chapters that bring in a central character at a late stage of the action. The dialogue is brisk enough to warrant comment, and the story is altogether notable for its brief portrait of a producer who might actually have existed outside of fiction and Hollywood gossip columns.

A HISTORY OF POPULAR MUSIC IN AMERICA. By Sigmund Spaeth. Random House. 729 pp. $5.

DR. SPAETH covers the field of American popular music from "Yankee Doodle" to "Now Is the Hour" and "Nature Boy." His discussion of the origins of songs of America's cradle days is concise and informative, and his good sense and humor are evident wherever the writing is not bogged down by the cataloging necessary for a reference book. Indicative of the extent of his listings of music is the 66-page index. Dr. Spaeth's book will appeal not only to those working professionally, but to those who want to settle arguments at parties.

MADE IN AMERICA. By John A. Kouwenhoven. Doubleday. 303 pp. Ill. $5.

JOHN KOUWENHOVEN'S book is subtitled, "The Arts in Modern Civilization," but he is primarily concerned with the United States because it is "the only major world power to have taken form as a cultural unit in the period when technological civilization was spreading throughout the world." No academician in outlook, Kouwenhoven's discussion of the arts that sprang from native industrialism is fresh and vital and deserves wide reading. The illustrations are numerous and apt.

Jane's Looks Warily at New Jap 'Fleet'

Jane's Fighting Ships 1947-48. Macmillan. 498 pp. $20.

JANE'S suggests in this instructive and entertaining 50th anniversary edition that the Japanese fleet is about to arise like a phoenix from its ashes.

Recognizing that a fleet of 125 vessels is being formed to police Japanese waters; no ships to exceed 1500 tons' displacement or have a speed above 15 knots; total tonnage limited to 50,000; personnel not more than 10,000 officers and men, the publishers call attention to this salient historical fact:

"One has only to recall the renaissance of the German fleet which followed the period of comparative quiescence during which (on paper) the tonnage restrictions of the Treaty of Versailles were observed."

Russian Salvage

THIS edition of Jane's has considerable to say about what happened to Japan's fleet after World War II. Parts of the story will be found under the heading, "Russia." Former German and Italian units also figure conspicuously in this section.

Jane's accounts for this by pointing out that while other Allies used surrendered ships for target practice and experiments with bombs and torpedoes, Russia has salvaged some wrecks which would not seem to be worth the cost and trouble, "apparently with the idea that nothing must be wasted if it can possibly be utilized."

These are Russian ships: Hatsuzakura, Ikino, former USS Milwaukee, 1921, now the Murmansk; former H. M. S. Royal Sovereign, 1915, now the Arkhangelsk; former Graf Zeppelin, 1938; former Lutzow, 1931; former Schleswig-Holstein, 1906, etc.

Section of Silhouettes

THERE are many facts and illustrations regarding old and new construction and future plans of the navies of the world.

A supplemental feature of importance is the vivid story of the two biggest warships ever built, the Japanese battleships Yamato and Musashi, and the terrific pounding they received from United States naval aircraft and submarines.

Naval enthusiasts should not miss the index to major warships of the world in "Fighting Ships, 1897-1947," and the silhouettes of the world's ironclads, 1860-1945.

This production is Jane's finest.

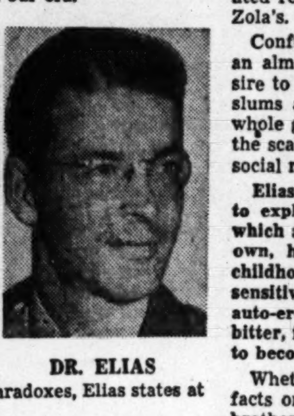
Valiant Job On Dreiser

A Study of a Paradoxical Giant

THEODORE DREISER: Apostle of Nature. By Robert H. Elias. Knopf. 354 pp., $4.

ROBERT H. ELIAS (Ph.D., U. of Penn., 1948) has made a valiant if not completely successful attempt to write both a biography and a critical estimate of Theodore Dreiser, the bewildered and brooding colossus of American realism and the most paradoxical novelist of our era.



DR. ELIAS

It must be said to the young doctor's credit that he realizes the heroic proportions of his task and is duly dismayed by his assignment. Actually, Elias has a distinct advantage over more discerning critics since his apparent blindness to Dreiser's really appalling prose style allows him to concentrate on the larger social, philosophical and spiritual values which constituted Dreiser's undeniable contribution to American literature.

Without completely resolving any of the Dreiser paradoxes, Elias states at least two of them clearly:

How could an exponent of "survival of the fittest" also be a social reformer eager to defend the weak?

How could the son of an ardently Catholic father come to be the Dreiser who wrote a novel that was labeled lewd and profane?

A Formidable List

TO THOSE seeming contradictions in the life and letters of Dreiser, Elias might have added:

How could the cautious editor of the Delineator and other Butterick publications, who banned illustrations of women smoking, be the same man whose novels enraged the Comstocks?

How could a moralist so sensitive to the sufferings of women in all his stories give his first wife such hell-on-earth through constant unfaithfulness?

How could a passionate partisan of the poor be so naively fascinated by the rich and the powerful?

How could a self-styled individualist of Dreiser's sturdy variety be sucked in (even in his near-senility) by the Communists?

How could a humanitarian who hated injustice fail to see the menace of the Germans in both wars?

How could a defender of the underdog rail at Roosevelt?

How could a writer who had turned out millions of words and edited tens of millions, fail to learn the simple rules of grammar, punctuation and spelling?

How could a determinist who felt that all human beings are the victims of an unbroken chain of cause and effect also believe that society (individuals en masse) can assume moral responsibility for the lapses of its component parts?

And, finally, how could a writer who had all of the faults suggested above become one of the greastest forces in shaping American literature?

Compares With Zola

DR. ELIAS rightly insists that Dreiser cannot be dismissed as "a man who, despite a sophomoric philosophy, wrote great novels." The author could have proved, had he been equipped to draw the parallel, that Dreiser's contribution to unadulterated realism and honest reporting was as great as Zola's.

Confused and wordy though he was, Dreiser had an almost painful integrity, an overwhelming desire to picture life as he had seen it in shacks and slums as well as in mansions. His fight freed a whole generation of writers, forced readers to drop the scales from their eyes and cleared the way for social reform.

Elias uses Dreiser's own approach in attempting to explain the road his hero traveled. In prose which at times is only a trifle better than Dreiser's own, he takes the reader through the tortured childhood, adolescence and young manhood of the sensitive, rebellious, frightened, poverty-stricken, auto-erotic, dream-enamored, idealistic, romantic, bitter, frustrated and poorly educated boy who was to become the father of American realism.

Whether through sheer sloppiness, ignorance of facts or fear of libel, Elias often fails to identify brothers and sisters of Dreiser whose lapses from virtue figure so prominently in Dreiser's novels. But in no single volume so far published is there so much documented material about Dreiser himself, from his ragged, hungry childhood in Indiana and Chicago, through his brooding pubescence spent at menial jobs, and his newspaper days in Chicago, St. Louis and New York, to his years of worldly success as a magazine editor earning the then large salary of $10,000 a year.

A Legendary Figure

THE author does equally well in tracing Dreiser's struggle to break away from hack work and become a creative artist; his tragic experiences with publishers lacking the moral courage to push his work; his constant battle with censors, and his final "arrival" as an internationally famous novelist.

It is unfortunate that Dr. Elias makes no serious attempt to evaluate the novels about which he has uncovered so many facts and anecdotes. But he does create in the reader's mind a desire to go back and reread "Sister Carrie" (which now seems so dull and respectable), "Jennie Gerhardt" and perhaps "The Genius" and "An American Tragedy."

Are they as exciting as they seemed to be when we first read them? Has the foggy prose improved with age? Have more recent and less bewildered realists supplanted the old master entirely?

Dreiser will always have a place in the history of American literature, but an evening spent with a shelf of his books seems to indicate that fewer readers will be willing to plow through the Germanic clumsiness of his prose as years go by.

He will probably become a folk figure, remembered, respected, but unread, a brooding spirit of tragedy and bewilderment, chanting as Charles Chaplin did over his grave, "Oh, what is this that knows the road I came?"—STERLING NORTH.

An Urbane Marylander

Fascinating Travel Diary Is Dated 1744

Gentleman's Progress, The Itinerarium of Dr. Alexander Hamilton, 1744. Edited by Carl Bridenbaugh. University of North Carolina Press. 267 pp. Ill. $4.

THE itinerary of Alexander Hamilton, M. D., of Annapolis, Md., led him north on a trip that may roughly be described as a wye, dividing a little north of New York City with one branch extending to York, Me., and the other branch to Schenectady. En route to Maine he traveled the length of Long Island, and returning he followed the Connecticut shore.

Accompanied by his slave, Dromo, he set forth on horseback on May 30, 1744. He arrived home September 27, and concludes:

"In these my northern travells I compassed my design in obtaining a better state of health, which was the purpose of my journey . . . I compleated, by land and water together, a course of 1624 miles. The northern parts I found in generall much better settled than the southern. As to politeness and humanity, they are much alike except in the great towns where the inhabitants are more civilized, especially att Boston."

The final sentence suggests Hamilton's lively powers of observation and candor and why his travel diary is as entertaining as it is informative.

The editor, Dr. Carl Bridenbaugh, director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture at Williamsburg, for whom the book is published, refers to the "Itinerarium" as an "Inside the Colonies in 1744," and so it is in many ways.

Of the Philadelphians, Hamilton observes: "The people in general are inquisitive concerning strangers. If they find one comes there upon the account of trade or traffic, they are fond of dealing with him and cheating him if they can."

Hamilton visited "Cuckold's Town," the former name of Richmond on Staten Island, and a few miles beyond "dined upon what I never had eat in my life before—a dish of fried clams" warmed in a bed-warming pan used as a chafing dish.

In New York, he notes, "The women of fashion here appear more in publick than in Philadelphia and dress much gayer. They come abroad generally in the cool of the evening and go to the Promenade."

Of the upstate New York Dutch, Haimilton found little to admire. Though they kept their houses scrubbed and clean, "they are in their persons slovenly and dirty," and their thoughts are "turned upon profit and gain."

At Jamaica, L. I., "We stopt there att the SHign of the Sun and paid dear for our breakfast, which was bread and mouldy cheese, stale beer and sower cyder."

At Newport, R. I., the young ladies "are generally very airy and frolicksome . . . . There is one cliff here, just bluff upone the ocean, called Hog's hole, out of which filtres some springs of very fine fresh water. It affords a cool pleasant shade in the summer time, for which the ladys go there to drink tea in a summer's afternoon. We encountered some fair dames there and had abundance of gallantry and romping."

As a professional man with a scientific attitude, Hamilton observed with detachment; as a Scottish-born resident of the Colonies, he was not inclined to deprecate them; as a man of his time, he spoke with the frankness of the period, and as a gentleman of culture he observed life with a degree of urbane and tolerant amusement.

Three years after his trip he married into the prominent Dulany family of Maryland and devoted himself to politics as well as medicine. He died in 1756 at the age of 44. The Tuesday Club, of which he had been one of the founders, never met again.

Hamilton's drawings of the convivial club are included in the book—which is bound in old rose cloth as gay as a night in New York drinking "stoutly with the Hungarian Club, who are all bumper men."—LEE GROVE.

Sholem Asch, author of "Tales of My People," was born near Warsaw in 1880. He studied to be a rabbi, but at the age of 20 he began to sell stories to Polish newspapers. He enlarged his medium to novelette length, like "The Little Town," published in English for the first time in this new volume. From 1910 to 1925 he lived in this country and became an American citizen. He left because the "terrific tempo" of New York life interfered with his writing. Now he is back to stay

Forever Agate

Budget ($6) Escapes Levity and Brevity

Book of the Month

THE BUDGET of the United States Government for the Fiscal Year ending June 30, 1950. Government Printing Office. 1429 pp. $6 (paper).

AS CERTAIN as death and taxes (the simile is used advisedly) is the annual appearance of another volume from the anonymous authors of this remarkable work. Even Mazo De La Roche, with her Jalna books, has never been able to equal them for constancy.

Some attention has already been given this year's edition in the news columns, particularly the fact that it contains 42 billion words, or dollars, or some such arbitrary unit of measurement. That is a rather materialistic approach to the evaluation of a work of art. Did anyone count the commas in "Gone With the Wind" or the asterisks in the expurgated version of "Tobacco Road?"

Another point that has been noted jeeringly by the newsroom cobblers is that the book weighs 6½ pounds, 4 ounces more, they emphasize, than the 1949 (fiscally speaking) best seller by the same authors. It is to be expected that any conscientious craftsman, given a twelvemonth to mull over his masterpiece, would find points which needed elucidation, descriptions which needed elaboration and bits of sketchy dialogue which should be rounded into full speaking parts.

Nothing Frothy About It

ACTUALLY, the authors are to to be commended for their Spartan avoidance of such dog-eared devices as drawing room conversation, or dockwallopers' wisecracks, for that matter. Would you expect the puerile mouthings of fops, and the solecisms of stevedores, to issue from the same pen that could set down a deathless passage like this?—

"Provided, that no details from any executive department or independent establishment in the District of Columbia or elsewhere to the commission's central office in Washington or to any of its regional offices shall be made during the current fiscal year, but this shall not affect the making of details for service as members of the board of examiners outside the immediate offices of the commission in Washington or of the regional directors, nor shall it affect the making of details of persons qualified to serve as expert examiners on special subjects."

A "Provided Further" follows, but that tiny fragment from this magnum opus should be enough to establish its literary merit. Joyce's stream of consciousness never produced anything more fluid than that.

Truman in Big Type

TYPOGRAPHICALLY, parts of this volume are a challenge to the ingenuity of the House of Knopf and perhaps even the Heritage Press. The President's budget message, which serves as a preface, is set in large type and is perfectly centered in the page, leaving ample margin for casual computations. The hundreds of tables, on the other hand, are of microscopic fineness that tacitly suggest you pass over them to the more readable parts of the work.

The prose, incidentally, is used to break up still more tables, so that the casual scanner can hop and skip through the volume like a ballet dancer, or a House reading clerk. It saves no end of time, and you get the same massive impact.

One last comment occurs to the critic, reluctantly laying aside this annual delight. That is the liberal use of bold-face brackets of impressive dimensions, apparently to provide surcease for the wearying eye. Sprinkled through a solid column, they give an effect that could be obtained by the novice only with the aid of a leaky fountain pen.

This volume is unquestionably the best work yet of its unsung authors. It is well worth the price—the $6 price, that is.

D. C. Library Cut Sharply

THE Public Library failed to receive funds in the new District budget for remodeling the main building at 9th and K sts. nw.

Requests by Librarian Harry N. Peterson for $34,000 to renovate the building and for $8438 to equip a new reading room in the basement were among major cuts made by the Commissioners.

The library was cut back a total of $84,000 to $1,214,000. Currently, the library is operating under a $1,201,000 appropriation.

A request for $29,110 for special repairs, including new lighting fixtures, was cut to $23,000.

A request for an increase of $20,000 over the current $97,085 appropriation for the purchase of new books was cut to $12,000. Peterson said that funds allowed for the purchase of equipment would have to be diverted to the book fund to take care of increased costs.

Notes on the Margin

BESIDES being Monday, tomorrow is the day that the first non-fiction book in 80 years devoted exclusively to the War of 1812 will appear, according to Dutton.

The last one was Benson Lossing's "Pictorial Field-Book," published in 1868.

The new book is titled, naturally, "The War of 1812." The author is Francis F. Beirne, a native of Ashland, Va., who is now associate editor of the Baltimore Sun and a columnist under the name of "Christopher Billop."

"The book is certainly the most grandiose and original anthology I have seen, and I greatly admire the literary knowledge and circumspection of its compiler.

"Critics may say that now and then the selection is a bit haphazard, but it would be impossible to avoid this in a collection of such wide scope. Apart from the wealth of English poetry and prose the book contains, I consider the choice of French and German pieces particularly happy."

Wars Traced To Struggle For Cropland

PLOWSHARES INTO SWORDS, by Arthur P. Chew. Harper, $3.

ARTHUR P. CHEW is a writer whose prose has brightened Agriculture Department reports, particularly those from the office of the Secretary, since he was brought here by Secretary Henry Cantwell Wallace (not to be confused with his son, a later Secretary, Henry Agard) right after World War I.

In this book he has expressed a philosophy that, to say the least, is a departure from theories we have had shoved at us so frequently in recent years.

Chew's thesis is that wars are born of the struggle between industrial nations for agricultural land to provide the food and raw materials for their people and their factories.

The colonial expansion of Britain and, on lesser scales, of other western European countries, accompanied by England's industrial revolution (which the colonization program made possible), set the stage and the pattern.

The colonies were two things:

1. The source of the raw materials for the hungry factories of the mother country, and the granary for its people. Chew points out that populations of industrial countries grow faster those of purely agricultural ones.

2. Customers for the manufactured goods made from their own raw materials. The mother country also provided the highly profitable services, the transportation and distribution—the ships and the salesmanship.

Germany tried, later, to copy the British system. It accomplished great industrial growth, and fought two wars for a "place in the sun," as Hitler later called it, "lebensraum" or living space.

But as the colonies and the new countries (like the United States) reached full production of their raw materials, they, too, turned toward industry, and went out in competition with the older ones to seek agricultural areas to supplement their industrial development.

Aggression Follows

TO PROTECT their markets, nations raised up trade barriers at political frontiers. This led newer industrial nations to seek political control of agricultural areas to insure a continuing supply of farm products. This meant aggression—Japan in Manchuria, Italy in Ethiopia, Germany in Czechoslovakia and Poland.

It is Chew's view that wars are caused by economic conflicts particularly between industrial nations striving to maintain connection with enough farms to balance their factories. This leads to a side conclusion—that for the peace of the world, agricultural countries should move slowly toward industrialization. Those movements should be the most natural and profitable lines rather than forced or subsidized developments.

The book is well worked out, simply written, as is most of Chew's stuff, and one that anybody can read with benefit.—JOHN W. BALL.

Tale of Two Wars

A Father-Son Tragedy States Pacifist Credo

BORN 1925: A Novel of Youth. By Vera Brittain. Macmillan. 320 pp. $3.50.

VERA BRITTAIN

. . . Fought bomb fires

IT IS hard to dismiss lightly a pacifist so confirmed in her convictions as Vera Brittain. People who refuse to seek safety from danger themselves, who nurse the wounded in one war and fight fires in the next, but who continue to preach non-resistance and non-retaliation in the face of threatened imprisonment, deserve a hearing.

Into her new novel, "Born 1925," a story of two generations and two World Wars, Miss Brittain has poured her entire impassioned credo.

Primarily, this purports to be a story of Adrian Carbury, born in 1925 to a father who is a famous London preacher and a mother who is a famous actress.

We are asked to sympathize deeply with this young man who has never known any period except one of fear, crises and confusion—who from his first logical moment knew of Hitler as a menace, and who spent World War II first as a child refugee in America and next as a volunteer member of the dangerous bomb-demolition squads in London.

Actually, the difficult Adrian, his boyhood, adolescence, moral struggle with his father, and his love affair are of far less interest to the reader than the story of his parents, just as his life seems less dramatic, and less tragic than theirs.

Robert Carbury, the father, was born in an era of peace. For conspicuous bravery at Loos in the First World War, he was awarded the Victoria Cross, having wiped out a machine-gun nest of Germans almost single-handed. He was badly wounded and sent back to England.

Never able to forget the fact that he had "murdered" the young Germans (who, incidentally, had slaughtered most of his buddies), he turned to the ministry and dedicated the rest of his life to fighting against war and all the causes of war.

Robert's romance with Sylvia, a Shakespearian actress, his love for his two children, Adrian and Josephine, his selfless teaching, preaching and aid to the poor, and his final mortal struggle to maintain complete integrity as England's leading pacifist when Hitler sends bombers over London, is in itself sufficient drama for any novel.

But in his relationship with his son, who never sympathized with anything his father is or stands for, she has written major tragedy. Only after his father's death and after the war has ended does the son begin to realize the stature and courage of the older man.

Robert Carbury may be wrong. Vera Brittain may be wrong. Until the major enemies of democracy are destroyed, it may be literally impossible to follow the Golden Rule and the Sermon on the Mount.

But the militarists of the Politburo, the Pentagon, 10 Downing St., The Hague (and wherever else war is being planned or fought today) should read Vera Brittain's novel. It may remind them that there are millions of brave men and women in the world today who will face imprisonment and even death rather than contribute to another Armageddon.—S. N.

'Wilderness Images' Retained In Condensation of Parkman

THE BATTLE FOR NORTH AMERICA. By Francis Parkman. Edited by John Tebbel. Doubleday. 746 pp. $7.50.

FRANCIS PARKMAN was 42 when he began writing "France and England in North America." To his advantage, he had read deeply in the literature and source material of the period and had visited most of the historic sites with which he was concerned. To his disadvantage, he was suffering from ill health and nearly total blindness.

Despite his handicaps, however, he achieved his purpose: "The whole course of the American conflict between France and England, or in other words, the history of the American forest; for this was the light in which I regarded it. My theme fascinated me, and I was haunted with wilderness images day and night."

The first work in the series appeared in 1865, the last in 1892. Today, when the forest frontier has receded so far from the American consciousness, it is doubtful if anyone could rewrite Parkman's series with the feeling for the colonial frontier he communicated. It is this feeling, together with the epic sweep of the narative, that makes Parkman's work a pleasure still to read.

John Tebbel has condensed the original 13 volumes to one fat one. He also has modernized the spelling and punctuation, eliminated archaic words and phrases and broken up long paragraphs and chapters.

'Bottle Clubs' a Scrawny War Baby Grown Into Big Business

By John London
Post Reporter

A BABY was born in an abandoned store on Christmas Eve of 1941. It was swaddled with a financial shoestring and weaned on whisky.

The question of its legitimacy has grown into a million-dollar problem of public concern.

The infant's name is legion—the fancy handles of Washington's after-hours drinking clubs, which have burgeoned into big business.

As "private clubs," they operate in a twilight zone of legality, blissfully immune to Alcoholic Beverage Control Board regulations, unfettered by Health Department and police supervision.

Licensed liquor purveyors are prodding officials to close or control these bottle parties which are siphoning business from the licensees. Officials are scratching around desperately for a legal padlock.

A Baltimore Import

THE problem child was fathered by Vince Carr Grillo, one-time band leader; mothered by the tense wartime spirit of live for today; and wet-nursed by the Capital's swelling population.

A shrewd judge of demand and supply, Grillo figured there must be a market for early morn revelry in a city like Washington, where the law sounds taps on public drinking at 2 a. m. weekdays, midnight Saturday.

So Grillo forsook the cabaret he ran in Baltimore, a city wide open by Washington standards. At 5th and K sts. nw. he located an empty store, blackened its windows for privacy. A few dozen used chairs and tables, a small waxed floor, a smaller kitchen, and the Spotlight Guild, Washington's first bottle party, was uncorked.

Business was slow—only about 25 customers and fewer bottles on opening night, Christmas Eve, 1941. But Grillo was sure he had a success formula:

"Where else can people who work late go to relax—entertainers, newspaper and radio folks, waiters, musicians and the like? The night is young for them at 2 a. m. when licensed places have to cut off drinks."

Horns After Midnight

GRILLO rounded up musicians, coaxed them to take out "club memberships," and soon that little joint was jumping. One night Harry James, Ralph Hawkins, Tony Pastor and Eddie Finkle wandered in. The jam session that ensued—well, somehow the roof did stay on.

The word grapevined; the Spotlight moved to more spacious accommodations at 17th and M sts. nw. in 1942.

Other clubs mushroomed. Now there are as many as 100, according to Lieut. Roy Blick, Police Vice Squad chief. However, the boys in the business insist there are no more than about a dozen sizable establishments.

All operate on the basis of private clubs, catering, at least in theory, to select members and their guests, not to the public at large. A member brings his own bottle, labeled with his name. When he wishes a drink, the club serves him with a setup—water, with or without bubbles.

Water, with or without bubbles, used to be 25 cents a glass; the trend today is toward 35 cents. Even straight drinkers find a glass of water or soda, ginger ale or coke expedient; that's the profitable gimmick in the business. That, and annual membership fees, which range from $10 to $30.

In Case of Fire

OF COURSE, a member may drain his last bottle dry and still be ever so thirsty. There are clubs which accommodate trusted customers with a bottle of, say, $3.25 whisky for as little as $5, with special inducement offers for regulars. Or they may sell shots over the bar to a known customer.

Still, some clubs definitely refuse to sell liquor, which is the only charge police can possibly make, usually.

Passe today is the slot-machine fad. That, they say, vanished with the police raid on the Variety Club in February, 1946, when six coin gobblers were confiscated midst much official embarrassment.

Many clubs serve food, occasionally tasty, sometimes expensive (a buck and a half for a dressed-up hamburger). Entertainment has become a must, ranging from pianist, pinball machine and juke boxes to the elaborately staged acts at Turf and Grid, favorite of sports writers and fans. Other clubs cater to business and professional men; numbers dabblers and horse-race addicts; the smart set; Army and Navy officers, and unclassified Washington stay-ups.

One of the more elaborate oases, now closed, was turreted Henderson's Castle, which offered plush drawing-room comfort as well as tennis courts and swimming-pool facilities to members bold enough to square off with daylight.

Latest addition to the scene is the cushy Stagecrafter, equipped, according to one observer, with more rooms than a Malibu cottage, a pipe organ, stage and auditorium with about 500 seating capacity, and first-class, imported entertainers.

All this is a far cry from the first day of the old Spotlight, when an emcee used a flashlight to spot relaxing entertainers and urged them to do a fast turn on the floor or join a jam session.

The Boniface's Viewpoint

MORE people have patronized the early morning spots this past year than ever before, according to Grillo, who started it all and who now is master of corks at the Lyre Club.

"However, there are more clubs, too, so it's a question of survival of the fittest," says Grillo, who further maintains:

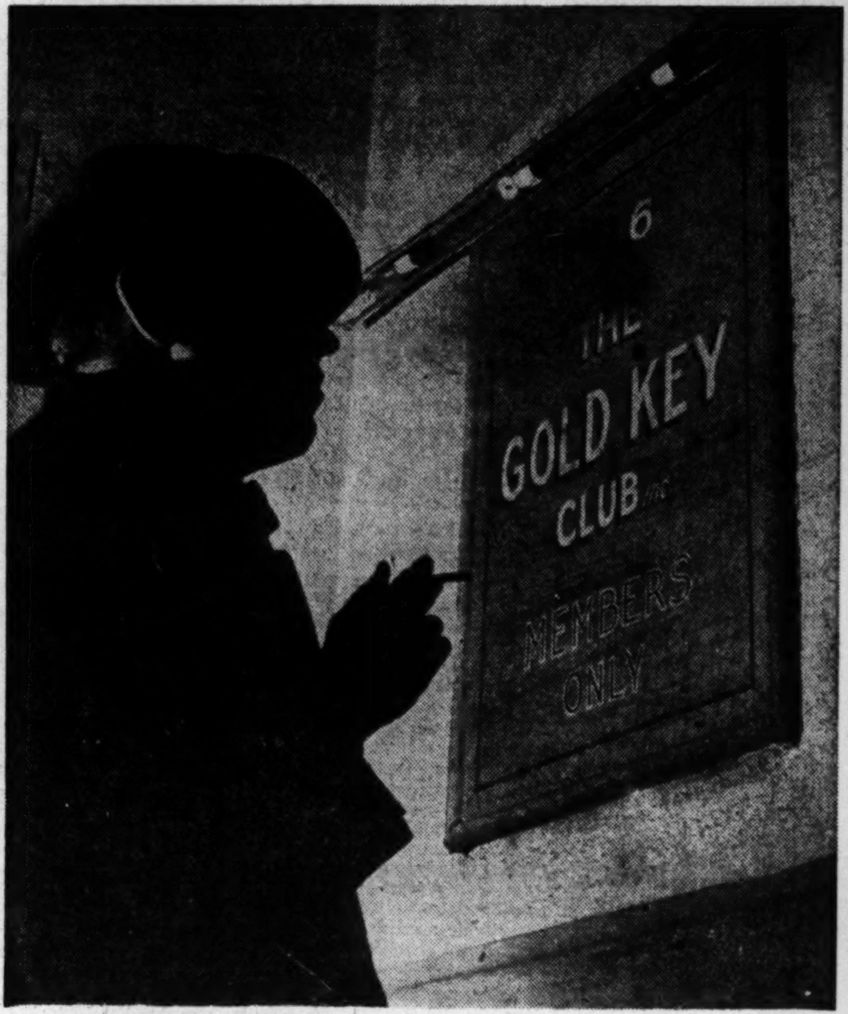
"In some instances, maybe, licensed bars and taverns are justified in protesting where a few clubs do sell liquor. But as for the rest of us, we definitely don't sell liquor, so there's no ground for complaint. All we sell is entertainment, like a movie house or a dance hall.

"After all, there's a need of a place for people who want to relax after midnight Saturday or 2 a. m. during the week."

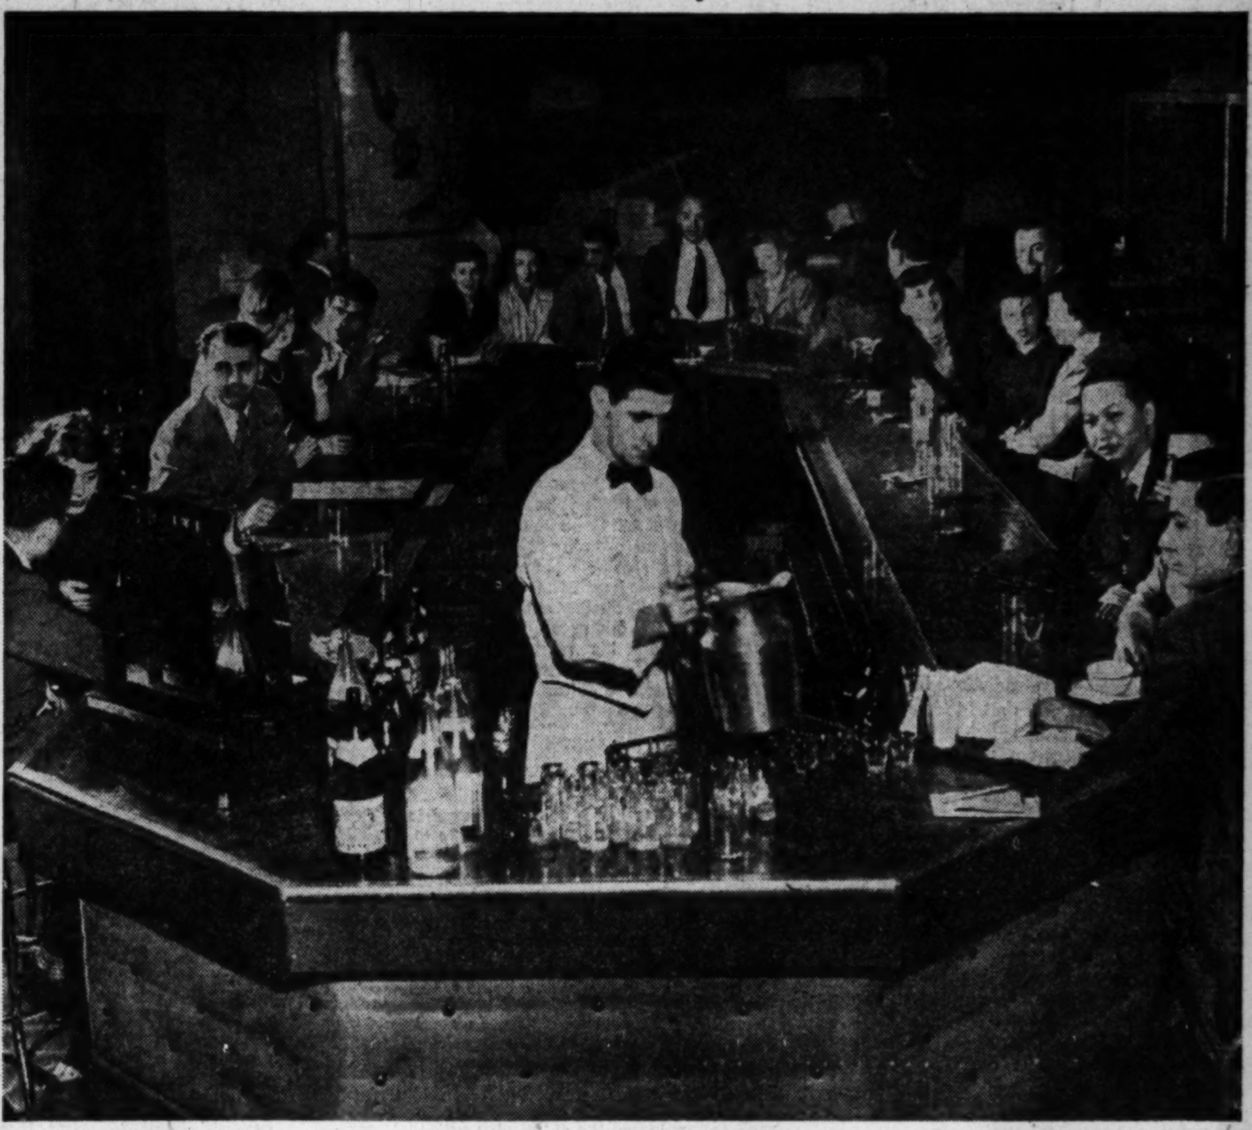
But a dimmer view is taken by licensed liquor purveyors, police and District authorities. The Tavern Owners Association, Inc., for example, brands after-hours clubs unfair competition.

"Simply by purchasing occupational licenses at $2 each, they may serve drinks at all hours, serve drunks, allow patrons to wander from table to table or stand up and drink, and otherwise operate contrary to regulations imposed on legitimate dealers," the association's publication, The Tavernite, charges.

Incensed tavern owners plan to stage a mass meeting soon to request longer operating hours. Another group, the Class C (license) Committee, composed of 25 members of the Washington Restaurant Association, recently requested longer hours during the Inauguration. ABC Board approval was vetoed by the Commissioners, who feared the Inaugural might become a "drunken brawl."



The Gold Key Club at 606 E st. nw. is in a former church building, is a favorite of Army and Navy brass



By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

The leather bar of the Lyre Club at 919 12th st. nw., where water setups are 25 cents upstairs, 35 cents downstairs where the band plays. The grog comes out of your personal bottle

The Stagecrafters is one of the newest and ritziest of the clubs, with deep-piled carpets, damask walls and any number of swank bar and lounge rooms. It's at 3d and E sts. nw.

Vince Carr Grillo, founder of the first after-hours club here in 1941, now personally supervises the cooking in his swank Lyre Club, where the policy is to sell nothing but food and entertainment

NOW the Class C Committee, despairing of District Building aid, plans to turn to Congress to require licensing of clubs. "If they get hours better than ABC regulations today, so would we," says Peter Borras, treasurer of the committee and operator of the Madrillon Restaurant.

Borras complains that after-hours clubs have "brought back the speakeasy and the stand-up bars. They're undermining legitimate, licensed business. They're cheating the District of taxes. They're unfair competition."

A leading liquor wholesaler, Milton S. Kronheim, has become so disturbed about after-hours clubs that he has arranged several meetings of representatives of liquor retailers and restaurant proprietors to discuss the problem with citizens' groups.

"The good name of the liquor industry here is in jeopardy," he believes, fearing "scandals" in the clubs "which would unjustly reflect on all of us."

Extension of liquor serving hours to 4 a. m. weekdays, 2 a. m. Sundays "would be the complete answer," Kronheim suggests. He adds, cautiously:

"We're trying to get public support before we go to the authorities. We're trying to work out the problem with citizens' groups."

Straitlaced Regulations

ALTHOUGH the Hotel Association "has not joined any uprising against after-hours clubs," President Frank Weakley doesn't think it fair that hotel bars and restaurants "have to buy expensive licenses to operate under air-tight Police and Health Department supervision while they get off scot free."

The fault, in part, he believes, lies with the "rigid and dogmatic thinking that it's a sin to have a drink one minute after midnight Saturday."

"Those laws may have been all right years ago, but, after all, Washington is a great metropolitan community today," Weakley observes. "Other big cities, like Chicago and New York, don't have such rigid requirements. Why should Washington?"

He'd like to see "a little more sophistication in our thinking here in Washington." But he's afraid a request for relaxation of the liquor laws "will stir up the drys and talk that we're swapping dollars for human souls."

Lieutenant Blick agrees that later hours for licensees would "cut out about 95 per cent of this after-hours business."

He points out that licensees can lose their licenses if police catch them selling to drunks or minors. But after-hours proprietors do not hold an ABC license and so are not subject to ABC regulations.

If a late-hour proprietor allows a drunk to continue drinking from his own bottle, no law is violated, Blick says. If a policeman did catch a proprietor permitting a minor to drink, however, the proprietor might be liable for a charge such as contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

No Curb on Bacteria

BLICK also objects to the bottle party's freedom from Health Department inspections. Rats may crawl over the club sandwiches, custard pies may be infested with bacteria, glasses improperly washed, if at all, but Health Department inspectors have no say.

"A private club is like a private home. Our inspectors have no right to inspect, either," says Walter W. Burdette, head of the Bureau of Food Inspection.

Another police objection is that, except in an emergency, a policeman can enter a private club only on sufferance of the management to check on its practices. Police have had to resort to undercover operatives.

Blick says most of the clubs "are running under false colors—they're not clubs and they're not private—most of them, anyway." A membership card often is as easy to get as the common cold, he claims.

Further, he has received complaints from citizens of being charged exorbitant prices. He says that in one raid he personally saw a tab for $600, plus $120 tax, for eight persons. The tariff, he says, was $6 a shot of whisky.

Blick hopes to obtain two or more convictions against proprietors of every "non-legitimate" after-hours club, if he can nab them on charges of selling whisky illegally. Then he'll try to get the clubs padlocked as nuisances.

Spotlight Antes Up

IN RECENT months, police have raided four clubs on charges of selling whisky illegally. Last Wednesday, operators of the defunct Spotlight Club pleaded guilty to six counts of keeping and selling whisky illegally and were fined $150. The Spotlight closed after it was suddenly served a $515 District personal property tax bill. Three other liquor law violation cases, involving the Allies, Five O'Clock and Gold Key Clubs, are still pending in Municipal Court.

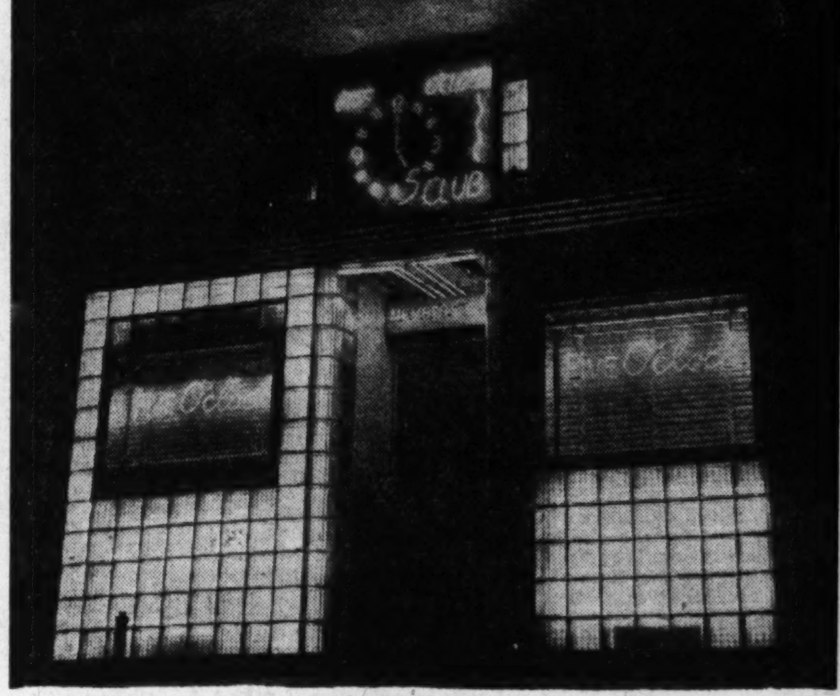
As to legality of clubs which do not sell drinks, Corporation Counsel Vernon West believes they are within the law if they are legitimately private and not places to which the public is invited.

ABC Board Chairman Alan W. Payne says the board hasn't "thought out all of the ramifications of the problem of after-hours clubs." One plan suggested, though, he said, is the establishment of a new type of cabaret license to cover such clubs.

Along these lines, Commissioner Guy Mason recently revealed he has ordered a study made of how other cities handle the problem. Mason said he thought licensing might make the clubs "operate properly" and reduce pressure on police.

Mason has expressed the view that closing hours for licensees—2 a. m. weekdays, midnight Saturday—"are long enough. There's enough time allowed for selling liquor."

Weekday closing hours may be extended by the Commissioners at will, but extension of the Saturday midnight curfew would require an act of Congress, West said.



The Five O'Clock Club was raided last August. The proprietors still await trial on illegal sale charges

He Preaches to President

By Frank Taylor
Associated Press Staff Writer

A VIRGINIA boy who once played like he was a preacher, now preaches to the President.

It was as a 5-year-old that Edward Hughes Pruden would take to a meat-chopping block in his Chase City, Va., home to "preach" to small friends. Today, the 45-year-old pastor of the First Baptist Church counts President Truman as a personal friend and occasional member of his congregation.

Dr. Pruden said in an interview that he has come "to feel that Mr. Truman is so sincere in his own personal religion."

When the President finds time to attend services, Dr. Pruden said, his visits receive no special attention in conformity with the President's wishes.

"He has expressed himself more than once," Dr. Pruden said, "as desiring to be just another worshiper."

"Most of the time I don't refer to his presence," he added, "but there have been times when I have been able to bring some emphasis relating to the President which I thought appropriate.

"And it has been almost uncanny that he has arrived at times when I thought the prepared sermon was more appropriate for such occasions than on Sundays when they were not."

In the pastor's study is a photograph of the President presented to Dr. Pruden with "best wishes and kindest regards" by Mr. Truman. Nearby is a framed five dollar bill with this notation in the President's handwriting:

"The deacon who counts this one may have it for a keepsake — provided he puts two like it in its place." The note bears the initials HST.

Dr. Pruden says that despite his early "preaching" activities, it was not until his second year at the University of Richmond that he made a final decision to enter the ministry.

He graduated from the University of Richmond and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Edinburgh and did a year of graduate work at Yale Divinity School.

He has only had two churches—the present 147-year-old First Baptist here and the First Baptist of Petersburg, Va., where he served from 1930 to 1935.

The church here—sometimes referred to as the "grandmother" Baptist church of this area—has grown since Dr. Pruden became pastor from a membership of 775 to more than 2000. Some 200 churches of this area are said to have grown from the "grandmother" church.

Owner Dick Muckerman is listed as a $4900 contributor to the Democratic National Committee.

Hertzberg's Free Throws Enable Caps To Win, 75-73

After a thrill-a-minute game which saw the lead switch hands 21 times, the Washington Caps backed off the Uline Arena court with a 75-73 victory over the New York Knickerbockers last night.

Sonny Hertzberg's ability to convert two free throws in the last 10 seconds and the inability of New York's Carl Braun to sink one charity toss decided the issue, played before 4950 fans.

Braun Colgate's contribution to the Knicks, flubbed a foul shot which would have tied the score at 74-all with six seconds to go.

Hertzberg, fouled in the scramble to retrieve Braun's errant shot, calmly swished in his shot and the Knicks were through.

A few seconds before Braun had missed his shot, Hertzberg, a former Knick himself, had dunked in his other free throw.

Play in Chicago Tonight

The victory not only snapped a one-game losing streak for the pace-setting Caps, but it also sent them on to Chicago, where they play tonight, with a seven-game bulge over the Knicks, the Eastern Division's second-place team.

Seldom has a Uline Arena game been closer than last night's. Never were there more than six points separating the two teams. Most of the time the lead fluctuated between two and three points. The game was tied 14 times, twice in the last three minutes.

The Caps owned their widest margin, 61-56, as the last quarter began, but the Knicks kept coming. Tommy Byrnes, who got 14 points for New York, hooked in a side court try to tie the score at 69-69 with only two minutes to play.

Freddie Scolari, whose 17 points topped both clubs, and Bob Feerick flipped in two quickies to put the Caps in the van again, by 73-69. But Braun made a basket and converted a free throw to make it 73-72 Washington.

Braun Misses a Tie

Then, with 45 seconds to play and the Caps in possession of the ball, Sid Tannebaum fouled Hertzberg and Hertzberg plopped in the first of his two free throws which were to provide the winning margin.

Hertzberg fouled Tannebaum and the latter made good his two to bring the count to 74-73, setting the stage for Braun's failure to make the goal which would have tied the tussle.

Scolari got nine of his 17 points in the first quarter, but the Knicks outscored the chubby little guard and led, 20-15, as the period ended.

Sweeping down court in race horse style and dunking in layups after receiving crisp passes from pivot men Irv Rothenberg, the Knicks held their five-point advantage until the last minute of the second period. Then Kleggie Hermsen and Scolarie connected in rapid succession to enable the Caps to take a 42-41 lead to their dressing rooms.

Give and Take Rest of Way

It was give-and-take again in the third quarter and if the players were getting tired, the customers weren't. Tommy Byrnes and Irv Rothenberg reclaimed the lead for the Knicks twice in that quarter, but each time Jack Nichols, Cap rookie, got it back for his side.

In short, the Knicks missed 11 of their 30 free throws. Braun alone flubbed out four times . . . Referee Phil Fox, no kin to the local horn tooter of the same name, added spice to the savory show by his show-boating, but efficient performance . . . If the Caps lose to the Stags in Chicago tonight, they can be excused. After an all night and all day train ride, they arrive in Chicago at 7:45 and take the court an hour later . . . They return here next Saturday against the Celtics.

Terps Shift Carolina Date To Clear Way For Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

With a schedule assist from Maryland U., the way was cleared yesterday for Notre Dame to return to Yankee Stadium for a football game next fall.

The Irish, who haven't played in New York in two years, will meet North Carolina, November 12, in the 70,000 capacity park in the first of a two-game series between the two schools.

North Carolina and Maryland were originally scheduled to play on November 12, but when Terp athletic officials were told Carolina had an opportunity to play the Irish on that date, they switched the date of the Maryland-Carolina game to December 3.

"It's quite an honor for a Southern Conference school to play Notre Dame," Maryland Athletic Director Jim Tatum said yesterday, "and we gladly switched our date with Carolina in order for the Notre Dame-North Carolina game to be played on that date, the only date Notre Dame had open."

Site Undetermined

The site of the 1949 Maryland-North Carolina game has not been determined yet, but probably will be played in either Griffith Stadium or Maryland's new stadium in College Park.

The Notre Dame-North Carolina game will bring together two of the Nation's top 1948 teams. The Irish, unbeaten but tied by Southern Cal in their final game, were rated second in the Associated Press' final poll with Carolina, also unbeaten but tied. The Tar Heels lost their Sugar Bowl game January 1 to Oklahoma, 14-6.

North Carolina and Notre Dame have never played each other in any sport. The game will mark Carolina's first appearance in New York since 1942, when the Tar Heels and Fordham battled to a scoreless draw.

Notre Dame's last appearance in Yankee Stadium was in 1946, when the Irish held Army to a scoreless tie.

The shift to a December 3 date for its game with Maryland marks a new departure for Carolina in its football schedule. Traditionally, the Tar Heels have closed their schedule against Virginia.

The North Carolina game is the second new contest with a foe out of its immediate Midwestern vicinity that the Irish have arranged for 1949 and 1950. Given the brush-off by several Big Ten schools, Notre Dame recently signed a two-year pact with SMU also.

Happy as he was to see his alma mater schedule formidable Notre Dame, Maryland's Tatum was still beset by trouble for his 1949 Terrapin football production.

Three Open Dates

There are three open dates on Maryland's 1949 card, but Tatum expects to fill at least two of them early this week. One will probably be against Kentucky, coached by Bear Bryant, former Maryland mentor. Kentucky and Maryland have open dates on October 15 and negotiations between the schools are under way for a game on that date.

Maryland is also dickering with Auburn and an Eastern school for its other two idle Saturdays. The Auburn game, if played, would be held on November 19 with the November 12 date filled by the Eastern team, which Tatum prefers to keep anonymous at this time.

At Notre Dame Charles M. Callahan, director of sports information, said the first game with North Carolina was scheduled for the Yankee Stadium because so many of Notre Dame's Alumni in the New York and the New England States are always anxious to see the "Fighting Irish" play.

"It is not intended to take the place of the traditional Notre Dame-Army game," Callahan said, "Nothing would do that except an Army-Notre Dame game."

'Skins, Colts Agree—'to Meet And Adjourn'

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Owner George Marshall of the Washington Redskins and President Robert Embry of the Baltimore Colts met yesterday in an other step toward peace between professional football's warring leagues.

After their session ended, Redskin Publicity Director Dick McCann made only this announcement:

"They reached an agreement on two points—to meet and to adjourn."

McCann's whimsy covered up any developments towards an end of the three-year war between the National Football League, to which the Redskins belong, and the All-America Conference, Baltimore's affiliation.

Embry, heading the Baltimore delegation which also consisted of Charles McCormack and Jeff Miller, confined his remarks to "No comment."

Marshall, as usual, was more talkative. But the only quote he would allow was "No concrete proposition had been presented the Redskins at the meeting." In addition to Marshall at the meeting on the Redskin side were Stockholders C. Leo DeOrsey and Milton W. King.

Marshall, however, had a good word to say in an aside about Baltimore owners. He called them

Dons' Lindheimer Denies He's Merging With Rams

Los Angeles, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The Los Angeles Rams and Los Angeles Dons have been getting together to discuss "common problems," but the owners denied today that they have merged.

Ben Lindheimer of the All-America Conference Dons and Dan Reeves of the National League Rams said there was absolutely no truth to reports they had discussed combining the teams.

"We met this week to confer on operational matters common to both clubs here in Los Angeles," Lindheimer said. "They were matters of practical economy of interest to both of us. We also discussed plans to further the building and acceptance of major league football in Los Angeles.

"But that was all."

The Chicago Daily News said that Reeves and Lindheimer were discussing a merger in which the team would keep the identity of the Rams but be under virtual control of Lindheimer.

Businessmen Pay $250,000 In Civic Move

By Ralph Bernstein

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP).—A syndicate of 100 Philadelphia businessmen bought the Philadelphia Eagles for $250,000 today to "bring local pro football back to the community."

The National Football League champions have been owned for eight years by Alexis Thompson, New York millionaire. Thompson said he sold the Philadelphia franchise because he found it a losing proposition even with a title-winning team.

The new owners, headed by James P. Clark, former Democratic city chairman, said: "Civic pride and interest in the community have been the factors chiefly motivating the purchase."

"None of the club's new officers will receive any salary," said Clark, adding, "We want this great Philadelphia sports enterprise to maintain its success and acquire the character of a true city project."

NFL Commissioner Bert Bell was on hand to witness the turning over of the Eagles and announced that loop owners gave unanimous approval to the deal in a telephone poll.

Bell said Clark would represent Philadelphia at the annual league meeting in Chicago next week.

Clark will vote the Philadelphia interest at the meeting in which

Penn State Star Defeats Mitchell in 70-Yard Hurdles

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Penn State's Jim Gehrdes came within a tenth of a second of the world's indoor record for the 70-yard high hurdles, blazing to victory by inches over Georgetown's Bill Mitchell, defending champion, in 8.5 seconds last night in the second annual Evening Star-AAU games at National Guard Armory.

A near capacity crowd estimated at 5000 watched the favored Ed Dugger finish third. Mitchell, Hoya footballer, defeated Dugger, Dayton AC, in 8.7 in his heat.

Gehrdes took the other heat in 8.6 and came back in the final to almost equal the 8.4 world's standard set in 1940 by Allen Tochnich, who wore spikes.

Gehrdes time smashed Mitchell's meet standard by three tenths of a second.

In the ever-popular mile event, Yale's George Wade was a surprise winner in the unimpressive time of 4:18.1. Wade, junior from Seattle closely followed the pace of Villanova's Browning Ross most of the way. On the final lap Ross couldn't resist him and stumbled in eight yards behind Wade. Maryland's Bob Palmer finished strong to take the third spot from Gerry Karver, former Penn State star, who was a heavy favorite.

Couple of Olympic stars provided the excitement in the 2-mile run, but not nearly as much as the announcer. In the run, Indiana's Fred Wilt finished brilliantly to lead Shanahan's Curtis Stone to the finish line by approximately 30 yards.

Winning time first was announced as 8 minutes, 59 seconds, which would have made Wilt the third American to break 9 minutes in the 2-mile race. Actually, the time was 9 minutes, 9 seconds, still creditable.

Boston, Mathis Win Sprnts

Marcellus Boston and Bill Mathis, a couple of former Cardozo High boys, monopolized the special series of invitation sprints.

Boston beat Mathis to the tape in the 70 and 80 yard events, but Mathis finally got home first in the 100, with Bill Dwyer of Brown second and Boston third.

On total points, Boston edged Mathis, 12 to 11, in the three races.

Mathis' time of 10 flat in the 100 was approached by Maryland's Bill Alexion, who won the District AAU century dash in 10.1.

The highly touted Variety Club invitation mile relay was somewhat disappointing although Texas A. & M.'s speedy quartet finished in the 70 and 80 yards ahead of Seton Hall, supposed to be the East's best. Time, though, was 3:26.1, almost 4 full seconds better than that made by Michigan last year.

Lions Laced Again, 10-5

Springfield, Jan. 15. — Harry Frost of the Washington Lions turned in the hat-trick, but the Capital City hockey team lost, 10-5, to Springfield before 5400 here tonight in an American League match.

Doug McCurdy of Springfield also scored three goals to offset Frost's hot spree. Washington's best bit of offense came in the third period when trailing, 9-2, it pushed home three goals inside of two minutes.

An otherwise uninteresting game was enlivened in the third period by a first-fight between Bud Foley of the Lions and Paul Corteau, formerly of Washington and now with Springfield.

Frost's second goal was somewhat tainted. It came at 12:03 of the second period when the Indians were two players short

Georgetown Beaten, 52-43

Buffalo, Jan. 15.—Scrappy Canisius hung a 52-43 loss on Georgetown tonight in the second game of a double-header before 8504 in Memorial Stadium. In the first game, Niagara upset DePaul, 57-53.

Tommy O'Keefe, Georgetown's No. 1 scoring threat, was effectively shackled, and notched only three points. Still, Canisius had to come from behind with eight minutes left to grab its tenth victory in 14 starts.

The Hoyas led during most of the first half, with a layup by Dick Falvey giving them a 22-19 lead at halftime.

Al Masino, who sat out the first half of Canisius, made a spectacular second half appearance, tossing in 16 points. LeRoy Chollet, Canisius' leading scorer in its previous games, made 9 in the second half, and these two paced the comeback.

Ray Corley and Vince Leddy tried to keep Georgetown in contention in the second half, each scoring six points, but they missed the usual sharpshooting of O'Keefe.

Corley led the Georgetowners with 14 points, and the Hoyas lost their fourth defeat in ten starts.

Oklahoma Signs Wilkinson For 'At Least' 5 More Years

Norman, Okla., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The University of Oklahoma won another post-season football victory today by signing up the newest big whiz in the coaching business, Charles (Bud) Wilkinson, for "at least" five more years.

Dr. George L. Cross, who outlined the new contract, did not reveal—"at Mr. Wilkinson's request"—the salary terms. But he said two weeks ago Wilkinson would be offered $15,000 a year for five years, and that probably is the figure the income tax men will be working on through the 1953 season.

The blond former Minnesota football star also was given two titles besides that of head coach—athletic director and professor of physical education—both good for more than the five-year period if Wilkinson wants to step out of his coaching shoes at that time.

The announcement came after Wilkinson returned from Madison, Wis., where he rejected an offer to coach the Wisconsin football team. Only a year ago three other major schools—Yale, Harvard and Navy—were bidding for the 33-year-old Wilkinson for their top coaching jobs.

That was at the end of his first full season as Oklahoma's head coach, a job he moved up to in 1947 when his boss, Jim Tatum, transferred to Maryland.

Then, as now, Oklahoma met the threats by giving Wilkinson a three-year contract at a reported $11,000 per year.

The contract signed today follows the greatest football season in the university's history. Wilkinson this year led his Sooners to the top of the Big Seven, but did Wilkinson lead his Sooners to the Sugar Bowl, where they stopped North Carolina, 14 to 6.

St. Louis Wins 11th in Row, 52-51

St. Louis, Jan. 15 (AP).—The St. Louis University Billikens managed to stave off a fighting band of Drake Bulldogs tonight, 52 to 51, and hang up their eleventh cage victory in a row without a defeat.

NFL Teams Won't Even Play Colts In Basketball

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—National Football League teams won't even play the Baltimore Colts of the rival All-American Conference in basketball.

Colt players led by Quarterback Y. A. Tittle have formed a cage team to keep in shape during the off season. They've issued challenges to similar quintets of the Washington Redskins and Philadelphia Eagles which have refused to accept.

Buddy Baer Sues, Claims Accident Cost Him Title

Freehold, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP).—Buddy Baer's second loss to Joe Louis for the world's heavyweight boxing championship comes into court Monday when Baer asks $50,000 for auto injuries.

He contends that injuries he received in an automobile accident 16 days before the fight, January 9, 1942, cost him the title. He lost by a knockout in 2:56 of the first round.

Baer and two others are suing Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Wilkins of Tinton Falls, near Eatontown, N. J., identified as the occupants of a car which was in collision with theirs.

The Wilkins, in a cross complaint, ask $36,000 for injuries to Mrs. Wilkins. The case will be heard by Superior Court Judge Thomas Brown and a jury.

Lined up with Baer, whose first name is Jacob, in the suit are Jerry Casale of Lon Branch, who was on his training staff, and Anna Grietenhain of Lakewood, who owned the car in which Baer was riding.

Baer contends that in the crash he pulled muscles and tendons in his right shoulder, and that as a result he couldn't keep his guard up in the second fight against Louis.

The challenger cites his first fight with Louis for the title May 23, 1941, which he lost when he failed to answer the bell for the seventh round.

Baer then claimed the title on a foul, asserting that Louis hit him after the bell in the sixth, and for that reason he couldn't continue the fight. His claim was not allowed.

He also contends that he retired from the ring because of the shoulder injury. More recently, Baer has been appearing in motion pictures.

Protest By KKK Is Disregarded

By Edwin Pope

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—Southern cities in which the Brooklyn Dodgers have scheduled spring exhibition games ignored the protests of the Ku Klux Klan leader today and heartily welcomed the coming appearances of Negro stars Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella.

Disregarding the angry dissent of Dr. Samuel Green, grand dragon of the KKK, responsible officials and sports writers throughout Dixie unstintingly indorsed the participation of the Negro players in games against local clubs.

Green, meanwhile, reiterated his threat to "investigate thoroughly" Georgia's segregation laws in an effort to bar Robinson and Campanella from playing in Atlanta against the Atlanta Crackers, April 8, 9 and 10.

In Charlotte, where the Dodgers are scheduled to play the Tri-State Club, April 12, Mayor H. H. Baxter said the mixing of white and Negro baseball players is "nothing new . . . and we've never had any trouble."

Sports Editor Wilton Garrison of the Charlotte Observer previously had extended a welcome to the Dodgers. Pro football games helped to break down the color line, wrote Garrison, and there is "no reason why Negro baseball players should not be received the same way in the future."

In Asheville, N. C., Sports Writer Red Miller of the Citizen pointed out that Robinson and the Dodgers "played to packed stands with no racial discrimination" in Asheville last year. Miller predicted another sellout.

Jimmy Gaston, president of the Greenville, S. C., Spinners of the South Atlantic League, also approved an exhibition game against the Dodgers. "We should draw a fine crowd," he said.

Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia sidestepped the issue by referring it to Fulton County Solicitor Paul Webb. But Webb said he was unaware of any law covering such a situation.

A Dodger game with the Macon (Ga.) Peaches, also of the South Atlantic League, April 17, was indorsed by Mayor Lewis B. Wilson. City Attorney Ed Sell said he believed segregation laws in Georgia apply to audiences rather than to participants.

Brooklyn is slated to play its "B" team against Valdosta, Ga., a farm club, April 9-10 while the regulars are in Atlanta. But several Valdosta sportsmen considered a move to request that Robinson come also. One source said a banquet honoring Robinson was even being planned if the Negro second baseman could make the trip.

In Miami, where the Dodgers play the Boston Red Sox in March, a city spokesman approved the game. Dr. Ralph B. Ferguson, baseball commission chairman, said, "They (Robinson and Campanella) are going to play . . . they will be playing another major league team and both the American and National Leagues use Negroes."

Robinson, discussing the KKK protest last night on his nightly sports broadcast over a New York radio station, said, "I will play baseball where my employer, the Brooklyn Dodgers, wants me to play.

"I don't know how far this objection can go, but I hope very much that fans in Atlanta, or all over America, will not allow this objection to cause a cancellation of the game."

8 of 10 Asked In Atlanta Approve

Atlanta, Jan. 15 (AP).—An Atlanta Constitution sports writer went out today and asked 10 persons at random what they thought about Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella playing baseball here.

Eight, Writer Jesse Outlar reported, said it would be all right as far as they are concerned for the two Brooklyn Dodger Negro stars to play against Atlanta's Crackers.

Two objected. One said, "It's going to cause trouble." The other asserted, "It just won't go over here."

Others said that the Negro players had to have ability to make the major league grade and their performance here ought to be an asset to the sport.

'No Comment' On Meeting

"nice guys," and he said they seemed sincere in their determination to stay in football and give Baltimore a good football team.

Asked if anything had been said about football territorial rights, Marshall answered that the discussion had never got to that stage. He is supposed to have remarked in an interview recently that Baltimore should pay him half the value of the Redskins to come into the National Football League and share his territorial rights.

For over an hour, the officials of previously warring leagues discussed football in general and their two leagues in particular. Baltimore's chief worry seemed to center around two points: Whether the All-America Conference would function next fall; if not, what chance the Colts had to join the reorganized National League.

Baltimore's next step toward survival will be at Chicago, starting Tuesday, when the All-America opens its annual meeting. There, proposals will be drafted for peace with the National League and presented to that body when it meets Thursday.

Herbie Jones Goes After Chuck Burton

The "new" Herbie Jones, Washington's southpawing lightweight, goes after his third straight Turner's Arena knockout Monday when he meets New York's Chuck Burton in one of the four eight-round offerings.

In his last two Turner appearances, Jones has stopped Freddie Smith of New York in three rounds and Jimmy Greene, also of New York, in two rounds.

Jones, once a headline attraction here, went into a tailspin after his seven-round knockout by Johnny Bratton last summer, is on the road to a successful comeback. He's added about 10 pounds, scaling 137 now, and feels the added weight enhances his punching ability. His last two bouts seem to substantiate the Biffer's belief.

In another eight, Danny Petro returns to Turner's to tackle Young Lee Q. Murray, of Baltimore, knockout conqueror of Washington's Puggy King a few weeks ago.

Roy Wirt, 19-year-old Roanoke, Va., scrapper, and Jackie Ford, local welterweight, clash again in another eight. The two waged a terrific draw three weeks ago with first one and then the other on the deck.

Holly Mims and Sonny Boy Bunn, local lightweights, round out the all-star portion of the show in another eight-rounder. A four-round opening bout is also on the card.

Navy Defeats Rutgers, 57-50

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Navy's basketball team put together opening and closing scoring sprees tonight to trip Rutgers, 57-50.

After blowing an early 20-6 advantage, Navy, paced by a couple of sophomores named Dave Mullaney and Joe Fitzpatrick, put together a dazzling offensive to pull the game out of the fire in the final minutes.

With 13 minutes gone in the second half, Captain John Barrows sank a long one to put the Middies ahead, 46-45. From there on in, Navy was never headed and, in fact, held the New Jersey team scoreless for five minutes.

Penn State Star Defeats Mitchell in 70-Yard Hurdles

quartet turned the mile in 3:26.9 in an intercollegiate relay in which George Rhoden held off a terrific anchor bid for victory by Georgetown's Ed Sause.

Bob Mathias, biggest name in the meet who wore No. 1, got a big hand for a brief but impressive showing. Mathis, 17-year-old Sullivan Award winner who thrilled the sports world with his decathlon victory in the Olympics, ran a 440-yard lap in the prep school medley relay. Although he got his team, Kiski Prep, off to a 10-yard lead, Mercersburg Prep won the event.

Another Olympian, Villanova's George Guida, turned in a meet record-breaking performance in the invitation 600. He put on a winning burst on the last lap to finish in 1:13.2—three tenths of a second better than Herb McKenley's winning time last year.

In the D. C.-AAU 600, Quantico Marines' Bill Kash turned in a sparkling 1:15.5 effort in turning back Bill Collins, Howard, and Jack Hurst, Georgetown.

Young Mathias didn't compete in the high jump, as scheduled. In that event Dave Albritton, perennial national champ seeking his twelfth title this year, was upset by North Carolina's Bill Albans who cleared 6:05. Albritton's best jump was an inch short. Albans' leap bettered Albritton's previous meet record, 6:03½.

In the pole vault, the only other field event and new this year, Richard (Boo) Morcum soared 14 feet to defeat Rev Robert Richards, Illinois AC, who was 6 inches short.

Yale University picked up two relay titles with a 3:28.2 effort in the Ivy League mile and a 2-mile relay victory over Rhode Island State, Columbia and Navy. In the longer event, George Wade, mile winner, won the anchor 880.

Maryland scored an impressive victory in the Southern Conference mile relay with Anchor man Ed Mathews finishing 40 yards in front of Duke and North Carolina. The quartet, composed of George McGowan, Paul Ostrye, Mario Salvanelli and Mathews, was timed in 3:29.6.

New York, Jan. 15.—Villanova's unbeaten basketball team chalked up its eleventh straight victory here tonight, beating Manhattan College, 40 to 39. The Wildcats managed to stave off a last minute rally which threatened their unblemished record.

With only five seconds to go, John Byrnes tossed in a one-hand push from the rear of the foul circle to make the score 40 to 39. He was fouled almost immediately by Sherwin Raiken and hurt himself dropping to the floor. Frederic Schwarz came into take Byrnes's shot, but missed.

Warriors, Stags Win In Twin Bill

Philadelphia, Jan. 15.—The Chicago Stags defeated the Boston Celtics, 94-86, in a Basketball Association of America game tonight at Convention Hall before 8500 fans.

In the second game of the doubleheader, the Philadelphia Warriors defeated the Baltimore Bullets, defending champions, 94-87.

A scoring splurge in the last three minutes decided the issue as the teams were tied at 82-all.

Pacing Chicago's attack was Ken Rollins, former Kentucky University captain and captain of the United States Olympic team in the 1948 games. Rollins had 21 points. Best for the defeated Celtics was Bob Doll with 17 tallies.

Civic Group Buys Eagles For $250,000

a peaceful settlement between the NFL and All-America Conference appears in the making.

Clark said each of the stockholders in the corporation to be known as 'Eagles Sports, Inc." would contribute $3000. He said the organization would start with a $50,000 working capital.

The new ownership represents a cross section of Philadelphia business and Commissioner Bell said it was this factor that prompted him to approve it over the offers of another group of prospective buyers.

"The league is delighted to have Mr. Clark and his associates as owners of the Eagles and is sure they will serve the best interests of the Eagles, the city and the National Football League."

Clark said that Charley Ewart would remain as general manager of the club and Earle (Greasy) Neale and his coaching aides would be back to direct the team that defeated the Chicago Cardinals 7-0 in the NFL title game here last month.

In addition to Clark, other owners identified included:

Frank McNamee, theater magnate and former regional War Assets Administrator, Paul C. Lewis, vending company operator; James Peterson, banker; Austin Meehan, sheriff of Philadelphia County; Al Paul Lefton, advertising executive; Vincent McDevitt, general counsel for Philadelphia Electric Co. Harry Sylk, drug company executive; Potter Wear, publisher of five suburban Philadelphia papers, and John Tyson insurance executive.

Thompson put the Eagles up for sale immediately after the December 19 championship game. He hung a price tag of "between $250,000 and $300,000" on the club.

That was after Thompson said he lost $32,000 on his championship Eagles.

Clark said the 100-man syndicate gave him complete authority to act for the entire group. The others will be more or less silent partners.

VPI Upsets W&M, 54-52

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Virginia Tech's Gobblers knocked William and Mary out of the Southern Conference lead tonight by handing the Indians a 54-52 licking. This was William and Mary's first conference loss in five games.

Dick Sayre, forward, paced the Gobblers' attack with 24 points. With two minutes remaining, the Tribe's Ed McMillan sank a field goal that pulled the Indians to within a point of the Gobblers.

George Sampson, Tech center, held William and Mary's center, Chet Giermak, the Nation's No. 1 scorer, to 10 points.

It was the eighth straight year Tech has beaten William and Mary here. After six losses, the Gobblers had won their first game of the season only Monday when they staged another upset, this one over Duke.

Duquesne's Frosh Coach Now Top Man

Pittsburgh, Jan. 15 (AP).—Phil Ahwesh, 29, today was appointed head football coach at Duquesne University, succeeding Kass Kovalcheck.

The appointment was made by the Very Rev. Francis F. Smith, president of the Pittsburgh school, who did not disclose contract terms.

Ahwesh, freshman grid coach at Duquesne last season, starred on Duquesne football teams in 1939, 1940 and 1941 and later coached the Canonsburg (Pa.) High School team in his home town.

Kovalcheck resigned last December, although his contract still had a year to run. He took over coaching duties in 1946 at the hilltop school when Duquesne revived the sport after a two-year lapse.

Numbers Game

Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 15 (AP).—There was too much scoring for the score-keepers at the Marietta College-Capital University basketball game last night.

The running score and individual scoring summaries conflicted at the end of five over-time periods, with game officials agreeing Marietta won 100 to 99 on the basis of the running score.

When the last hectic over-time period ended and the teams started to leave the floor, Referees Tom Vernia and Don Hair said, the "crowd was out of hand" and calling the teams back for another over-time period was "out of the question."

Individual scoring of all the official score books used during the game showed the score at 99-99 at the end of the fifth over-time period. The running score and the electric scoreboard, however, showed Marietta on top 100 to 99.

Bosox Sell Jake Jones

Boston, Jan. 15 (AP).—"Jake" Jones, Red Sox first baseman, was sold today to Louisville, the Sox office announced. Used mostly as a pinch-hitter last year, Jones batted .200.

140 Humans Killed

Deer Hunter Exonerated in Wife's Shooting, But Pays $100 Fine for Unlawful Hunting

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Deer hunter gunfire has killed thousands of deer this season—and at least 140 people, too.

In addition, at least 78 persons lost their lives in activities related to deer hunting, making a total of 218 in 24 States.

Last year 144 persons died from deer hunter gunfire. About 3,500,000 venison-hungry people pull triggers each year.

The list of gunfire deaths reported in an Associated Press survey showed Maine on top with 20. New York counted 16, Colorado, 13; Michigan, 11, and California and Wisconsin 10 each.

In Connecticut a man mistook his wife for a deer and killed her. The coroner reported it was accidental, but the man paid a $100 fine for unlawful hunting.

Hundreds of hunters and bystanders were wounded in the barrage. In Louisa County, Va., a hunter fired only two shots. Both times he shot and injured another hunter.

Many of the deaths were caused by mistaken identity. In Oregon, Lawrence Simmon, 59, of Broadbent, saw what he thought was a bear in a tree.

"I hollered and it raised its back up, so I naturally thought it was a bear," he testified later.

Instead of a bear, he killed 15-year-old Arthur Cotter, who was picking apples. A coroner's jury decided Simmon was criminally negligent, but a grand jury exonerated him.

In New Hampshire, a hunter was killed by a train he failed to hear approaching. He was deaf. In Colorado a hunter was trampled by a horse.

George Berg, a San Francisco machinist, went out in his car to hunt deer last October 5. He was sleeping in the car when an alarm clock sounded.

He woke up with a start, and knocked over the clock. The clock hit the trigger of a six-shooter. The bullet went through a spare gasoline can. The gasoline exploded and Berg died in the fire.

Some Michigan hunters who were wounded had some unusual tales:

State police figured William Shaw, 30, of Van Dyke, Mich., had accidentally shot himself because the bullet had entered the top of his foot and had come out through the sole. He had, however, that he was standing on his head when he was shot.

Roy Wengard, 28, of Plymouth, Mich., said that just for a laugh he crawled toward his camping fellow hunters and growled like a bear. He got it in the shoulder.

In at least one case, deer struck back at humans. Near Rockford, Ill., three deer ran across the highway in front of an automobile, upsetting it and pinning the driver beneath it. He was rescued unhurt some time later.

Stranahan Fires 66 to Take Crosby Golf Lead

Has Scored 468 Points

Jim Pantos Already Is a Central Great

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

JIMMY PANTOS, already the most productive athlete in Central High history, is now gaining recognition from seasoned observers as one of Interhigh's finest of all ime.

Jimmy doesn't become a senior until the first of February. But as a forward on the basketball team, halfback on the football team and second baseman on the baseball team, he has scored 568 points for Central.

The Interhigh office keeps no scoring records in its file, but the consensus is that no other athlete in Interhigh history has been more prolific in three years than Pantos has been in less than two.

The old-timers around the league, usually slow in handing out compliments to the newcomers, are now jumping on the Pantos bandwagon.

Tommy Nolan, key figure on the 1934-35 Eastern basketball teams generally rated the greatest in Interhigh history, yetserday said:

"That kid could have played regular on either of the teams which won the Washington and Lee and Glens Falls (N. Y.) Eastern States tournament championships.

"I DON'T KNOW which of the boys I'd have benched if I'd been coach, but one of them would have had to sit down," said Tommy, now baseball coach at Anacostia High.

Tommy, Harry Bassin, Gay Edelin and Dopey Dean on those Eastern teams made the grade at Georgetown; Tom Davis went to Alabama, Al Waters to Maryland, etc.

"A 21-year eligibility rule was in effect and we played a different kind of game then, more passing, less dribbling. But Jimmy would have adjusted himself. He's fast, can stop, start and fake, dribble, guard and he can certainly shoot. You couldn't bench him."

There's some question about Jimmy's ability to make a go of football after his high school days are over. He weighs only 145 pounds.

An enthusiastic supporter of Jimmy's football future is Jan Jankowski, former Catholic U. quarterback ace, and now grid coach at Central.

"JIMMY" could have played college ball last year, though he's only 17. He's been around, and knows how to handle himself against the bigger boys. He's very fast, slippery, can pass and kick and is as shrewd on defense as they come. After he's hit, he knows how to roll and fall. I've never seen a more natural athlete in all my life.

"Remember this, too—Jimmy is going to grow, and he'll be even tougher then. He's 5 feet, 10 inches tall, has broad shoulders, big hands and big bones. When he stops getting taller, he'll fill out," says Jan.

Pantos' baseballing testimonial comes from a major league scout. The first time Harry Postove of the Chicago Cubs saw Pantos make a play, Jimmy was booting a grounder.

"That kid looks like a comer even though he missed that one," said Postove. "I like him because he's loose. I've never heard of him before, but I'll bet he's one of the best around here."

He was right. Jimmy hit .327 in 15 games, and was one of the smoothest fielders in the city. He starred on The Washington Post all-star team which split in a two-game series with the famed Brooklyn-Against-The-World team.

JIMMY was a natural from the time he first broke into the Interhighs. In his first league game, a week after he'd played his last game for Jefferson Junior High, he scored 17 points against Eastern.

In his first football game, he threw two touchdown passes against Granby of Norfolk, the team that went on to play in the Orange Bowl High School game.

In two seasons, of football, he has scored 11 touchdowns, passed to 10 others, set up at least 20 more, and kicked nine extra points. In 36 basketball games, he has scored 415 points for an 11.6 average. He has scored 18 runs in 30 games, and batted in 14 others.

Though Jimmy still has a full year of high school ahead of him, he is being pursued by eager college alumni.

Jimmy's kid brother, Duke, is also much sought-after, but by the high schools. Duke is slated to graduate from MacFarland Junior High next week.

"Jimmy tells us that Duke could make the Central basketball team right now," said Jankowski yesterday. "We can use reinforcements."

Correction

The Washington Post yesterday incorrectly carried an account of the Bladensburg-Hyattsville High School basketball game, stating that Bladensburg won, 41-33. The score ewas 41-33, but Hyattsville was the winner.

Lynchburg Trims Galludet, 57-52

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Lynchburg College basketball team took an early lead over Gallaudet College and held off a last minute threat to win its first Mason-Dixon Conference game, 57-52, here tonight.

Amateur's 137 Ousts Ben Hogan

By Russ Newland

Pebble Beach, Calif., Jan. 15 (AP).—Amateur Frank Stranahan tossed a par-shattering bombshell into the solid ranks of the big professionals today to pop into the lead of the Bing Crosby invitational golf tournament.

The millionaire-apparent from Toledo, Ohio, who plays as much competitive golf as any in the country, shot a second-round 66 to wrest the lead from the national champion himself, Ben Hogan.

Stranahan, six under par for the Monterey Peninsula Country Club course, had a 36-hole total of 137.

Worsham Has 69

Pebble Beach, Calif., Jan. 15. Lew Worsham of Chevy Chase, Md., fired a 69 here today to give him a two-day total of 141 in the 54-hole Bing Crosby golf tournament.

Hogan, United States Open and PGA titleholder as well as a stout favorite to win here, had moved to the front of the pack earlier in the day. Hogan also had a 66 that gave him a two-round score of 138.

Embarrasses Pros

Whether Stranahan will be leading at the end of tomorrow's third and final round of the 54-hole links party staged annually by Crooner Crosby, was anybody guess tonight. In any event, being strictly amateur, he won't threaten the pros in their quest for the $10,000 cash prizes.

But the men who play for pay dislike having a simson-pure outscore them.

Stranahan, incidentally, has done this before he won the Miami Open last December from the country's leading professionals.

Defending British amateur champion, Stranahan, chalked up a first round 71. His 34-32 today was a corking effort. Even so, it failed to match by a stroke that of his partner in the pro-amateur division, Cary Middlecoff of Memphis. Middlecoff toured the course in 33-32—65.

Between the two of them, they set up a two-round best ball score of 67-62—129. This left them in second place behind Bill Nary of Phoenix, the first round pro leader, and his amateur teammate, Frank "Lefty" O'Doul of baseball prominence. The Nary-O'Doul combo remained in front as the result of best ball rounds of 61-66—127.

In his individual professional efforts for the money pot, Nary fell back from his initial round flash, when he shot a 66 to top the entire field. His one-over-par 73 for total 139 today dropped him behind Stranahan, and one stroke in back of Hogan. The 139 bracket was shared by Jim Ferrier of San Francisco, who added a 70 to yesterday's 69.

Big Skip Alexander of Durham, N. C., was fairly close to the pace with 68, 72—140 and Middlecoff's sensational 65, 11 better than the preceding day, boosted him up the line with a 141. Lew Worsham, former National Open champ, shared the same position, as did Horton Smith, Joe Brown, Emery Zimmerman, Eddie Joseph of Fairfax, Calif., and Lloyd Mangrum, also a former American title holder as well as winner here last year.

American University broke two Mason-Dixon Conference swimming records yesterday, but lost to the loop champions, Loyola of Baltimore, 38-37, at the A.U. pool.

Turner's Arena Took Root in Lubrication Pit . . .

After 14 Years It Has More Rentals Than It Has Dates to Handle Them

DON'T tell Gorgeous George, the perfume industry's gift to wrestling, but he grapples in a place where autos were greased.

Not far from the wrestling ring in Turner's Arena where the Gorgeous one displays his golden locks once stood a lubrication pit.

That was in 1935 when the present Turner's Arena, one of the busiest in the Nation, was only a garage. The late Joe Turner walked into the garage, surveyed it for a few moments and said: "What an ideal spot for an arena."

Today, 14 years later, the 14th and W sts. nw. emporium is busier than ever. It's so heavily booked with activities of all sorts that it has 12 more rentals in January and February than there are days in these two months.

IT WAS established as a boxing and wrestling foundry. The boxers and wrestlers are still the backbone of the Arena, but political meetings, basketball games, dances, union gatherings and spiri.ua' meetings are gradually crowding those two sports out of the picture.

Henry Wallace and Harold Ickes, the old curmudgeon himesIf, have spoken there . . . six world's boxing champions have fought there . . . every well-known wrestler from Jim Londos to the Super Swedish Angel has been pinned there . . . world's professional basketball champions made Turner's Arena their headquarters . . . a heavyweight boxer actually made it his home, sleeping in the ring (sometimes, it seemed, during his fights) . . . Remember him? Dixie Oliver.

Its list of headline attractions ranges from Tommy Dorsey to the wrestling bear. The late Promoter Turner, a former wrestler, constructed the Arena when the old City Auditorium was no longer available.

When Turner died two years ago, his wife, Mrs. Florence Turner, became the boxing and wrestling promoter. She's one of the few if n' the only, woman promoter in the country.

HER MATCHMAKER is Gabe Menandez, the Don Juan from Tampa who served her husband in the same capacity when he was only 26 years old, the youngest matchmaker in the country at the time.

There've been many changes in the Arena personnel since that

Boxing, Wrestling Events Now in Minority As Social Events Crowd Schedule

December day in 1935 when Turner opened "the finest Arena in the South" with a 15-rounder between Phil Furr and Sid Silas. But one who has been there all the time is Oliver "Doc" Ayers, publisher of the Arena's weekly program.

Doc's still there, printing the weekly schedule of events and soliciting ads for his program. He treasures a few of the not too old programs which feature ads for new cars for $615.00, delivered in Washington, and a "complete funeral for as low as $75."

There have been many laughs around the Arena in 14 years, but the one which gives Matchmaker Menendez the biggest kick concerns a former Washington heavyweight fighter, now a policeman.

THIS FIGHTER wasn't much, but Goldie Ahearn, Turner's first matchmaker, used him in preliminary roles. As the fighter's appeal lessened, so did Goldie's patience. Goldie finally decided to discard him, but Charlie O'Connell, the concessionaire, pleaded with Ahearn to use the boy.

"But most of the spectators leave the Arena when he fights," Goldie answered.

"That's my point," Concessionaire O'Connell explained. When he fights, everybody flocks to the concessions stand. He's the best attraction I have."

Sixto Escobar, one-time bantomweight ruler, and Harry Jeffra, former featherweight king, lost nontitle bouts at Turner's, but one "champion" actually lost his crown on the Turner mat.

He was Yvonne Robert, 1937 wrestling champion, who lost his title bout to Cliff Olson.

Except for taxes and hot dogs, Turner's mantains the same price scale today as it did for events in 1935.

"We can't control taxes," Mrs. Turner explained, "and we don't manufacture our own hotdogs. We simply had to raise them from a dime to 15 cents."

Jockey Longden Set Down 5 Days For "Bad Riding"

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 15 (AP).—Ace Jockey Johnny Longden today was grounded for five days, effective January 18, for bad riding at Santa Anita.

The veteran was set down for failing to keep a straight course on Papagos in the fifth race yesterday.

The suspension, which expires after January 22, does not keep him from riding stakes engagements previously contracted.

Maryland Whips Duke Wrestlers

The University of Maryland topped Duke University, 20½-7½, in a Southern Conference wrestling match at College Park yesterday.

Gonzaga Plays St. Anthony's

The young, thriving Catholic High Basketball League gets the jump on the other schools this week, with one game scheduled this evening. Gonzaga is host to St. Anthony's at 7:30 p. m.

A second league game, between DeMatha and Georgetown Prep, was postponed indefinitely last night to avoid competition with the Gonzaga game. Last Friday night's league doubleheader at Catholic U. attracted more than 2000 fans.

The Eagles of Gonzaga, with one league victory under their belt, can tie St. John's for first place if they win today. The unbeaten Eagles have eight wins to their credit altogether, and have an imposing 54 points-per-game average.

Tippy Larkins and Mike Nolan are Gonzaga's two top pointmaking threats, each with an 11-point average. Paul McGown, Maurice Murphy and Dave Gardiner round out the first team, which averages 6 foot, 2 inches tall per man.

St. Thomas Tops St. Anne's, 27-26, To Tie for Lead

By virtue of a 27-26 victory over St. Anne's, the St. Thomas intermediate CYO basketball team moved into a tie for first first place with Blessed Sacrament, which handed Our Lady of Victory a 43-21 trouncing yesterday at the St. Anne gym in the CYO tourney.

To settle the dispute for league leading honors, the two top position holders will square off next Saturday on the St. Anne court.

Other results of yesterday are:

TRY Hudson! ..See why ...it's lower...it's better!

Here's the only car you step down into—the lowest on the highway—a stunning beauty with the liveliest, smoothest and safest way of going you've ever known—the result of an exciting new design that makes this years-ahead car, by all odds, the wisest choice today!

The whole world knows that the lower a car is built, the more graceful its lines can be made. The world knows, too, that the lower a car can be built, the better it rides and handles, the better it performs, and the safer it is.

And now you are invited to see and drive the lowest-built car on the highway—a history-making automobile—the New Hudson!

Yes, when you try Hudson you're experiencing automotive history in the making, because for years, whenever the ideal in low-built design has been attempted without lowering interior floors, tops have had to be kept high to preserve inside head room, or roominess has been sacrificed to get tops lower—an undesirable compromise either way.

But the New Hudson—and only Hudson—has recessed floors. Thus, lounge-size seats are lowered to harmonize with the new, lower top.

Because you step down into Hudson, you get more head room and roomier seats than in any mass-produced car built today . . . and all of this along with ample road clearance!

But you'll soon find that amazing roominess is only one of the wonderful things you get in this unique, new kind of car that's better because it's lower!* We believe you'll want to read about more of them in the column to the right. Then see your nearby Hudson dealer who will gladly arrange for you to drive this sensationally low-built automobile. He is ready for your visit right now!

*The many advantages of Hudson's "Step-Down" design are fully explained and illustrated in a booklet available at all Hudson dealers.
Optional on all models at extra cost.

BETTER design—because the "step-down" principle is so basically right it frees designers of the need for make-shift styling, enables Hudson to achieve pleasing proportions and symmetric, free-flowing lines.

BETTER performance: Hudson's all-new, high-compression Super-Six engine—the most powerful American-built Six—the masterful Super-Eight, perform at their brilliant best because this car is so low-built, so thoroughly streamlined.

BETTER roadability: With the lowest center of gravity in any American stock car, Hudson really hugs the road, especially on curves. Hudson's Fluid-Cushioned Clutch, Center-Point Steering and Triple-Safe Brakes all contribute mightily to a wonderful feeling of assurance.

BETTER value: One look, one ride will quickly tell you as never before that here is an automobile so far ahead it is a protected investment in motor-car value! Any Hudson dealer will gladly give you exact information about deliveries and all the marvelous features and conveniences you get as standard equipment with this remarkable car. You are invited to visit the nearest Hudson showroom today!

Faultless Gets Up in Last Jump To Win $12,050 Tropical 'Cap

King Midas Head Behind $5.10 Choice

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Faultless, from Waren Wright's all-powerful Calumet Farm, got up in the last nod to capture the $12,050 Tropical Handicap as a 40-day meeting ended this afternoon before a crowd of 14,783.

Twice beaten in sprints at the Coral Gables session, the Bull Lea 5-year-old found the longer distance of a mile and a sixteenth more to his liking and wore down King Midas, from Bruce Livie's Bobanet Stable, by a head to earn the $8,375 first share of the purse.

G. R. Watkins' Cat Bridge, an entry with Rampart, was third in the field of 10, three lengths off the front pair. Hash Night picked up fourth money.

Popular Victory

The fabulous Calumet Stable had been no ball fire at this meeting but Faultless, finding the third time the charm, was a very popular winner, paying the talent $5.10 for two. He completed the journey in 1:45 2/5 under Newbold Leroy Pierson.

The brown veteran, as a 3-year-old, won the Preakness and Withers Stakes, while his most notable 1948 conquest came in the Gallant Fox Handicap.

Ramadan set the pace by a narrow margin for more than a half mile, with Hash Night forcing the issue and the nicely rated Faultless leading the others.

At the far turn, the first three horses were bunched and King Midas had rallied to forge into the close battle for command. Midway of the bend to the stretch, the Bobanet colorbearer gained a narrow lead.

Duel Stirs Fans

Pierson brought Faultless around King Midas for the drive home. It was a duel which had the fans on their feet cheering lustily, and Faultless lived up to his name, wearing down King Midas just as they hit the wire.

Cat Bridge, far back early, headed the tired, but game, Hash Night out of the show. Bug Juice was fifth, followed by Atom Buster, Ramadan, Gregalach, the sluggish Rampart and Michael B.

The Tropical meeting got off to a very slow start but began picking up with arrival of the holidays and, graced by almost constant fine weather, finally shook off the threat of winding up "in the red."

Navy's Push-Button Fencers Top NYU With Pinball Setup

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Electrical fencing was introduced at the Naval Academy today as Navy opened its intercollegiate season with a 15-12 victory over New York University.

The fencers were wired for lights which flashed when hits were scored.

The gadget, used in the 1948 Olympic Games, is science's gift to an age-old sport, the atomic age's way of saying touche.

The fencers thrust and parried at the ends of wires leading 10 yards back to tension springs and around the floor to a box on the scorer's bench.

Hits were registered by a white lamp on the box, one assigned to each man. The weapons were electrified, the pressure closing a circuit at the tip.

The electrical referee was used only in the epee events, not having been adopted as yet for the saber and foils. Three fencing judges worked right along with the gadgets, but when the fencers came together, they looked back for the lights to see which man had scored first, rather than for the usual red chalk marks on the uniform.

Navy swept the epee events by a score of 8-to-1 after NYU had taken the lead in the foils.

Rifle Team Loses

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15 (AP). George Washington sharpshooters today toppled the Navy rifle team, 1948 intercollegiate champions, by a score of 1387 to 1374.

With a high individual score of 286 out of 300, C. J. Liberty led the Washington team to its upset victory. Liberty had 99 from the prone position, 94 kneeling and 93 standing.

Midshipmen R. E. Engle and W. G. Eicke of George Washington were the only men to shoot a perfect 100 from the prone position in the Navy rifle gallery.

Scores: George Washington: Liberty 286, Ferri 280, Eicke 275, Hunley 273, Bildahl 273. Total 1387.

Navy: Monroe 278, Engle 276, Sutelle 275, Stone 274, Edmundson 271. Total 1374.

Eastern Beats Episcopal

Pete Dyer and Jim Lamon led Eastern High School to a 41-to-33 victory yesterday over Episcopal of Alexandria at the losers' gym.

Dyer scored eight points and Lemon seven. Bill Attwell of Episcopal, was high scorer, however, with 14 points.

Playing an extremely close defensive game, Eastern always had the game under control. Episcopal was only in close contention in the third period while Eastern's regulars were on the bench, and tied things up, 26-26, as the period ended. At the beginning of the fourth period the first team returned and rang up nine quick points before Episcopal could score and Episcopal never came close again.

Renovation At Roosevelt Hotel Set

A half-million-dollar renovation program will start within the next month at the Roosevelt Hotel here, Mrs. Maria Kramer, owner, said yesterday.

Mrs. Kramer disclosed the plan coincident with conclusion of an agreement by which she won complete title to the hotel along with control of the Lincoln Hotel, in the New York Times Square area.

Under terms of the agreement involving Mrs. Kramer, her two stepsons, Milton and Nathan, and the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Co., Mrs. Kramer relinquished her holdings in New York's Edison Hotel to her stepsons.

The agreement ended a legal fight waged since the death June 17, 1946, of Builder Max Kramer, husband of Maria Kramer, involving control of Kramer's 10-million-dollar estate. Kramer had started as a $6-a week carpenter's apprentice—the son of Polish immigrants.

For almost 20 years before his death, his hotel chain, which included the Lincoln, Edison, Graystone and Monterey in New York, and the Roosevelt here, had been directed by Mrs. Kramer.

The latter achieved recognition as the first woman to direct a hotel chain but because of the legal snarl over the estate she had found herself of late confined to purely administrative duties.

Young Pianist Critically Hurt In 4-Floor Leap

New York, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—A brilliant young pianist who resented playing for night clubs and cafe society was in critical condition today after hurling himself through a fourth-floor window in Carnegie Hall.

The young man, John Pearce, 25, son of a prominent Los Angeles physician, lunged through a closed window of a singing teacher's suite last night while concert pianist Harry Davis played to a packed concert hall below.

Just before the jump Pearce mumbled something about the futility of life and music, a friend, John Morrison, said.

D. C. Building Permits Total 3797 in '48

Despite seasonal decreases in the number of new building permits issued in major United States cities during December, Washington, D. C., and Long Beach, Calif., reported large increases, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

In Washington permits were issued for 3797 new dwellings during the year and the city ranked thirteenth among 20 leading cities in permits issued. The 1947 figure was 4303.

The 1948 building season swung sharply upward with new houses started at a rate averaging almost 100,000 a month during the April-July period, the bureau reported, then slowed down to a more normal season pattern.

The 56,000 dwellings started in December brought the Nation's total to 96,800 and the bureau expects final reports on housebuilding for the year to bring a total slightly exceeding 930,000. This figure, they point out, is within about one per cent of the all-time peak of 937,000 units started in 1925.

Compared with 1947 the year's performance based on preliminary estimates, shows an increase of 9 per cent or 77,800 units. Rental housing construction in 1948 comprised 17 per cent of the total number of units started while in 1947 it was 13 per cent.

Average construction costs of privately financed one-family units increased 8 per cent during the year as opposed to a 34 per cent rise in 1947, according to the bureau's figures.

Communism Rift Crisis Faced by WFTU Monday

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—The World Federation of Trade Unions, torn with dissension over communism, faces a crisis Monday at a meeting of its executive bureau in Paris.

East-west political differences are expected to result in the withdrawal of the British Trade Union Congress (TUS), probably the American Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) and European non-Communist unions.

The TUC will bring the conflict to a head when it formally presents its proposal that unless the WFTU suspends activities for a year, after which its constitution might be reexamined, the British unions will walk out.

Soviet trade unions, commanding a majority vote within the WFTU because of their large size, are expected to carry on alone.

The announcement said they become available for general licensing, on a royalty-free basis, as a result of "waiver by an American national of its alleged claim of interest" in the patents.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Lard sank to another series of new lows on the Board of Trade today. Soybeans accompanied lard on the downward trail, although only the July bean contract got into new seasonal low territory.

Action of these commodities, largely tied in with a general weakness of fats and oils, had an unsettling influence on grains. All cereals weakened at one time, but new crop wheat deliveries staged a good rally to end with small gains shortly before the close.

Wheat ended ¼ lower to ¾ higher, corn was ¼ to 1 cent lower, oats were unchanged to 1 cent lower, rye was 1¼ lower, soybeans were 1¾-2¼ lower and lard was 13-23 cents a hundred pounds lower.

The drop in lard and soybeans came in the face of official confirmation of trade rumors of an increase of 109 million pounds in first quarter fats and oils export allocations. Included were 57 million pounds of soybeans, 9,300,000 pounds of soybean oil and 30 million pounds of lard.

More important as a price-making influence was the overnight Agriculture Department announcement that United States cold storage holdings of lard jumped from 74,335,000 to 112,278,000 pounds between December 1 and January 1. After the close it was revealed lard stocks in Chicago increased 27,115,518 pounds between January 1 and January 15. They now total 81,472,883 pounds.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Growing Signs of a Recession

President Truman may still feel inflation's the big United States problem, but . . .

S. Sloan Colt, president of the Bankers Trust Co., New York, feels inflation has run its course. Malcolm P. McNair, marketing professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, declares the "keen edge is off consumer demand." James D. Mooney, president of Willys-Overland, thinks a buyers' market for all cars is only six months off.

Livingston

The Colt-McNair-Mooney judgments have a foundation. The price of heavy melting scrap has dropped about $2 a ton, a sign that supplies are more plentiful. A. & P. has cut retail egg prices about 10 per cent. The Department of Agriculture estimates that farmers' January marketings will be off 12 per cent from a year ago. Chief factor: Lower quotations.

And the Bureau of the Census counted 2,000,000 unemployed in December—a small total by prewar standards, but 300,000 above the year before. What's more, layoffs continue. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has dropped 600 laborers and machinists, bringing total recent layoffs to 940. United Shoe Machinery has let 250 of its 3000 workers go—as part of a plan of postwar readjustment.

Record Drop in Loans

The banking system, always sensitive to changes in the business tempo, reflects this hesitancy. In the week ended January 5, business loans at reporting Federal Reserve member banks were down 195 million dollars. True, some shrinkage, after Christmas, was to be expected. But this was the greatest one-week drop ever recorded. Moreover, only one Federal Reserve district escaped it—Minneapolis. Here's the story, area by area (in millions of dollars—000,000 omitted):

Reserve District	Business loans Jan. 5	Per cent change from previous week
United States	$15,366	—1.3
Boston	695	—2.0
New York	5,904	—1.0
Philadelphia	524	—2.6
Cleveland	917	—1.6
Richmond	412	—1.4
Atlanta	549	—0.7
Chicago	1,859	—2.4
St. Louis	622	—1.6
Minneapolis	247	+0.8
Kansas City	579	—0.7
Dallas	778	—0.6
San Francisco	2,280	—0.8

No one or two big corporations retired large loans, thus accounting for the drop. Even in the two central reserve cities of New York and Chicago, the payoffs were mostly by smaller business enterprises on loans of less than one million dollars. Apparently retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers are retrenching—cutting down on inventory. They don't want to be caught "long" in a recession.

Sales Surprise

Post-Christmas clearance sales bear this out. Manufacturers and wholesalers have made big concessions to stores to move overstocked merchandise. Department stores, in turn, have put on sales a la 1939. Result, a surprise: In the week ended January 8, sales were up 9% over the corresponding week of 1948. That in contrast to minuses in the weeks just prior to Christmas!

Such gains, if persistent, will be certain to modify doubts about the 1949 business outlook. However, one question still requires an answer: Have the stores borrowed from the future, have they, by marking down prices, brought forward into January sales which otherwise would have been made in February or March?

The newly risen competition for the consumer dollar is most manifest in television. This raucous, postwar baby already has entered an era of price cutting. Yet two months ago, manufacturers could not satisfy demand. And less than a month ago, in year-end statements about the 1949 outlook, executives were wildly optimistic and confident.

Competition: This Against That

Housewives, obviously, are on value hunts. They're measuring clothing for the family, say, against a refrigerator or a television set; or a new carpet against a washing machine. And so on.

Except for passenger cars, electric ranges, and refrigerators, sales of most consumer durable goods are noticeably below the postwar peak. However, volume generally runs ahead of prewar tops (except for cars and refrigerators), as the following table shows (000 omitted):

Product	Prewar High	Postwar High	Recent Month
Trucks, Buses	97	142	105
Passenger cars	538	384	370
Refrigerators	483	398	389
Washing Machines	214	434	319
Electric Ranges	69	131	126
Tires	7600	8577	6750
Vacuum Cleaners	172	373	255
Electric Irons	382	784	437
Oil Burners	25	124	59
Radios	1137	1583	1000

This has political as well as economic implications. It suggests that President Truman picked a bad time to ask Congress for authority to investigate steel capacity and, if necessary, seek authority to construct Government plants. At the moment, demand for steel is less hectic than it was three and six months ago. The gray market is almost white.

Steel mills are operating close to capacity, and slowly but surely capacity is increasing (see chart). As against 71 million tons of ingot-making facilities in 1929 and 82 million in 1939, the industry today has 96 million. Projected installations will bring that up to nearly 99 million tons in 1951. So, unless military demands are unexpectedly large or long strikes in coal or steel occur, the industry ought to be on top of orders later this year. In short, steel's feast may be over.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Cotton futures today closed 5 to 45 cents a bale lower. During most of the session the list held strictly higher, but in late dealings was influenced by weakness in grains, fats and oils.

There was some price fixing which dealers described as covering operations against export sales and for domestic mill account. Hedging and some commission house profit-taking supplied the early demand. Generally, however, volume was small as dealers awaited new developments. These included action in Washington on farm price legislation as well as in the export field.

China shortly was expected to be in the market for cotton and trade estimates of purchases in this direction will involve about 100,000 bales. In addition the trade estimated that Japan would be in the market soon for 50,000 bales of cotton. An inquiry from Great Britain, involving about 100,000 bales of U. S. cotton, was also expected by traders to be placed in the U. S. market in the near future.

Frank Stryker, Banker for 43 Years, Retires

By S. Oliver Goodman

Frank J. Stryker, veteran of 43 years in Washington banking, has retired as a vice president of the American Security & Trust Co., it was announced yesterday.

Stryker

Stryker has been associated with the trust company since 1946 when Columbia National Bank and American Security were consolidated. Previously, he had been president of Columbia since 1924.

A native Washingtonian, Stryker attended local schools and was graduated from Business High School. He was first employed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone companies in Baltimore and Washington. In 1905 he entered the banking business in this city as a general clerk and was associated with several banks until 1922 when he became vice president and cashier of Columbia National.

Stryker is a director of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. and the Equitable Cooperative Building Association.

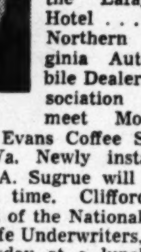
Albert E. Yeatman, assistant vice president of American Security who was connected with Columbia National for 20 years prior to the merger, has been placed in charge of the branch.

PROPOSAL: Edward Cowen, secretary-treasurer of the Young Men's Shop of Washington, believes promotion is the answer to dropping sales in men's wear. Said Cowen at the recent convention of National Retail Dry Goods Association in New York: "What the men's suit industry needs is not a $35 suit with two pairs of pants but an industry fund for promoting men's clothes, just like prunes, oranges and walnuts." He suggested a 10-cent per suit levy upon manufacturers until a fund of $3,500,000 is raised.

AIB BANQUET: More than 1100 are expected to attend the annual banquet of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, on February 19 in the Mayflower. Herbert D. Lawson, jr., chapter president, yesterday appointed Kenneth O. Hulse of Hamilton National Bank as general chairman in charge of the elaborate fete. Vice chairmen are: B. Bruce Frantz, Thomas J. Norris and Theodore P. Cowgill. Secretary is Murnah Parlberg and treasurer is Lloyd S. Carey. Subcommittee chairmen include: decorations, Grant D. Simmonds, jr.; entertainment, Ralph H. Mittendorff; publicity, Allen A. Greenstreet; reception, Stephen O. Porter; eating, John M. Christie; Women's, M. Patricia McShane; guest's Samuel C. Redman, jr.

MORE SHIPS: The privately owned American merchant fleet consisted of 1216 ocean-going ships of 1000 gross tons and over on January 1, compared to 1003 such vessels a year ago, the National Federation of American Shipping reported. The federation said the net addition in one year amounted to almost 2,900,000 deadweight tons.

MEETINGS: Randolph E. Paul, former general counsel of the Treasury Department, will discuss 1949 tax legislation at a meeting Wednesday night of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, in the Lafayette Hotel . . . The Northern Virginia Automobile Dealers Association will meet Monday night in the Evans Coffee Shop, Alexandria, Va. Newly installed President P. A. Sugrue will preside for first time. Clifford H. Orr, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, will speak Wednesday at a luncheon meeting of the local group in the Shoreham Hotel.



Paul

ODD LOTS: Department store sales in Washington jumped 14 per cent in the week ended January 8 over the corresponding week of 1948, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reports. Sales in the district served by the bank showed a gain of 10 per cent over last year . . . Directors of Government Employes Insurance Co. have declared the regular semiannual dividend of 50 cents a share on the outstanding 125,000 shares of capital stock, payable January 31 to stockholders of record January 21 . . . Washington Gas Light Co. reports 1948 sales aggregated 153,183,094 therms, a new peak in its 100-year history. The output was 14.36 per cent greater than in 1947.

Stocks Gain Slightly on Small Volume

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—A new year rally in the stock market died on the vine this week.

Day by day the price level slowly sagged until Saturday's two-hour session when the lightest of demand turned out to be enough to prop the market.

During the first week of the year quotations on the average moved ahead smartly and Wall Street, claimed that the signs and portents held out the promise of a sustained rise. The signs and portents—and this was no novelty in the financial district—are wrong thus far.

Investors and speculators were waiting for something to happen but nobody seemed quite sure what they were waiting for or when to expect it. The volume of trading on the exchange dropped to a total that put more than one brokerage house in the red for the week.

The smooth surface of the market was churned up late in the week with a threat to American Telephone & Telegraph Co. which

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	264	199
Declines	176	626
Unchanged	196	191
Total issues	636	1016

was under governmental fire. The price of the stock dropped a couple of dollars to the lowest level since 1943. A. T. & T. declined a point Friday and 1⅛ points on today, unusually large swings for what is regarded as one of the most stable of all stocks traded on the exchange.

The Justice Department suit asked that A. T. & T. get rid of its holdings in Western Electric Corp., a manufacturing subsidiary. Last year Western Electric paid its parent at the rate of $1 a share quarterly which was equal to about $1.50 a share on T. T. & T. common. One school of thought believed that if A. T. & T. did lose Western Electric, the stock would be distributed to stockholders who might make up in Western Electric dividends what they lost in A. T. & T. dividends.

Long Island R. R. Engineers to Quit; Lives in 'Jeopardy'

New York, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Long Island Railroad engineers have voted to strike unless locomotives are improved immediately and their lives removed from "jeopardy," a union official said today.

The road denied that its equipment is unsafe, and said lives of passengers and employes were carefully guarded. It was pointed out the railroad is under constant surveillance of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Public Service Commission.

Although no deadline has been set, should the strike be called it would affect both steam and electric locomotives carrying thousands of commuters daily to and from Long Island.

First Ladies' Inaugural Gowns Are Put On View

By Marie McNair

AMERICAN made, American designed, are the First Lady's five new gowns and Margaret Truman's four, to be worn to Inaugural festivities this week.

The most elegant is Mrs. Truman's ball gown designed by Mme. Pola of New York. Of black panne velvet cut on close lines, the skirt is draped at the side, is floor length in front, slightly longer in the back. A deep circular collar makes the bodice and hand-drawn white Alencon lace falls gracefully over the shoulders forming an oval neckline. Above-elbow white gloves will be de rigeur.

Washington's own Mme. Agasta was the designer of Mrs. Truman's gown to be worn at the noonday ceremonies at the Capitol. Of iridescent black and gray rajah silk, the costume features a slim skirt 12 inches from the floor, and a back fullness achieved by a folded pleat. The matching jacket with a peplum carries out the line with a back pleat. The First Lady will wear one of the first straw hats of the season, of moonstone straw cloth draped with black nylon tulle with a single mauve-pink rose nestling in the folds.

Gray Satin for Reception

THE THOUSANDS of guests attending the Inaugural reception Thursday afternoon at which President and Mrs. Truman will be hosts, will see Mrs. Truman in a pearl gray satin gown patterned in a dull silver feather design. Ducharne of Paris was the designer of the fabric, Mme. Pola of New York the couturier. Simple in line, the gown is intricate in cut, with fullness in the skirt ending in a slight train.

The deep V neckline is edged in appliqued feather design and the sleeves, cut wide at the shoulders, taper to just-below-elbow length. Matching suede gloves and a pale mauve off-the-face hat of pressed ostrich feathers which curl in shades from mauve-pink to smoky gray at the side, will complete the costume.

The First Lady will sparkle at the Inaugural Gala Wednesday evening in a gown of silk oriental brocade, antique gold, green and red predominating. There's a draped neckline to this frock, a slim straight skirt, and Mme. Agasta has added a drape to the back with a voluminous sash extending to the hem of the gown and lined with red taffeta. For "one of the receptions during Inaugural week," Mrs. Truman has chosen another Ducharne fabric of black satin damask brocaded in a periwinkle blue design, the skirt just above the ankle and moderately full. Again, Mme. Pola, was the designer. She's used blue silk to face the three quarter sleeves and black Chantilly lace over that to form deep cuffs. The same matching silk and lace are introduced around the softly draped neckline. The hat, made by Suzanne Remy of New York looks like spring itself, of black maline, royal blue cornflowers, pale-blue hyacinth petals, softly shaded pink and white apple blossoms and a sprinkling of pink rosebuds.

A bright splash of color on the Capitol portico on Thursday noon, will be Margaret Truman's red gabardine dressmaker suit with hat to match and black accessories. Later that day she'll switch into a black crepe and lace frock with bands of bronze lace and taffeta. A bronze feather will trim her tiny pink hat and she'll wear bronze shoes and accessories.

'Margaret Pink' for Margaret

THE White House daughter's ball gown of "Margaret Pink" is something every debutante dreams of. Thirty-five yards of silk tulle in sea-shell pink color have gone into this frock with its circular skirt, made up of layer upon layer of tulle. The tight shirred tulle bodice is combined with pale-pink and gold brocade, which crosses over from the left shoulder to form two fan-shaped tiers just below the waistline on the right. An enormous tulle bow is poised on the right shoulder. The gown was designed and created by Mme. Pola.

There's also a bright royal blue faille taffeta hanging in Margaret Truman's closet, made by Mme. Pola, to be worn at "one of the receptions during Inauguration Week." Its blue and narrow black satin stripes form a vague plaid design and the tight-fitting bodice has leg-o'-mutton sleeves ending at the elbows. The skirt, just above ankle length, dips at the back.

While the Nation's Capital goes into high gear for the year's biggest event, Inaugural Ball committees are working overtime on last-minute details.

Nearly 200 workmen are swarming over the National Guard Armory, hanging blue velvet, draping flags and pennants, erecting huge gold-drum booths to house the 10,000 gardenias being flown here by the Mexican government. Each flower will be tied with ribbons in Mexico's national colors, red, white and green. Every feminine guest will get one.

The National Rose Growers' Association, not to be outdone by their good-neighbors, will send 2500, long stemmed American Beauty roses, according to Mrs. Earle Stewart, chairman of the program committee.

There will be a revolving stage, on which three big-name bands, Guy Lombardo, Xavier Cougat and Benny Goodman, will make music continuously and 100 young men from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Forces will serve as ushers for distinguished guests.

Refreshments, Plainclothesmen, Guards

THERE will be refreshments; sandwiches, coffee and cakes, from a long buffet; plainclothesmen on hand to guard bejeweled guests.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, the Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, will be

Mrs. Acheson's Artistic Talent Seen on Farm

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

MRS. DEAN ACHESON is so well known in Washington all mention seems embarrassingly redundant. The charm of her serene personality is difficult to capture in words. Primarily an artist, she's fundamentally domestic yet remains happily unfettered by recipes, sewing and other tedious household minutae. She loves to work on the Acheson Sandy Spring farm, cutting brush, gardening, finding intense satisfaction in growing beautiful flowers. The farm is relaxation and hobby to both Achesons. Through years of ownership the farm and their life there has undergone many changes—first they "went in" for horses, then a strenuous period when everyone played tennis incessantly, and now their extra-toiling activities center around the new pool.

Mrs. Acheson's Georgetown house is alight with flowers, plants line a long, windowed corridor connecting foyer with living room. She surrounds herself with peaceful things, nothing new or obtrusive, pink luster on shelves, mantel, tea tray; on the farm, pewter, a casual collection of hooked rugs, each featuring some sort of cheerful animal. Alice Acheson fits well into her chosen background—tall, slim, delicate features precisely chiseled; dark, curly hair tied with a ribbon almost, but not quite at the crown of her head. She has a strong sense of color, of her particular style, designs many of her clothes, finds her new, tied-back hairdo, a difficult hat choosing problem. From time to time Mrs. Acheson's startled friends by appearing in the dizziest John-Frederics creations. Not her own cold-blooded selection, they were garnered at election time by betting on her staunch Democrat inclination. This year Mrs. Acheson's soberly hatted. At a pre-election party, though angling skillfully, she couldn't pick up a wager, everyone present was certain of President Truman's reelection.

Neither Pallid Nor Pastel

THOUGH painting, flowers, hooked rugs, pink luster may sound a trifle pallid, there's nothing pastel about Mrs. Acheson. She's raised, married happily, two daughters and a son, achieved definite recognition as an artist. Her paintings which, for want of more accurate definition, Mrs. Acheson calls "impressionistic" have been exhibited many times in Washington and, especially successfully at the Wildenstein gallery in New York. She works hard at her profession and, during the war, under the Red Cross Arts and Skills, tirelessly taught painting and drawing to wounded soldiers at Forest Glen. A Detroiter, as a Wellesley student she met, almost immediately married Dean Acheson. Her upbringing had been artistic, mildly musical. When she first came to Washington Mrs. Acheson had to master a new world of politics, of close association with journalists and every type of official.

She was a great success and now, after a brief refresher of private life, as wife of the new Secretary of State, will take on her exhausting job with calm assurance.

Koussevitsky's Nerve Tonic

AFTER Thursday's brilliant concert Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, who's retiring as conductor of Boston's Symphony Orchestra, was guest of honor at a delightful party at the Andre Vissons. Dr. Koussevitsky, who can charm birds off trees in four or more languages, repairs the ravages of orchestra leading in a novel way—a spot of brandy, a glass of champagne, finished off by several cups of hot water flavored with lemon and a pinch of sugar. It's wonderful for the nerves, the maestro claims.

Once freed from orchestral duties Dr. Kousse-

Add to the Three Rs, A Fourth, for Rhythm

For more than a score of years Miss Adelaide Courtney has been teaching Washington's young set how to make a hit on the dance floor. It all began when she was a teen-ager herself and learning to dance. She took it upon herself to teach some of her neighborhood friends the techniques of ballet. Now she has several classes a week in all phases of the dance, her pupils meeting at the Wesley Heights Club. Probably the group that has the most fun at its bi-monthly sessions is the junior high school class. After-school sessions follow at the neighborhood drug store over cokes. Here are (above, from left to right) Homer House, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh House; Alice Freer, daughter of the Robert Freers; Dana Dewey and George Livingstone.

Swinging and swaying into a samba are Homer House and Pearson Henry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Henry. They're both members of the Wesley Heights dancing class which meets bi-monthly

Once Happily Married Man Is Depressed By Feeling, Since Return From Sea Duty, That He Can't Love His Wife; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was drafted into the Navy in 1942 and left home a very happily married man. I didn't have to worry, as many men did, about my wife's being unfaithful to me. She is not the type; and I am not a philanderer. We are true to each other.

I was actively engaged in six battles during the war and was honorably discharged. I was very happy to get home; then almost overnight I changed. I realized that I no longer loved Edith. Being home became an ordeal instead of a pleasure; I began to hate the idea.

However, I felt sure that time would bring me around; but now, after three years, I am no better. Edith doesn't know how I feel; at least, I haven't told her; but she must suspect, because of the way I act towards her. She is growing distant to me at times, and heaven knows I can't blame her.

Wife Is Wonderful; Her Faults Are Few

WE HAVE been married 20 years, have a teen-age son, and Edith is a wonderful wife and mother, as well as a very pretty girl. She holds a fine position, has an excellent record on the job, and her only faults seems to be that she is very possessive and does not make or hold friends easily. Yet I wish I had as few faults as she!

As for myself, I hold a very responsible position, very well paid; but that's beside the point. Can you help me solve my problem without hurting a very wonderful woman? I don't feel I can just walk off and leave Edith alone with the whole responsibility of rearing our son. That would be unfair; she doesn't deserve it. So is there an alternative? Don't pull your punches. J. W.

See the Problem in Perspective

DEAR J. W.: It seems significant that your eagerness to be re-united with Edith dissolved almost overnight, after your return from a long stretch of Naval service, during years of your life when, in any event, you would have been changing irrevocably from young manhood to middle age.

At the time of your departure, your marriage to Edith was still roseate from the afterglow, so to speak, of "romantic" love, which largely consists of blindly cherished illusions about each other. And together with this was the involuntary habit of mutually satisfactory conjugal intimacy.

Moreover, in consequence of 14 years' continuous unbroken companionship in domesticity and double harness, you were then closely knit by countless threads of common interests and concerns, so that you almost echoed each other's thoughts or anticipated each other's characteristic ways of dealing with things. And thus in your round of days together, you lived in mutual acceptance so casual and complete that you didn't objectively "see" each other.

Man Is Missing Vanished Youth

SO WHAT happened? You went to war and were gone for years; you came back greatly changed; and naturally the years had worked changes in Edith, too—and you saw her sharply, clearly, as if she were a stranger. The spell of romantic love had vanished. The fabric of common interests was sundered; it would have to be patiently patched together or reknit from scratch; but you didn't realize that, and possibly Edith didn't, either.

No doubt there were sporadic conversational attempts to make believe the broken threads weren't really broken; but Edith's responses and yours didn't merge with spontaneous interest as of yore; and the forced performance caused you to feel doubly desolate and alien to the home-situation you'd come back to. And so you surrendered to the conviction, "Love is dead and there's nothing here for me."

However, on the score of abiding concern for Edith's welfare, and of compassionate feeling, you are profoundly devoted to your wife. What you've lost is youth, and there is no way of regaining that; but rich compensation is to be found in growth. Thus the solution of your problem is to search your way to a mature level of relatedness with Edith, and I believe the first step consists in gradually confiding your "new mind" (with all its misgivings) to her, in a spirit of asking guidance. The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

A Family Word Game . . .

Do the folks in your family like to play with words? If so, here's an amusing rhyming definition game that was new to me. We had been riding in the car for some time and one of the young people started us on an hour or more of fun.

One person starts by giving a phrase that must be changed into two rhyming words whose meaning is the phrase given. It is indicated how many syllables there are to be—and there must be the same in each of the two words. Here are a few illustrations that should give you the idea, and then you are on your own. You may be surprised at the sparkling wit and puny puns that the game brings out.

"Hard blow" (one syllable)—"stiff biff."

"The ice cream in a cone" (two syllables)—"chilling filling."

"A wet hobo" (one syllable)—"damp tramp."

"A crude girl" (one syllable)—"crass lass."

"A spoiled piece of fruit" (one syllable)—"bum plum."

SLIGHTLY askew to show off what's left of our hair this year of short coiffures, is Lilly Dache's white jersey hat with its profusion of white apple blossoms. It fits closely as a turban and follows the side-slanting line carried over from the winter season

Head Lines Make Headlines

Hat Designers Create Sweet, Saucy Variety For Easter Parade

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 15.—How will you have your hat, milady? Big or little, sailor or bonnet, perky or droopy?

Don't hesitate to be inconsistent or demanding. For we have here for Easter, 1949, anything your little heart desires in the matter of hat styles and shapes. The big name designers of the millinery world, showing their latest collections to the press this week, have apparently decided to play it safe. Variety is their watchword.

There isn't a scare headline in any of these hatlines. Only a few styles will frighten the men, although some are guaranteed to make them whistle. Women should like them because, on the whole, they are sweet and saucy.

Some Safe Assumptions on Easter Styles

BECAUSE they come in such a variety of types it is difficult to point out any definite trends in Easter chapeaux. But after eyeing with envy some four or five hundred of them, we feel it safe to assume the following:

1. High fashion decrees that simple hats will take precedent over elaborate ones. When flowers are used for trimming they are to be as inconspicuous as possible. In other words, the line, not the trimming will tell how much your hat cost.

2. There is a swing to larger hats than we have been wearing this winter. But small hats still have the edge.

3. The side-slanting line, currently in such favor, will be continued.

4. Crowns, for the most part will be head-fitting, although we noticed an alarming number of those little half-hat crowns which were popular a few years ago.

5. Most are short in the back to allow for the short hairdos. Multiple layers in brims is a new trend.

6. Veils are unimportant; but bows, streamers and feathers are all in there pitching for top position.

7. Chiffon, starched net and flexible straws will figure strongly in the high-priced divisions.

And, of Course, Some Personal Favorites

OUR PERSONAL favorites from the collections:

Lilly Dache's sophisticated "picture hat," huge and wonderful, made of layers of misty black net. A "period piece" for the right woman. Also her chiffon-draped turbans.

The collapsible straws by Laddie Northridge, soft and flexible enough to pack into an overnight bag.

Mary Goodfellow's "slip-cover" hat; a wide-brimmed black straw with a detachable set of cotton ruffles.

Sally Victor's delectable bonnets, just right to wear with the first spring suit.

The little flower "wigs" by Walter Florell and the rose and tulle creations of Mr. John, Inc.

Florence Reichman's jaunty tricorne sailors; Lenesta's pastel felt, combined with straw.

The natural straw sailor, faced with black felt, short on one side and soaring high on the other, by John-Frederics.

Brief, filmy, high-crowned pillbox by Margo Hayes.

Emme's straw hat, embroidered with taffeta flowers.

The perfect "basic" hats by Hattie Carnegie, small and neat cloches, pillboxes and bonnets.

A "ROMANTIC" hat designed by Laddie Northridge to complement the scooped out and off-the-shoulder dress necklines shown in the spring and summer dress collections. A long spray of beautifully tinted La France roses entwines the crown of the natural-colored leghorn hat and spills over the gently undulating brim

Diplomatic Circling

There'll Be a Brief Pause For Nation's Inauguration

By Elizabeth Maguire

Like a "stand-by" on the radio, the diplomatic scene is cleared pending Inauguration Day. On Friday, the day after, all stations will have the same program—a reception on the occasion of the Inauguration.

The Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen will receive between 4 and 6 on that day, and a reception will be held at the Norwegian Embassy by the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps and Mme. Morgenstierne. At the Danish Embassy the Ambassador and Mme. Kauffmann will be hosts at a cocktail party, and at the Turkish Embassy there will also be some entertaining.

Add to that parties given by the French, the British, the Belgians and most likely others.

Last week the social spotlight beamed on nine Frenchmen, known as "Les Compagnons de la Chanson." Currently singing through dinner and supper at the Shoreham, they have been a hit from coast to coast. At the party given in their honor on Wednesday by Mme. Bonnet at the French Embassy, one of the "compagnons" said not one of the nine could speak English when they landed here last September. Now all sing English as well as French, and they instructed themselves simply by going to the movies.

Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippines has gone to India to attend the Indonesian Conference called by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru for January 20. Nations which have accepted invitations to attend are Saudi-Arabia, Syria, Egypt, Afghanistan, Iraq, Persia, Australia, Ceylon, Burma, the Philippines, and Pakistan.

New Zealand and China are sending observers to the conference. Ethiopia, Yemen, Nepal and Lebanon are expected to attend, and the only countries which have declined are Turkey and Siam.

The Ambassador of Sweden, Erik Boheman, is leaving Tuesday for Sweden to confer with his government. Alexis de Aminoff, Counselor of the Embassy, who has just returned from Sweden, will be Charge d'Affaires in the absence of the Ambassador. Tomorrow evening the Ambassador and Mme. Boheman will give a farewell dinner for the Commercial Counselor and Mme. de Belfrage, who are returning to Stockholm.

Just back from Paris is Jean Daridan, Counselor of the French Embassy. He may leave again soon for another visit abroad. Meanwhile, M. Daridan and Capt. Pierre Lancelot, naval attache of the Embassy, are planning a gala cocktail fete sometime in February.

One of the most popular diplomatic couples in Washington, the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray, gave a cocktail party yesterday at their new house on Hawthorne st.

Prominent Irish-Americans were entertained at a dinner in New York last Thursday by the Irish Minister, Sean Nunan. The party was given at the Waldorf-Astoria in honor of the Irish Minister for Industry and Commerce, Daniel Morrissey.

Alfred Stirling, former Minister of Australia here, now High Commissioner in South Africa, is enjoying the summer capital at Cape Town, having just moved there

Gay Week In Prospect For Congressmen, Wives

By Genevieve Reynolds

Inaugural Week will be a merry while for the Nation's lawmakers and their wives. They'll have ring-side seats when President Truman takes his historic oath of office on January 20. The Representatives and Senators will witness the ceremony from the portico of the Capitol while their families will view the proceedings from choice bench spots facing the Chief Executive's stand. With them will be friends and constituents from back home.

From Capitol Hill the congressional contingent will twirl from luncheon to tea, from cocktail parties to dinners. Then they'll continue on to glamorous balls, studded with rank; big name bands, the great and near great from all sections of the Nation. Betwixt official and private fiestas, they'll sandwich in an evening with old friends at one of the various State Society functions. In short, they'll be a part of all the feverish, exciting activity dotting the social and political calendar for the next 10 days. Foot-sore, weary celebraters can find a quiet nook up at the Congressional Club, Thursday, where open house and television will be the order of the day. And victorious Democrats who would like to peek in at the Woman's National Democratic Club will find headquarters open from 4 to 6 p. m., Friday, January 21, stocked with a menu of friendly chatter and refreshments.

So many out-of-town constituents are clamoring for Inaugural seats and sleeping space that the congressional folk will be lucky if they can find sleeping space in their own homes or apartments. Yes, it's going to be an unforgettable week, chronicled by 100 per cent participation.

If you're a Congressional newcomer, caught in the maze of the Capital's official etiquette, switch your radio dial to Station WMAL today, 1 p. m. Mrs. Carolyn Hagner Shaw will devote her entire program, "Modern Manners," to the lawmakers circles. She'll tell about the new form of visting cards for the Representatives and Senators, how many to leave where and on whom. Also, she'll tell what kind of costume to wear to teas, cocktail parties, balls, luncheons, and in fact, every hour during Inaugural Week, and on through the season. Callie Shaw, who authors and edits "Washington's Social Register," better known as the "Green Book" will issue a special supplement on Hill folk next month.

UTAH'S colorful Representative Reva Beck Bosone already has chalked up a first for the women in the Eighty-first Congress. One week after being sworn into office, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn turned over the gavel to her with instructions to take charge of the House proceedings. Thus she became the first distaff member, if not the only member except Speak-

Miss Vandoren, Mr. Nicholson Engaged to Wed

The engagement of her daughter, Miss Mary Katharine Vandoren, to C. Edward Nicholson, jr., has been announced by Mrs. Lucian Hall Vandoren. Mr. Nicholson is the son of Mrs. C. Edward Nicholson and the late Mr. Nicholson of this city.

The wedding will take place March 12.

A member of an old Washington family, the bride-elect is the daughter of the late Lucian Hall Vandoren, who served with distinction with the United States Marines in the First World War. Miss Vandoren is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Charles Shaw of Washington, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Theodore J. Vandoren of Hyattsville and Washington.

Mr. Nicholson is with the United States Department of Justice and is a member of the District Bar Association. He attended American University and was graduated from Columbus Law School.

Lawmakers Plan Big Week

er Rayburn, to preside over the House this year. That inscribed gavel will go among her souvenirs.

The titian-haired former police court judge declared that she felt at home in the Speaker's job . . . just like being on the bench again. An excellent raconteur, the teetotaling Congresswoman can give a perfect imitation of a drunk. Recalling one inebriate's reaction when hauled before her for the umpteenth time, she realistically swayed and hiccoughed the intoxicated one's quote, "You here again, Judge," for a delighted audience recently.

MOST busy, hard-working folk dream of leisure time to do nothing happily. Oregon's tall Representative Lowell Stockman tried the recipe recently: "I always wanted to sit on the sands in Florida and just look at my feet," he quipped to friends. "After one hour of looking at my 'tootsies' and two days of lolling on the beach, I could stand neither any longer." So the Stockmans hitched up their special-built aluminum trailer and returned to the Nation's Capital and all its feverish work and excitement. Incidentally, the Representative and his affable, good-looking wife, Dorcas, and their children toured the United States in the trailer following the home State campaign.

UNLESS further nominations upset the status quo, versatile Mrs. Ralph Church, wife of the Illinois Representative, will be the next president of the Congressional Club. She's the choice of the organization's nominating committee, but a dark-horse runner could be put up at the last minute when the balloting begins on Wednesday, January 19. A Republican, talented Mrs. Church will have a Democratic first vice president, Mrs. Sheridan Downey, wife of the California Senator. Another Republican, intellectual Mrs. Hal Holmes, wife of the Washington Representative, is slated to become second vice president, and Mrs. Lawrence Smith of "Congressional Club Cook Book fame" will succeed Mrs. Aime Forand of Delaware as treasurer. Heads of the club are alternated between Republicans and Democrats. Mrs. Clifford Davis of Tennessee held down the post during a predominantly GOP membership. And Mrs. Church will be outnumbered by the Democrats.

BITS of This and That . . . Mrs. Robert S. Kerr, wife of the new Oklahoma Senator, now catching her breath in the Sooner State, will arrive in Washington for the Inauguration ceremony and festivities. The Kerrs have taken a spacious house out Kenwood way for their sojourn here . . . Representative Cecil Hardin of Indiana believes in the personal campaign touch, especially for the ladies. When stumping for office she gave women voting reminders such as thimbles and emery boards bearing her name in bright lettering . . . The Carolinas boast of having the youngest and oldest members in the Eighty-first Congress. Twenty-seven-year-old Hugo Sims, baby of the House, hails from Orangeburg, S. C., and 85-year-old Representative Robert Doughton comes from Sparta in the Tar Heel State.

from the winter capital at Pretoria. Washington should take note and arrange a summer somewhere in Maine. The Commissioner's sister, Miss Dorothy Stirling, is in Washington with her mother, Mrs. Stirling, who is in a hospital for a short while.

Claude Correa, Ambassador of Ceylon, left December 13 for England, where his three sons are in school. With Mrs. Correa, he will return to Washington about January 25. The new chancery of Ceylon is at 2523 Massachusetts ave. and the embassy residence at 2503 30th st.

Mrs. E. A. Cleugh, wife of the British Counselor, has as her house guest Mrs. Theresa Saint of London. Eighteenth Century furniture just shipped from London will be exhibited by Mrs. Saint in the Antique Furniture Exhibit at the Statler on the 31st.

The Service Set

By Norma Lanum

The Capital's service set had its final flurry of cocktail parties over the weekend before conceding the next week to Inaugural festivities. Some of the larger parties given were those of the Charles Buchanans, the Raymond McLains and the Albert Wedemeyers.

Oklahomans and military persons, hundreds of them, dominated the guest list for the cocktail party Friday given by Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Raymond S. McLain at the Officers' Club at Fort McNair.

The hostess hails from the "Sooner" State and the general, now chief of the Army's information bureau, was in business for several years in Oklahoma City.

Among those invited to the party were Secretary of Defense and Mrs. James Forrestal, Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Undersecretary of the Army William H. Draper, Assistant Secretaries of the Navy, John Nicholas Brown and Mark E. Andrews, and their wives, and Assistant Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray.

Also, there were Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Gen. and Mrs. Clifton B. Cates, Admiral and Mrs. Louise E. Denfeld, Gen. and Mrs. Jacob Devers, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. I. And last evening Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Albert C. Wedemeyer had a cocktail party at their Fort Myer quarters. Among the guests were Mrs. Wedemeyer's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Robertson of Richmond, Va., who are here for the weekend. Mr. Robertson is the former United States Minister to China.

Capt. Tom Hamilton, the Navy's retiring director of athletics, and Mrs. Hamilton were the honor guests at Capt. and Mrs. Charles A. Buchanan's cocktail party Friday at the Army-Navy Club. Captain Hamilton is on terminal leave following his resignation on January 1. And on the first of next month the football wizard will take over as athletic director of the University of Pittsburgh.

The Army's National Guard Bureau gave a cocktail, supper and dancing party Friday at the Fort McNair Officers' Club to honor Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Elwood R. Quesada and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles W. Ryder. General Quesada, a long-time Washingtonian and former McKinley Tech stellar quarterback, is special assistant in charge of reserve forces to the Army Air Force Chief of Staff. And General Ryder is special assistant to the Army Chief of Staff for civilian components. Official hosts for the affair were Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, and Mrs. Cramer.

FIRST AGAIN
in want ad gains . . .
The Washington Post
Results are the reason!

The 1948 figures are in—and The Post scores another first. Comparing total want ads placed in all four Washington newspapers last year with the 1947 totals, The Post showed the greatest percentage gain. Here are the changes as shown by an accurate check:

Changes in want ad totals
Number of individual want ads
1948 vs. 1947

Post	gained	11.6%
Paper B	gained	9.8%
Paper C	gained	4.7%
Paper D	lost	1.1%

Why are more and more Washingtonians turning to The Post for classified advertising? Results! One advertiser after another reports that a notice in The Post is more effective for finding an apartment, renting a room, selling surplus furniture . . . for more than a hundred separate purposes.

And besides better results, advertisers say they appreciate the convenience and service that go hand-in-hand with a Post classified insertion. You can call your ad in from your own telephone and charge it, and one of The Post's courteous, efficient ad writers will help you word your notice. Call NAtional 4200.

About Cleaning A Stuffed Owl

How can I clean, at home or otherwise, a mounted Great Northern horned owl—"the totem of our family." If impossible to clean at home, who in the District does this work? It is covered with the dust of years.
S. M. S.

You probably can improve the appearance of the owl by sprinkling corn meal or dry cleaning powder into the feathers, letting it stand for 30 minutes or so, then brushing out. Be sure to brush with the feathers. Repeat if all the soil is not removed the first time. Firms listed under "Taxidermists" in the yellow pages of the telephone book clean mounted birds if, after seeing them, they feel they will withstand the cleaning process.

To L. L. and W. B. R., who have both requested a recipe for Nesselrode pie:

NESSELRODE PIE

3 eggs, separated
1½ cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
2/3 teaspoons plain gelatin
1 tablespoon cold water
2 tablespoons rum flavoring
¼ cup maraschino cherries, chopped
2 tablespoons sweet chocolate, shaved
1 plain pastry shell

Combine slightly beaten egg yolks, milk, salt and 1/3 cup sugar in top of double boiler. Cook over hot, not boiling, water until mixture thickens, stirring constantly; remove from hot water. Soften gelatin in cold water, add to hot mixture, stir until dissolved. Chill until mixture begins to thicken. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry; gradually beat in remaining sugar. Fold into gelatin mixture with rum flavoring and cherries. Pile into baked pastry shell, sprinkle with chocolate, chill until firm. Yield: 1 crust, 9-inch pie.

I would like to repaint an asphalt tile floor. What kind of paint can be used that is heat-resistant, since radiant heat is used under the tile flooring?
G. G.

Almost any good quality paint can be used on a floor which has radiant heat under it because the floors do not get hot enough to affect the paint. However, paint or varnish should never be applied to asphalt tile. The paint reacts chemically with the tile and softens it, making the surface unsatisfactory. To restore the floor, you should remove all previously applied paint. The quickest and easiest way to do this is to go over it with a power, rotary-disk machine which uses steel wool. This can be rented from a floor machine firm. When the surface is clean, apply a nonrubbing, water-soluble wax to the floor. Paste and liquid waxes contain volatile oils which are harmful to the asphalt.

I have a large bottle of French perfume which I should like to have put in ounce bottles to give as gifts. I hesitate putting it in small bottles unsealed and am wondering if there is any place in Washington where I can either buy the bottles and have them sealed at the same time or where I can take the perfume already in the bottles to have them sealed.
L. K.

You can seal the bottles yourself by coating the top with nail polish or paraffin. If you use paraffin, let it cool somewhat after it has been melted so that it is not hot enough to crack the bottle.

I have a 5½-year-old son who is interested in the children's radio program. Could you tell me how to go about finding at what time and on what stations these programs are broadcast?
Mrs. S.

If you will call the publicity departments of the stations to which you listen, they will be glad to tell you when programs are on the air which will be of particular interest to children your son's age.

Also, there is a monthly publication which is available by subscription which lists, among other things, children's programs broadcast from all of the Washington stations. The same publication also lists nonradio recreational activities for children to be found in the District. For further information in regard to the publication call either FRanklin 3515 or VIctor 0644.

I have recently had the stairwell, which comes up into my living room, papered in marblized paper. I would like to make the paper shine and also protect it from wear and soil. I recently heard about a liquid wax which may be applied, but don't know the name or where to obtain it. Could you tell me or recommend something?
W. A. M.

I know of no product which will make the paper shine, but there is a wallpaper laquer which will make the paper waterproof and thus protect it from soil. It is a liquid which is applied with a brush and can be purchased at paint stores. When this product dries, the appearance of the paper is not changed in any way. Because of this, the product can be applied only to the areas which are most touched or exposed, such as around light switches, above and below hand rails on the stairs, etc. You can apply several coats of the liquid to these spots and build up a heavy coating which will resist repeated washings.

As I am going to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras festivities, I would appreciate some help on the type of clothes needed. I want to purchase a dress suitable for wear at a hotel dinner and a tour of the night clubs. What type would be best, both as to material and color? Are summer clothes worn?
G. E. A.

The type dress you would wear here in the fall for hotel and night club dining would be suitable in New Orleans in February. If you plan a visit to the more formal night spots, one of the ballerina-length dresses with low-cut neckline and a matching jacket would be fine. With this, you would wear a small cocktail hat. The color you choose will be any color which is becoming to you. The material could be flat crepe, taffeta, satin or brocaded satin.

Will you give me some information concerning material for rush bottom chairs, or split fibre of any material that can be used. Also, where the material can be purchased.
L. A. S.

An upholstery supply company on E st. sells imitation rush which can be used satisfactorily for chair seats. They can be reached by calling District 7447.

Can I use furniture wax on light red leather-topped tables?
D. Y.

Yes, a colorless or cream wax can be used. Special waxes for this purpose are also sold in shops specializing in leather work.

To S. S. Sorry, but we do not answer beauty or cosmetic questions.

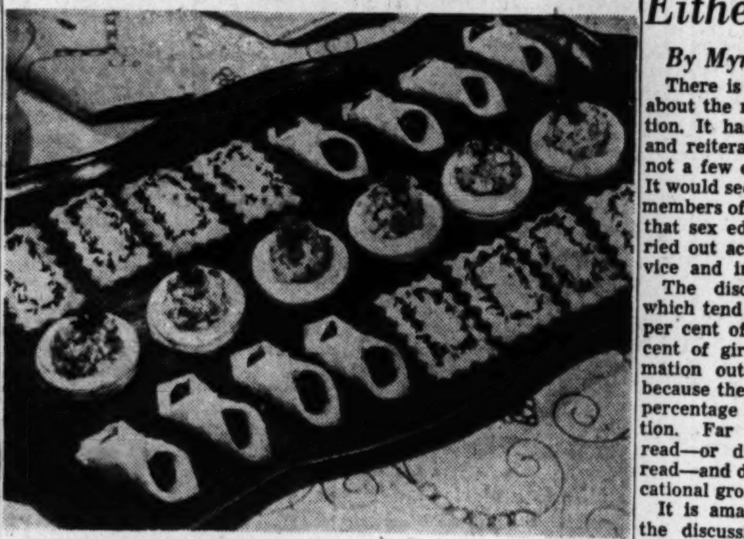
Pretty Party Pastries



DELICIOUS TIDBITS for a party are canapes made with mayonnaise pastry. Here's the simple recipe:

Mayonnaise Pastry

2/3 cup mayonnaise
2 cups flour
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon mustard-with-horseradish
¼ teaspoon salt

USE REAL MAYONNAISE and blend it and the mustard with the flour and salt. Add water and mix well. Roll out on lightly floured board to ⅛-inch thickness. Cut desired number of round cookie shapes and an equal number of doughnut shapes. Brush cookie shapes with water and top with doughnut shapes. Place on cookie sheets and bake in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) for 8 to 10 minutes. Cool and fill centers with deviled ham salad. Top each with sprig of parsley.

Remaining dough may be cut in diamond shapes and rolled around cocktail sausages. Fasten with toothpick if necessary and bake as directed above. Or the dough may be cut in assorted shapes and sprinkled with caraway or poppy seeds before baking.

Expert Lists Feeding Faults Most Harmful to Child's Health

By Ida Jean Kain

I wish all parents of children whose teeth are not up to par could have the privilege of talking with Mrs. Tomi Hibbett, the dietitian in charge of the Nutrition Clinic of the famous Forsyth Dental Infirmary in Boston.

Since this is not possible, I tried to get the story for you. I asked the dietitian to tell us the most common dietary faults, in 1-2-3 order.

The most common is the poor lunch. Breakfast is routine and supper is cooked to please Dad. But lunch often degenerates to soup and crackers.

Second is a lack of Vitamin C in the daily diet. Mothers do not seem to realize that our only outstanding source of this vitamin are oranges or grapefruit. They substitute other fruits and the diet lacks Vitamin C, the vitamin which cannot be stored and without which good teeth cannot be made.

The citrus fruit or juice may be fresh or canned. Keep the unused part of the canned juice in a jar that is small enough not to leave air space at the top. Oxidation destroys Vitamin C. Orange juice and grapefruit juice contains four times as much Vitamin C as pineapple juice, and two times as much as tomato juice. All fruits are good in the menus, but one rich source of Vitamin C should be used daily.

All growing children need cod liver oil, or capsule cod liver oil. Parents so often drop the sunshine vitamin when the child grows out of babyhood—to the child's detriment.

Most children do not eat enough green leafy vegetables. Mention green leafy to a mother and she thinks of lettuce, which is not a green at all! A dark green leafy vegetable is needed, but the serving need not be large. Two level tablespoonsful of dandelion greens are ample for the day's need. Four tablespoonsful of spinach more than meet half the requirement for Vitamin A. Just two large leaves of escarole meet the needs.

The dietitian finds that most children do drink milk, some almost to the preclusion of other necessary foods. The minimum amount is three glasses, up to 7 and 8 years; in adolescence a quart is essential. Canned milk and dried milk are less expensive . . . and equally nutritious.

On the candy score—the chief objection is that it can spoil the appetite for wholesome food, and thus deprive the candy eater of more vital nutrition.

Whole grains are important, even though we have enriched flour. For economy and nutrition, oatmeal can't be beat. Emphasize the whole grain . . . whole wheat, whole rye, whole oats. The whole-grain products are dark in color, and high in flavor.

The basic philosophy at Forsyth Dental Infirmary is that whatever can be done to build up the health of the individual will also build up the teeth—that's a good philosophy for all of us.

Sex Education Levels In U. S. Either Very High Or Very Low

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There is nothing new to be said about the necessity for sex education. It has been said, confirmed and reiterated hundreds of times, not a few of them in this column. It would seem, if one talked only to members of study groups at P-TA's, that sex education was being carried out according to the best advice and information available.

The discrepancy in statistics, which tend to prove that about 90 per cent of boys and over 80 per cent of girls get their sex information outside the home, arises because these groups are a limited percentage of the general population. Far more parents do not read—or discount what they do read—and do not attend these educational groups.

It is amazing, though, with all the discussion which emphasizes the vital necessity for such education, that there are still so many parents willing to leave it to chance.

They ought to know that children cannot grow up without acquiring some answers to: Where do we come from? Parents are eager enough to answer almost every other question the child asks, yet in the field of sex, in which personal experience itself would give them some basis for education, they pretend to be ignorant. Or they say, "he's too young, he wouldn't understand," "Or, why fill their heads with ideas?" or, "He doesn't ask me anything." By such excuses they attempt to evade their responsibility.

Meanwhile, the child seeks and gets his answers from sources which distort and besmirk the truth and leave him with sordid ideas and a shamed attitude which persist through life.

Children are not "ruined" by knowledge. But they are made uneasy, given wrong attitudes and lose confidence in the intelligence of their parents when they refuse to answer simple questions other children seem able to answer.

Helpful Cooking Hints for Homemaker

If you want to hold a cream sauce before using be sure to cover the saucepan that contains it. This will help to keep a skin from forming on the top.

In making a Spanish sauce for omelet add a pinch or two of sugar to the onions, green pepper and tomatoes to point up the flavor.

Cooked rice makes a delicious stuffing for roast chicken when it is mixed with plump raisins, poultry seasoning, and a little finely chopped onion and celery.

Annapolis Activities

Legislature, Academy, March of Dimes Bar Lull

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15.—With the Maryland General Assembly in session here, with plans under way for the annual March of Dimes parties and dances, and with the midwinter sports program at the United States Naval Academy now in full swing, Annapolis stands a good chance of escaping the seasonal doldrums of less fortunate communities. So far, this month has been as lively as the holiday season, with interesting public events and benefit entertainments vying with weddings, private receptions and dances to provide a full social calendar.

The second annual Variety Talent Show to be presented here by the March of Dimes campaign is scheduled January 17, at 8 o'clock, on the stage of the Annapolis High School Auditorium. Selden R. Lacey, chairman of the March of Dimes campaign, is the producer. All proceeds go to the fund to be used to fight infantile paralysis.

The National Male Quartet, which came to Dahlgren Hall at 8:30 Saturday night, January 8, as the second attraction of the Naval Academy concert series, drew a large and enthusiastic audience. The quartet included Giulio Gari, tenor; Attilio Baggiore, tenor; Vernon Sanders, baritone, and Bruce MacKay, bass. All four singers have established reputations in the concert halls of the country, and Saturday's performance delighted music lovers of Annapolis and the Naval Academy.

Mrs. Hamilton, wife of Capt. Thomas J. Hamilton, and Midshipman F. G. Bower, USN, received at the hop held Saturday night, January 8, in Memorial Hall, Naval Academy, for midshipmen of the first class and their guests.

A bride of this week-end is Miss Barbara Jeanne Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sidney Moore of Winchester, near Annapolis, whose marriage to Ensign William Henderson Barton, jr., was solemnized at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon (January 15) in the Main Chapel of the Naval Academy.

Miss Moore had as her maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth McNair. Miss Jane Pancoast of Annapolis, and Mrs. Sherman L. Whipple, 3rd, of Plymouth, Mass., sister of Ensign Barton, were the bridesmaids. The 6-year-old cousin of the bride, Patricia Finan, was flower girl.

The bride attended the University of Maryland and is a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. Ensign Barton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Barton of Nashville, Tenn., is a graduate of the Naval Academy with the class of 1948-B.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Paul of Baltimore and Annapolis, announce the marriage of their daughter, Evelyn Mae, to Nevin Leese, on November 20, at St. Mark's Reformed Church in Baltimore. The bride attended Germantown School and the Annapolis High School and was graduated from Eastern High School in Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chambers of Weems Creek, have announced the marriage of Mrs. Chambers' daughter, Miss Jeanne Stubbs, to Leslie David Poff, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Poff of Arnold.

The candlelight ceremony took place at 8 o'clock on Friday with the Rev. Charles Read officiating in the Asbury Methodist Church at Arnold. Miss Shirley Allston and Leonard Bender were the couple's only attendants.

Miss Doris Delores Durm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Durm of St. Margaret's, has selected May 7 as the date of her marriage to Thomas Hopper Cosden, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Cosden of Severna Park. The wedding will take place at 2 p. m.

Commander P. C. Staley, USN, Mrs. Staley and their small son arrived January 7 for a visit with Mrs. Staley's grandmother, Mrs. Philip R. Alger, of 34 Southgate ave. Mrs. Acheson Is an Artful Homemaker vitsky will settle down to finish his memoirs. He's already well started but estimates it will take a full two years to write up his exciting life. Some of his best anecdotes center around the three grand tours with his own orchestra in a private steamer traveling down the full length of the Volga. Like many "new" Americans he's a complete patriot. He had been in this country for 12 years before taking out his first citizen papers. When he filled them out, the Government official asked why he hadn't taken this step before. "I was waiting," said the maestro, "to see if I would make a good citizen!"

There's been a mild flurry of royalty in town, young King Peter of Yugoslavia, popping in for a few days without his Queen, accompanied solely by his aide, Brana Popovitch. The King, who's been staying in a New York hotel for several months, will return to Paris, then England in mid-February. King Peter is planning, though it is still in formative stage, an appeal for the 60,000 Serbs who are in German and Austrian D. P. camps. With funds raised a home will be bought, possibly in Spain or Portugal, where the most hopelessly ill can be brought, allowed to work at their crafts, and given the best medical attention.

Mr., Mrs. Hartshorn On Wedding Trip

Now on a month's wedding trip to Miami, Fla., and Havana, Cuba, are Mr. and Mrs. Merrill F. Hartshorn. On their return they will make their home in Washington. Their wedding took place January 1 in National Memorial Baptist Church, the Rev. E. B. Willingham officiating.

Mrs. Hartshorn is the former Miss Sibyl McCarley, daughter of Mrs. Sudie McCarley of Booneville, Miss. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Hartshorn of Assonet and Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Teething Time

When baby is teething and his stomach refuses to retain even milk, beat up the white of an egg until stiff, add a few drops of orange juice and a tiny bit of sugar to make it palatable and feed it to him with a spoon. It is very strengthening and forms a coating on the stomach which will help to keep the stronger foods down.

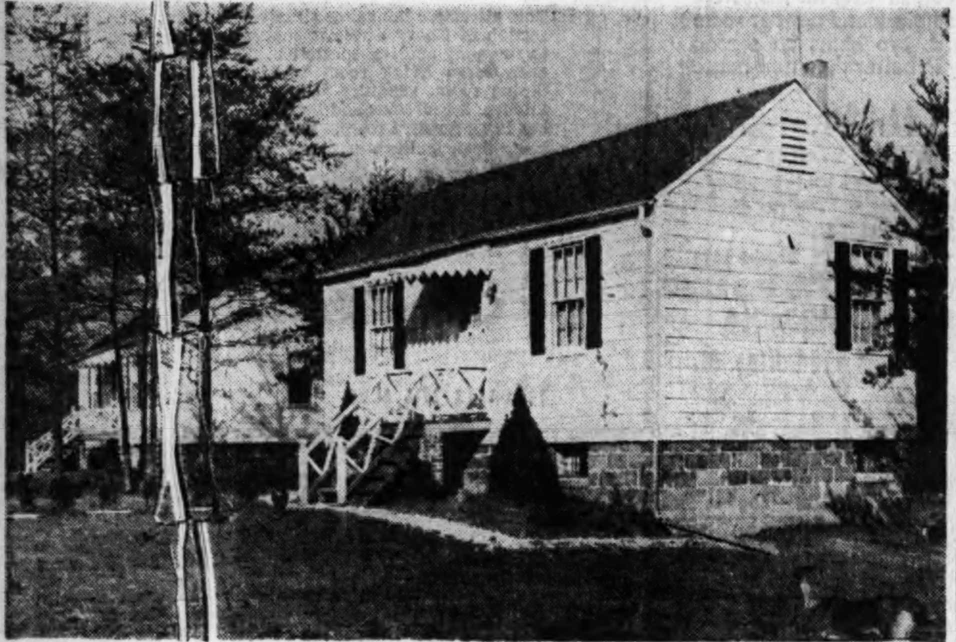
WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, JANUARY 16, 1949

$5975 Homes Erected in Maryland With 'Old-Fashioned' Financing



Ten homes have been erected at Riverdale Gardens. These two-bedroom houses sold for $7,450.

By Conrad P. Harness

ELMER ROBINSON, a Maryland home-builder, is mighty peeved at what some builders are offering the public as "low-cost housing." $10,000 homes, concrete houses, "experimental" homes and other housing ventures which have made a big splash in recent newspapers,—they're not for Mr. Robinson. And he doesn't think the public goes for them either.

He has, however, what he terms the "best low-cost home in town." Actually, it isn't in town. He has built 10 small homes on a far suburban tract called Riverdale Gardens, just off Edmonston rd., about 3½ miles from the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, Md.

The new homes there are small, with a minimum of frills and will cause no ripple in Architectural Forum circles. But the price tags, $5975 to $7750, are newsworthy considering that Robinson and his partner, Robert L. Werth, built the homes with no financial aid from the Veterans Administration or Federal Housing Administration. It's a rare case these postwar days when a builder doesn't use the financial crutches extended by one or both of these Government agencies.

Robinson and Werth built two experimental home styles at Riverdale Gardens to find out what could be provided in a home at prices a husband making $50 to $60 weekly could afford—and, more important, would want.

Large Lots Provided

A ONE-BEDROOM home, with living room, kitchen and bath—no basement—was built and sold for $5975. The price included, said Robinson, a quarter acre of ground, seeded front lawn, using best construction methods and materials.

This is the lowest price this reporter has heard of for new homes built and sold in an established subdivision during 1948. A two-bedroom, living room, kitchen, bath and full basement, sold for $7450, Robinson added.

With 19 homes completed, Robinson said he was through with experimenting with floor plans. The 30 homes he plans to build this year will be of two types: A one-bedroom, living room with fireplace, kitchen, tiled bath, utility room and front and side porches to sell for $6850. The floor plan has 578 square feet.

The Washington Post

This one bedroom "expansible" house sold for $5,975

A two-bedroom, living room, kitchen, tiled bath, with front and back porches and 676 square feet of floor area, will sell for $7750. Both homes are without basements, with equipped kitchens, central floor furnace, clapboard siding exterior, ceiling insulation, and call for $850 down payments, the rest to be financed at $55 to $60 per month. Both floor plans can be expanded with minimum construction.

The financing of such homes presents an interesting problem. The vast majority of homes sold in this area are financed by investors who receive a guarantee from FHA that it will stand back of a certain percentage of the loan.

For this "privilege," FHA requires that builders maintain certain standards of minimum construction. One requirement in nearly all cases is that the subdivision have paved streets, curbs and gutters. Such "development" costs are often staggering, and only large-scale builders can afford them.

So, Robinson, who is also an official of Woodridge Realty Co., 2381 Rhode Island ave. ne., has completely ignored the FHA means of financing and has found individual investors who will put up mortgage money at 6 per cent interest.

Thus, while conforming to efficient construction methods and materials, he does not have to be governed by other FHA development requirements which would add further cost to his homes.

The 6 per cent interest rate, however, is 1 per cent higher than a buyer would pay under Government backed financing.

Robinson said his price of $6850 for his expansible one-bedroom home could be cut down to $6500 providing the Veterans' Administration okayed the price for veterans. He will ask for a VA appraisal when his new homes are completed.

The difference in the $6500 and $6850 price tags results when a

Up to 20% Saving

U. S. Explains Cost Cutting To Builders

By Charles Molony

THE Commerce Department says small-scale house builders can save up to 20 per cent on construction costs and it is ready to tell them how.

[Large-scale residential builders in metropolitan areas such as New York have adapted such construction short cuts in their methods for some time; but some officials believe the methods are not sufficiently known in other portions of the industry and have not been adapted to small scale builders.]

The main ideas involve no magic or startling new developments. They boil down to assembling the house the easy, efficient way instead of the hard way. For example:

1. Use lumber precut at the lumber yard to the sizes needed and specified in the plans, so the carpenters won't lose time measuring, sawing, cutting and fitting on the job.

2. Put the wall together (that is, the wooden pieces that make up the wall) flat on the floor, then tip it into position. It's easier and more efficient to work on the floor than from scaffolds or ladders.

3. Put up the outer walls and roof first, leaving interior or partition walls until after the floors, ceilings, etc., are completed. It's easier and more economical to do this "other" work and utilities installation before the space is chopped up.

Can Cut 20% Off Costs

THESE are just samples of suggestions by which the department says a small-scale builder in an average town—the fellow who builds 4 to 10 houses a year—can cut as much as $200 per $1000 off his construction costs.

These an other ideas are set out in detail in a 130-page "Research Report on Construction Methods," together with drawings and tables.

(For sale at $2.50 a copy by the Office of Technical Services, Department of Commerce, Washington, 25, D. C. Please do not write this newspaper or The Associated Press.)

The report gives the result of a study of labor saving construction techniques by the Small Homes Council, University of Illinois, with financial aid from the Commerce Department's Office of Technical Services.

It doesn't deal with prefabricated housing, but a department official says the study methods will help the small builder meet prefab housing competition.

Three pairs of houses (one frame and one brick house in each pair) were built for the study's purpose by a "small contractor specializing in residential construction" who bid in the work on a cost-plus-fixed fee basis.

The houses were identical in size and plan. The only thing that was varied was the construction method. The contractor used union labor and followed the area (Urbana, Ill.) practice of subcontracting many of his trades, plumbing etc.

Any One Can Do It

THE CONTRACTOR used his customary construction practices on the first pair of house. After they were well under way, he started the second pair—this time using methods specified by the Small Homes Council.

When the first two pairs were started, the third pair was begun, this time using improved techniques worked out on the previous houses. To compare efficiency of construction, time studies were made of workmen's operations.

Throughout, the study was limited to assembly methods and to the flow of material from supply yards to the job site.

"It was not a comparison, rating or testing of materials," the study says.

"The methods recommended can be used by any contractor who is willing to learn new techniques in order to achieve savings."

Recommendations also call for use of roof trusses and preassembled gable ends and of "engineered plans, made to take advantage of every saving from modular or coordinated dimensional control of materials." That is, plan to use full sheets of plywood, make concrete block foundations "come out even," etc., without having to cut odd sizes.

"Complete, accurate and carefully engineered working drawings" are described as "the first step, and one of the most important ones, in reducing building costs."

As to preassembly of parts off the site, the report recommends that "windows should be set up, glazed, hung and delivered to the job—ready for installation in the wall" and "kitchen cabinets should be assembled and hardware applied" before delivery.

Realty Group 'Cool' Toward Co-op Program

The National Association of Real Estate Boards, in an about-face stand, will not ask for congressional legislation to provide financing for a great cooperative housing program, it was indicated yesterday.

Instead, the realty group will intensify its fight against rent control and public housing legislation. Influential members of the association's board of directors threw out the cooperative plan as "socialistic," it was reported.

The association will attempt to defeat any public housing legislation by calling upon its members to canvass all voters in each realtor's neighborhood, and pointing out the alleged evils of Federal subsidization of housing. Voters would be asked to write their Congressman and tell him to vote against any public housing measure.

Only three weeks ago the association put out a press release in which Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president, said the cooperative plan being prepared by the association "may be the only road to home ownership for millions of our families."

The plan was killed at a meeting of national directors last week at the Statler. It has been reported that the association has voted a budget of $125,000 for lobbying expenses in efforts to defeat any legislative measure it considers inimical to property ownership.

The budget last year for such purposes was around $80,000. The association will establish a speakers bureau to "sell" the association's program for private enterprise and abolition of rent control and public housing to labor organizations, women's clubs and various civic and fraternal groups.

Building Awards Total $132,583,000

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Civil engineering construction awards during six days totaled $132,583,000, Engineering News-Record reported today.

The engineering construction weekly said this figure was 59 per cent above the total for the corresponding five-day week of last year and 6 per cent above the volume for the preceding four-day week.

The total of awards for the six-day week ended Thursday, said the weekly, was made up of $59,243,000 in private construction or 84 per cent above a year ago, and $73,340,000 in public construction, 44 per cent ahead of a year ago.

Prevention Hint

What To Do When Water Pipes Freeze

It's easier to prevent pipes from freezing or bursting than to have them repaired after the damage has been done, the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau points out.

First step in the antifreeze operation is to shut off the valve of any outside water faucet—the connection for the garden hose, for example. The faucet itself should be turned on before the valve is actually shut off. This drains the length of pipe between the valve and the faucet, which would otherwise be an ideal spot for a freeze-up.

Similarly, the outlet in the garage should be drained and shut off, unless the garage is heated and the piping to it is well insulated with from 2½ and 3 inches of good pipe covering.

Freezing is most likely to occur in pipes which run along an outside wall. This hazard should be corrected by relocation of the pipes, if possible. If this is impractical, thorough insulation with from 2½ to 3 inches of good pipe covering is the only safeguard.

Should any of the piping freeze, the work of thawing it should not be entrusted to a handyman. It should be done under the supervision of an experienced master plumber. Blow torches or other methods involving open flames are extremely dangerous. They not only involve fire hazards but also permit the generation of high pressures which may cause explosions.

6-Store Shopping Center Planned for Suitland

Preliminary plans have been completed for the proposed erection of a six-store shopping center at Silver Hill and Mayhew rds., near Suitland, Md. The center will also include a bowling alley. Buildings will be one-story high, with a basement. Construction is to be of concrete, reinforced steel and brick. The center will measure approximately 95 by 80 feet. Paul H. Kea is the architect.

nonveteran buyer with small cash down payment purchases the home. With an insufficient down payment, the buyer must obtain a second mortgage on the home to provide money to make up the difference between the cash down payment added to the first mortgage, and the asking price.

Under the VA loan guarantee system, the full amount of the loan (up to certain limitations) is backed by the VA. Thus, no second mortgage is needed or allowed.

Big Projects, High Costs

THE two floor plans for the new Riverdale Gardens homes were designed to permit easy expansion. In the one-bedroom home, for example, a hall in front of the bath leading up to the bedroom furnishes easly access to a second bedroom if built adjacent to the bath at the rear of the house. Thus, the bath would separate the two bedrooms, with a hall connecting the latter.

Both Robinson and Werth are members of the growing school of thought which maintains that large-scale building projects, where homes are mass produced off a production line, offer no cost incentives. A large overhead adds to the final price tag, instead of reducing it, Robinson declared.

It is the small builder who plans 10 to 30 homes per year, using labor-saving tools and efficient construction methods, who stands to build the lowest priced housing, says Robinson.

An adult who swallowed a dime, a child whose face was burned when he fell on a waffle iron, and a man who swalowed a bone with his steak were among 130 persons treated at hospitals last week for home accident injuries.

Two persons died as the result of home accidents, one from burns the other from a fall, the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported.

One child ate rat poison, the report said, while others swallowed lye, liquid soap, ammonia and DDT.

Adult injuries included first and second-degree burns suffered by a 69-year-old woman and a 24-year-old man when gas stoves they were lighting exploded.

The injury summary listed 45 cases of falls, 16 burns, 7 poisons, 12 foreign objects in ears, eye, throat and stomach; 27 cuts, 3 contusions and 20 unclassified mishaps.

Ants, bees, wasps, saw flies, gallwasps and ichneumon flies are all members of the same insect family: hymenoptera.

South Cashing in on Fast Tree Growth, Plant Expansion

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 15 (AP).—The South is cashing in on its No. 1 crop — trees — with an industrial growth that is fast pushing it to the front of the Nation's paper and pulp industry.

While New Englanders have been complaining about losing some of their textile industry to Southern States, the expansion of the paper industry southward has come about relatively unnoticed.

At Georgetown, S. C., there is a huge plant capable of turning out more than 1430 tons of paper board daily.

Progress Since 1921

That's equal to almost the entire paper and pulp output of 12 Southern States back in 1921.

Within the past quarter of a century, the pine timber belt from Maryland to Texas has become the Nation's fastest growing pulp and paper section.

Smoke is pouring from almost 100 mills, turning out 20,000 tons of paper a day, almost 11 times the 1921 rate.

While many of the older Northern mills are adapted for book paper, tissues and specialties, the Southern plants are geared for volume. Their newer-type mills, utilizing latest refinements in papermaking machinery and processes, get more production at lower operating costs.

Quick Growth in South

Quick growth of trees is the major factor in the southward expansion of the industry. In the warm Southern climate, loblolly and slash pines mature to pulpwood size in 20 to 40 years, twice as fast as in the North.

The Soutehrn development has been prompted by a spurt in demand for wrapping and bag papers and paper shipping containers, and by developments in the kraft process to increase volume.

The South's 100 plants are located in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Fourteen manufacturers are now producing various types of baseboard heating units, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

Baseboard heating has caught on and the popularity of this inconspicuous method of heating with hot water is the most significant development in the heating industry, the bureau points out.

Baseboard heating is flexible and is adapted to any type of structure, residential and comm..., and can be used with automatic or manual firing and with a boiler fueled with coal, oil or gas.

There are two general types of baseboard heating units. One delivers most of its heat by radiation; the other is predominately a convection type of heat distributor.

Radiant baseboards or radiant baseboard panels are made of cast iron or steel. They are hollow units approximately as high as a conventional wooden baseboard and as thick. Hot water is circulated through these units. Radiant baseboards or radiant panels are made in sections which can be assembled on the job to fit any space.

The units may be installed on the exposed walls of rooms only, or may be recessed in the wall, if desired. When painted to match walls or trim, baseboard heating units are practically invisible.

Heat distributed at ankle height provides a high degree of comfort. Units permit the utmost freedom in the arrangement of furniture and drapes.

A new simplified automatic washer for use in homes, apartments and self-service laundries has been announced by the General Electric Co.

Once the washer is started, it will, without further attention from the homemaker, automatically wash, rinse and damp-dry up to 8 pounds of assorted dry clothes, clean itself out and shut off.

The new washer is a rectangular, top-opening, portable machine which does not have to be bolted down. All water connections—the hot and cold water inlets and the drain—are made with rubber hose.

Fifty-fifty Ticks the Clock

Harrisburg, Ill. (AP).—Time was out of joint on one of the old town clock's four faces. All agreed it should be fixed, but who would pay the bill? Home Heating Systems Need Winter Check

Heating equipment working full time to combat winter's icy blasts can be a serious fire hazard if it isn't in good condition at all times, according to fire safety officials. Dirty or defective equipment, they say, causes many home fires by giving off sparks or excessive heat to flammable surfaces.

Special attention is advised for heating units, chimneys and flues. To be safe, as well as economical, heating units must be cleaned and repaired at regular intervals. Flammable ceilings, floors and walls near heating units may be fireproofed by covering them with concrete, sheet metal or asbestos cement board.

Another good way to prevent home fires and unnecessary loss of heat is to keep chimneys and flues soot-free and in good repair. Chimneys may be checked for cracks by building a smudge fire in the heating unit and closing the flue at intervals. While ascending, smoke will seep through chimney walls wherever there are cracks.

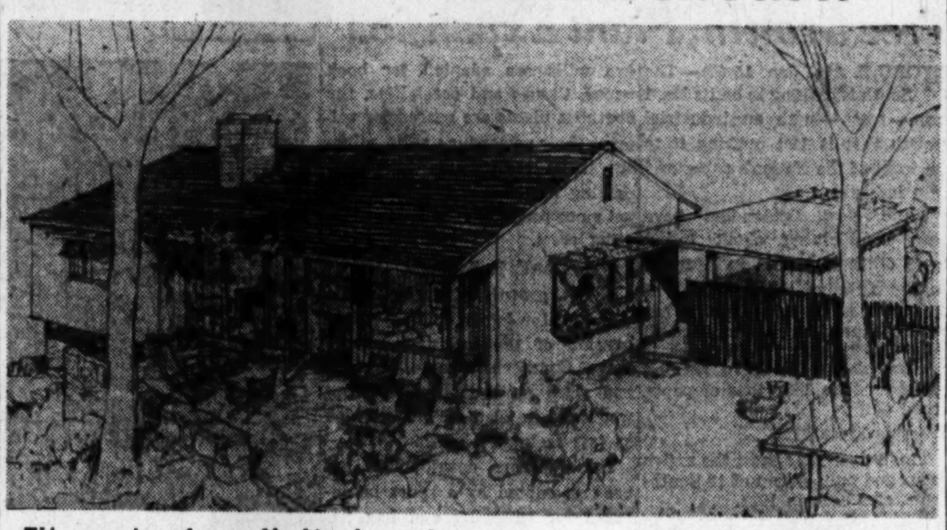
Work Starts at Bannockburn



Burket, Neufeld and DeMars. Architects

This rear view of a rambler-bungalow to be erected at Bannockburn shows the open style of architecture employed by Architects Burket, Neufeld and DeMars. This basementless home will cost a co-op member $17,000. With basement the price is $18,500. It is one of seven home styles to be erected

WORK HAS started on the first 24 residences in the proposed 300-home Banockburn cooperative housing development on the site of the Bannockburn Golf and Country Club, near Glen Echo, Md. Ground-breaking ceremonies yesterday at Wilson Lane and MacArthur blvd. attracted a large crowd of prospective home owners, Congressmen and housing officials.

Homes to be erected range from two-bedroom ramblers to large four-bedroom homes, with prices from $13,500 to $25,000. The Bannockburn Cooperators, Inc., a group of 200 members consisting mostly of professional workers in the Government, purchased the property in 1946 at public auction. It has surmounted unusual difficulties occasioned principally by rising construction costs.

Progress of the co-op in planning the large project, the first of its kind in the Washington area, has been followed closely by cooperatives and housing experts throughout the country who look on it as a new venture in community planning which may set a future housing pattern for families in the middle income group.

Architects Burket, Neufeld and DeMars are designing the project and will supervise construction. David Solomon, Inc., has been awarded the building contract. Construction money and permanent loans, to be FHA insured, has been supplied by the Mutual Life Insurance of New York.

The clubhouse of Bannockburn Golf and Country Club will be retained for co-op offices, a nursery school and other community activities. Generous areas have been set apart for park space and recreation areas, with tennis courts and a swimming pool.

Potomac Rose Society To Meet on Thursday

The Potomac Rose Society will meet Thursday at 8 p. m. in the National Museum auditorium, 10th and Constitution ave. nw., to see a color film on the methods of cultivating roses. The public is invited.

250 Fertilizer Men To Convene at Statler

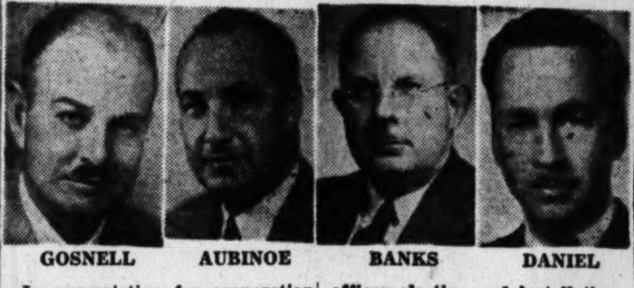
More than 250 commercial manufacturers of agriculture limestone will meet at the Statler Hotel Tuesday to begin the fourth annual conference of the National Agriculture Limestone Association.

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin and Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan will address the group on the first day of their conference. The members will hear technical reports from several of their number and will elect new officers for 1949.

Real Estate Briefs From Here and There

THE scroll manufacturing business received a shot in the arm Friday night as the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington dispensed scrolls right and left to enterprising members who had served the association faithfully during the past year.

Recipients included retiring President Clarence (Goodie) Gosnell, who also was presented a gavel and luggage; J. Milton Talbert, for good work in running the 1948 Home Show Exposition at the National Guard Armory; J. Garrett Beitzell, for his activities as chairman of the membership committee. Vernon Briggs received a scroll, plus a Remington shotgun, for securing 18 new members. Membership scrolls were awarded also to Dick Mansfield, Clyde Verkerke, J. Wesley Buchanan and Alvin Brown.



GOSNELL AUBINOE BANKS DANIEL

In appreciation for cooperation in establishing a building trades apprentice school at Ayrlawn Farms, Bethesda, Md, the association presented scrolls to William C. Fedderman, director of adult education for Montgomery County, Md, and to E M Douglass, assistant superintendent of schools in Montgomery County.

Everett Searl, Henry Connor, Don Gingery, Roland Simons, T. Girard Lee, J. Ingram Medley, Robert Furman, Vernon Briggs and Wesley I. Sauter, all received scrolls for outstanding work in setting up the apprentice school.

Saturday's Washington Post told the results of Friday night's officer election and installation. William S. Banks replaced Clarence W. Gosnell as president. Clarke Daniel was chosen first vice president and Alvin L. Aubinoe was named second vice president.

All three of the newly elected officers are prominent local builders. Banks, president of Banks & Lee, Inc., has constructed several garden type apartments in this area since the war and also is the developer of Huntington, a large low-cost housing project in south Alexandria.

Daniel is vice president of Standard Properties, Inc., developers of Eastpines and Fairfield. Alvin L. Aubinoe built the recently opened Hotel Congressional on Capitol Hill and is erecting the Dupont Plaza Hotel, nearing completion at Dupont Circle.

Elected to the board of directors for two-year terms were J. Wesley Buchanan, Morris Cafritz, Frank Calcara, Carl C. Crampton, T. Girard Lee, Russell Martin, Waverly Taylor, Robert Tiffey and Clyde J. Verkerke.

Elected to the advisory board were William P. Ames, William Bornstein, Joseph H. Deckman, William H. Dyer, Richard W. Fisher, C. Vernon Hill, P. Y. K. Howat, C. W. Perrin, Charles S. St. John, Oliver Walker, and Bryce Weaver.

Topflight entertainment at the Statler dinner installation was rounded up by Edward R. Carr., past president of the National Association of Home Builders.

The governing council of the Real Estate Management Institute, meeting here this week in conjuction with officers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, has selected the following members of the local chapter to national committees for 1949:

Lewis F. Colbert, chairman, bylaws and regulations committee; Howard F. Humphries, member of the crediting and admissions committee; Carey Winston, chairman, division of education; and Robert T. Highfield, chairman, chapter delegates committee. Winston is also a member of the governing council.

The Potomac Chapter, National Association of Housing Officials, plans a series of five roundtable sessions on the theory and application of public housing rents. All will be held in the Commissionsioner's conference room of the Longfellow Building. Dates are January 18, February 15, March 22, April 19 and May 17. Speakers will be officials of the National Capital Housing Authority and Public Housing Administration.

Charles W. Holland, a salesman for Ravenwood Realty Co., has been named sales manager of that firm. He replaces Harvard (Brick) Hodges, who was appointed sales manager of the Home Realty Co.

Washington will be well represented at the twenty-first meeting of building owners and managers Monday and Tuesday at the Seaview Country Club, Absecon, N. J. Members of the Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington who plan to attend include Lew S. Mohler, Marshall Davis, James E. Douglass, Thomas R. Imlay, Robert G. Van Vranken, A. K. Payne, John W. Crow, James M. Shea, Harvey Humphrey, Irwin Altman, Clarence G. Brown, George W. Love, Harry J. Gerrity, Parks C. Steed and Secretary Charles J. Bauer.

Harvey Humphrey will participate in a panel discussion on office rental conditions. Irwin Altman will take part in a panel on labor conditions. Harry J. Gerrity, national counsel for the association, will speak on "1949 Developments in Washington."

"Valuation of Residential Real Estate" will be a course offered in the spring session of the School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs of the American University. It will be taught by Asa B. Groves, formerly chief appraiser of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and now with the Veterans' Administration. Other real estate courses will include "Housing Finance," "Current Housing Problems" and "Urban Redevelopment."

BRIEFS: OHE has turned down a recommendation by the Norfolk Rent Advisory Board that housing units be decontrolled in Ocean View and East Ocean View, Norfolk suburbs. Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods said the board failed to show that the demand for rental housing has been reasonably met . . . At least 1,265,000 city and farm homes were added to the national housing supply in 1948, setting an all-time record, according to the Construction Industry Information Committee.

The Mason Contractors Association of Cleveland has informed Cleveland bricklayers that association members will no longer pay bonuses, premiums and pay in excess of actual hours worked . . . Guardian Building & Loan Association of Silver Spring, Md., has joined the National Savings and Loan League . . . A recent story in the Wall Street Journal, quoting statistics rounded up by advisors to President Truman, says United States has four million "hidden' dwellings. The figure comes from homes taken out of the "substandard" group by owners who have added needed repairs to make them habitable, switching nonresidential property into housing; breaking large homes into several smaller apartments, and using former farm dwellings as shelter for folk who aren't farmers. Article added: ". . . the theories of Mr. Truman's own economist may actually be used to pare down the President's demand for a seven-year program to build one million Federally subsidized, low-rent housing units."

Dr. Francis Purchases Effingham Plantation

The historical Effingham Plantation in Prince William County, Va., has been purchased for $31,000 by Dr. C. Kenneth Francis, owner of the Arlington Animal Hospital, who plans to use it as a stock farm and laboratory facilities for animal studies, according to C. Louis Caputi, Fairfax County realtor who handled the sales transaction. George A. Bell was the former owner.

The property consists of 731 acres and a 12-room, 3-story manor house built in 1758 by Col. William Alexander, an officer under George Washington. The site, about 15 miles southwest of Manassas, was overrun by both Union and Confederate armies during the Civil War.

Lumber Stocks Hit New High

The Commerce Department has reported that lumber stocks reached their highest level since the war at the end of September, latest month for which it had data.

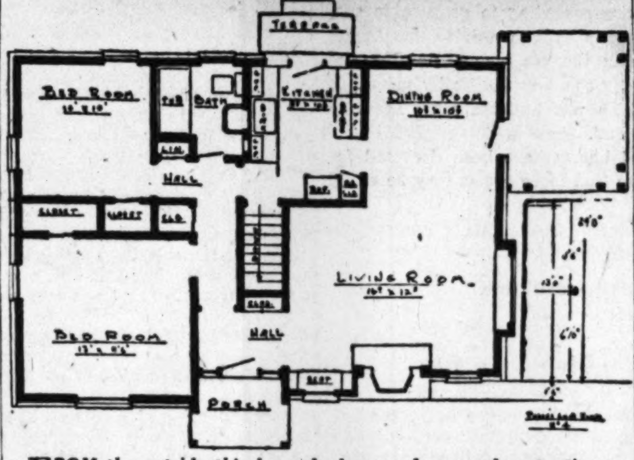
By the end of 1948, it said, the volume of unfilled orders for lumber showed a "strong declining trend" and an increasing amount of newly produced lumber was piling up at the mills despite "generally declining prices."

"This return to competitive conditions forced the closing down of a substantial number of high-cost operations," the Department's Forest Products Division reported.

The increase in lumber stocks to 11,700,000,000 board feet at the end of September reflected production and imports during the third quarter at the highest level since 1934 when the department started keeping quarterly data.

Production in this country during the third quarter of 1948 totaled 10,400,000,000 board feet, an increase of 1,100,000,000 over the previous three months. Imports were 551 million board feet.

Smaller Than It Looks . . .



FROM the outside this home looks very large and pretentious, but closer inspection reveals it is compact and complete in every detail—but quite small. Designed by Penny Hazell, 871 Atkinson ave., Detroit 2, Mich., the front entrance is protected by a small porch. The large front room boasts a natural fireplace, bookshelves and two matching, built-in upholstered love seats with storage space beneath. A porch leading off the living room can be screened for summer use. The two bedrooms have sliding doors on the large closets, plus built-in drawers. Two linen closets in the hall and a built-in medicine cabinet provide other storage space

Building Permits Show Decline In December

Construction activity in the District during December, as measured by building permits issued, was slightly under the November total, and a fraction under permits of December, 1947. Totals were: December, 1948, $3,764,108; November, 1948, $4,369,459; December, 1947, $3,767,359.

The report for last month shows permits were issued for erection of 34 new residences and 25 apartment buildings.

Buildings razed included 23 frame and 12 brick. Of the 34 new homes, 8 will be semidetached.

Soviets Claim New Wheat Variety

Moscow, Jan. 15 (AP).—Kazakhstan Pravda from Alma-Ata reports the development of a new variety of drought-resistant and cold-resistant winter wheat with high productivity. The wheat is called alborubrum 22311 and is particularly suited to the conditions of Kazakhstan—to its arid climate and deep winter frosts.

The wheat has been sown experimentally on large areas and gave excellent results, surviving where other types perished, and giving a generally higher harvest. The wheat was developed at the Krasnovodopadsk Agricutural Experiment Station in Kazakhstan.

Builders Begin Shift to Lower Priced Homes

Models of 'Economy Houses' Being Erected All Over U. S.

PILOT MODELS of "economy houses," designed to provide comfortable, durable housing for families in the middle and low income brackets, are being erected in substantial numbers all over the country, the National Association of Home Builders has reported.

First reports from a survey being conducted by NAHB indicate that progress has been made in cutting construction costs through streamlined methods of production, assembly line techniques, low cost acquisition of land, advanced structural design for maximum efficiency in material use and development of entire residential cities under one master blueprint.

The "economy house" varies in size according to geographic conditions and other factors. Basically it is built to provide new homes at a maximum cost without omitting the equipment, fixtures and quality materials deemed necessary by the average family group. It is not a "stripped-down" house which was built in some areas to meet extreme emergencies at war's end.

Most of these new mass produced homes have been designed for average size families, but are built so that more rooms may be easily added in the future.

Specific examples of "economy house" developments reported to the National Association of Home Builders included:

Contest by Trade Magazine Reveals New Building Methods

NEW USES of standard building equipment is the road to low-cost homes, reports Practical Builder, an authoritative trade journal. It has just sponsored a national competition to unearth new methods to build homes which will sell hundreds of dollars cheaper than similar homes built in the same areas.

Homes erected in Southeast Washington by Joseph H. Deckman were awarded honorable mention. Built of cinder block with a bevel facing, which resembles the more expensive clapboard siding, the Deckman homes cost $7750. They have two bedrooms, L-shaped living-dining room, kitchen and bath.

First prize of $1000 in the Practical Builder contest went to Sylvester A. Snyder of Waukesha, Wis., for his plan of a 24-by-35-foot basementless home using several major cost-saving features. They included: simple framing technique, truss roof construction, modular principles in layout, movable nonload bearing partitions, simple heating system and a lightweight chimney hung from the rafters.

Practical Builder editors, anxious to find a solution to high construction costs, permitted plans which did not conform to existing building codes. Harold Rosenberg, editor, said the resulting entries were a fresh approach to economy construction which stimulated greater output by building mechanics, while reducing waste without sacrificing structural quality or livability.

Some of the winning entries hold great promise to other builders, the article said. For instance, one winner has been built at St. Louis at a cost from $6 to $7 per square foot, which is far below any comparable building cost in that area. At Cleveland, prizewinning house No. 3 is being built at $10 per square foot against the usual $14 per square foot for that area. At Detroit, a prize-winner is being erected at $7.50 per square foot, or no more than $7500 for a small two-bedroom home.

A second prize of $500 was awarded to Maynard Pearstine of St. Matthews, S. C., who submitted an expansible house designed on a module principle and including: roof truss; nonload bearing partitions; exterior panels, with windows inserted, assembled on the site and raised in place; concrete slab floor; roof of tongue and groove sheathing, felt and shingles; simple warm air heating system and plumbing assembly.

The nationally known experts on the judging panel which studied more than 200 entries from over the country were: Henry K. Holsman, Chicago architect; Maxine Livingston, of Parents Magazine; Laurance H. Mills, Chicago builder; Nichols F. Molnar, chairman, Economy House Committee, National Association of Home Builders, and William H. Scheick, coordinator, Small Homes Council, University of Illinois.

Artic Climes Getting Warmer

Stockholm, Jan. 15 (AP).—The highest point of Sweden has sunk about 30 feet during the last 45 years, Prof. Hans W. Ahlmann stated after a glaciological investigation. The height of the ice-clad Kebnekaise in the northern Lapland was 2123 meters in 1902 but it is now 2114 meters.

The reduction of the glaciers of Sweden is part of a general phenomenon on the northern latitudes. Many glaciers and snowfields round the North Atlantic have vanished completely in this century.

Since the middle of the nineteenth century the air has become warmer during the winter, spring and autumn in northern countries and also during the summer in the Arctic. The cause is not known, but one theory is that greater quantities of heat are transported from the south to the north by an intensified, atmospheric circulation.

The ocean currents going northwards are also carrying more salt and warm water. The territory of the drift-ice has diminished considerably, and some fish species, notably the cod, have migrated toward the north.

Glass-Covered Gardens Thrive Indoors With Minimum of Care

Indoor terrarium should be nearly air-tight

By Alfred Putz

NO MATTER how many house plants you have and how successful you are with them, a terrarium or glass-inclosed garden will make an interesting and attractive addition to your indoor plant display, and will be a feature which practically takes care of itself.

Any wide-mouthed container of clear glass, from a little fish bowl up, will serve the purpose if the top edge is fairly even so that it can be covered lightly with a pane of glass. Some people, especially botanists, call it a Wardian case because the principle involved is that first applied by N. B. Ward, a plant hunter, more than a hundred years ago for transporting plants safely on long sea voyages.

Only those who already have had a glass garden know fully the joy it gives and how much can be accomplished with it with a minimum of care, covered with a pane of glass, it is nearly air-tight, and this insures a high degree of humidity. The lack of humidity is one of the greatest drawbacks of growing plants in the living room. Another decided advantage is uniformity of temperature, and a third is maintenance of an even moisture supply for the roots.

Add a Little Water

ONCE in a long while a little water will have to be added to compensate for what escapes when the glass top is held up by a wooden match stick to allow fresh air to enter and to clear the glass of accumulated water drops. That is all the care needed until the plants have grown so large as to spoil the composition.

Like other plants, those grown in the glass-inclosed garden also need light, but the container must not be exposed to direct sunlight, as that would increase the temperature beyond the endurance of the plants.

Preparation of the planting is a simple procedure. Place a layer of small pebbles or coarse sand interspersed with a few pieces of charcoal in the bottom. The depth of this layer depends on the size of the container, with an inch the minimum for the smallest ones.

In larger units it need not be placed evenly and, in fact, a slight slope from one corner to the opposite adds to the effect of the finished composition. Over this goes a cover of leaf mold or granulated peatmoss, from a quarter to half an inch thick.

Next comes the growing layer, composed of equal parts leaf mold and sandy soil well mixed together, Granulated peatmoss or commercal humus will serve where leaf mold is not available. The thickness of this layer also depends on the size of the container, but it should not be less thick than the bottom one. Porous pieces of stone, a few old twigs, bits of bark and similar material may be added where a woodland effect is wanted.

Drier Air Needed

CACTUS and most succulents are almost the only plants which will not thrive in the glass garden. They require drier air and soil conditions. As to others, it is primarily a matter of restricting the choice to plants of appropriate size. Slow growers are much preferred to those which make a quick, rank growth. There are practically no limits to the possibilities. Even carrot tops with half an inch of rot attached have been used.

The beginner is likely to be most successful with such plants as little ferns, wandering jew, Chinese evergreen, ivy, umbrella plant, small begonias, club mosses, peperomia, hoya, saintpaulia, ficus repens, maranta, nephthytis, cryptanthus, fittonia and even small specimens of kentia, areca and cocos palms.

An especially delightful effect is possible by using some of our low-growing, wild woodland plants such as spring anemone, asarum, bloodroot, bluets, dicentra, foamflower (Tirarella), hepatica, partride berry, twinflower and many others. When they are used the moisture supply should be more conservative. Hellis, mazus, crested iris and primroses also do well under the same conditions.

With still less moisture in the glass garden it becomes a suitable abode for some of the more resistant succulents such as aloe, crassula, echeveria, kalanchoe, kleinia, portulaca, sansevieria and the tender sedums.

U. S. Farmers Tour Nations Of Europe

PARIS, Jan. 15 (AP).—Europe must look to science and education to boost its agricultural output. That's the opinion of 25 American farmers who have just completed a tour of nine European countries.

The tour was strictly a busman's holiday. Each of the 25 farmers—who work their own land in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and South Dakota—paid his own way.

Typical of the group—but insistent that he could speak only for himself—was Ralph Raikes, who farms 940 acres near Ashland, Nebr. Raikes said he and many others in the group had been especially impressed by the farms in England, The Netherlands and Denmark.

"We couldn't have told those people anything even if we had wanted to. They were right on the ball, doing everything they possibly could with what they had to work with, and maybe doing things we couldn't do in America to squeeze out every possible bit of production."

Raikes said he didn't believe mechanization was the answer to European farming problems. He said that he stayed on a farm in France of about 500 acres and the owner had about 25 people working the farm.

"If they mechanized that farm—like I've done with mine so that I can work 940 acres with the help of three hired hands—what would the rest of those people do?" Raikes asked.

"The farms are all split up into little plots, too. I talked to one German farmer who said he had about 30 acres—all split up into about 45 separate pieces, from 10 to 30 minutes apart. It's not economic and it's a terrible time waster. But anyone who tries to change it will have a big job on his hands."

Raikes said the cattle he saw in England were "first class. They have fine animals there." But it wasn't that way all over Europe. In France, Raikes said, "I saw cattle being fed and they were mostly poor quality."

Raikes felt French feeding practices left much to be desired because of shortages or lack of education. He said there was a general lack of proteins and apparently no one had advised farmers on the best way to fatten stock. "They'd never heard of oil cakes or meat scraps."

On the question of improved grain varieties, Raikes said there seemed to have been little progress in Europe. He found little organized interest in the subject.

WASHINGTON'S FIRST ELEVATOR-TYPE apartment financed under Section 608 of the National Housing Act, rapidly is nearing completion at 1336 Missouri ave. nw., near Rock Creek Park. They're Just Wild About Harry, Too

OVER 300 ARTISTS of the amusement world will pay tribute to President Truman and Vice President-elect Barkley Wednesday night at the National Guard Armory. This inaugural gala will present stars of stage, radio, concert, opera and the dance. Among them you'll find Gene Kelly (right), who'll be on hand with his incomparable dancing, and Jane Powell (center), the Hollywood starlet currently headlining at the Capitol; Edgar Bergen, Dorothy Maynor, Joan Davis, Gene Autry, Margaret O'Brien, Dick Haymes, Alice Faye, Phil Harris, Lawrence Tibbett, Feruccio Tagliavani, Lum and Abner, Phil Regan, Sally and Tony DeMarco, Lucy Monroe, Lena Horne and George Jessel

ABBOTT AND COSTELLO, above, and Lionel Hampton, below, are three more of the stars who'll entertain at Wednesday night's Inaugural Gala at the Armory

Inaugural Note:

Show Business Is on Overtime

By Richard L. Coe

THIS WEEK'S INAUGURAL events point to a facet of the Washington theater scene that's so little appreciated it's rarely discussed.

More than any other city in the country—and I dare say in the world—Washington's show people put in regular full-time months of extracurricular activities.

In this week's festivities, under the guidance of Carter T. Barron, chairman of the Parade and Special Events Committee, the showfolk of the Capital will see the fruition of several months' work. From division managers of the Hollywood studios to secretaries and ushers that planning has meant excess energy from all concerned. There have been few 9-to-5 hours for them.

What makes this extracurricular assignment the more striking is that it's but one of many that seem to be going on all the time. At the moment, for instance, some of your showmen are working on the annual March of Dimes drive. Two thousand coin containers already have been placed by the motion picture theaters in the District to aid fund collectors.

Let's see. There's also National Brotherhood Week, the Heart Fund Drive, the Cancer Fund Drive, the Red Cross Drive. You'll find the same people called in to help Police Club benefits, Fire Department benefits, Boys' Club benefits. You'll find them plotting for "I Am an American" Day, for the Cherry Blossom Festival and the Fourth of July Cavalcade.

Gene Ford Died at Work

IN THE HEARTS of show people around town all this was tragically dramatized a few weeks ago in the untimely death at 53 of the Capitol's friendly managing director, Gene Ford. Before his passing, Gene had been working, while in the hospital, on Wednesday night's Inaugural Gala for the Armory.

Gene's overtime schedule for the last year had included not only sitting up all night many nights auditioning for his pet brainchild, the "Going Native" summer revue, but stage-managing shows for the National Press Club, the Women's National Press Club, the Gridiron and Alfalfa Clubs. He handled the White House Correspondents' annual dinner and the White House Photographers' ditto. I've known him to whip up a show for Walter Reed Hospital and the Mount Rainier Fire Department in the same week.

To get some notion of this from-the-heart contribution, come with me in spirit—but, please, not in the flesh; there isn't room!—to Carter Barron's office in the Capitol Theater. (The ordinarily adequate switchboard is so swamped with calls these days you sometimes have to wait a spell before getting either Mmes. Cannon or Sweeney.)

Carter's two secretaries, Dorothy Duty and Betty Strickler, are splitting dictation chores, phone calls and letter-writing. Since Barron's committee title includes virtually all of the public fetes—the Gala, the Parade and the Ball—you can imagine the stack of mail and memos dropping around the office.

In Barron's office, at the moment, there's a meeting with the Secret Service officials making timing, entrance and exit arrangements for the President.

One caller is George Crouch, local chief of Warner Brothers, who volunteered his far-flung staff for whatever's necessary. Another is Frank Boucher, of the K-B chain, whose unenviable task is chairman of the Gala's Ticket Committee.

Meakin Is Float Boss

COMING IN is Hardie Meakin, manager of Keith's and RKO's special representative here. Hardie, because of his flair for organization, is in charge of the parade's floats—just as he used to be for those split-second timetables of the Roosevelt Birthday Balls.

Just left are three coordinators, Frank La Falce, publicity director of the Warner chain; Clarence Arata of the Board of Trade, and Charles Alldredge, who, with Oscar Chapman, made up the advance-man team for President Truman on his campaign trips.

There's a call from Mrs. George Mesta, known to thousands of partygoers as Perle and an uncomfortably early riser, co-chairman, the Inaugural Gala Committee,

Space, Time and Numbers

Television Expands 3 Ways

By Sonia Stein

LOCAL television grew geographically, numerically and chronologically this week.

Geographically it grew when the East Coast network was connected with the Midwest network Tuesday night, giving Washington stations access to shows from Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and so on and outlets for the few network shows now produced here.

Numerically it increased with the arrival on the air of WOIC on channel 9. Except for the pooled telecast Tuesday of the opening ceremonies of the East-Midwest cable link, the station has been airing nothing but test pattern this week. This afternoon at 4:30, the station begins its regular schedule of telecasts.

Chronologically it grew with the beginning of daytime network TV programming on DuMont Wednesday morning. Locally, the effects of this will not show until tomorrow.

Taking the matters up in inverse order, let's start with DuMont's substantial contribution to video's growth.

"It's 5 at 10 on Monday morning," according to WTTG and I can't think of any reason to argue the point. Ten is the time and five is the channel on which the local DuMont station will operate a full daytime schedule on weekdays.

The shows, most of them taken from DuMont in New York, will run until 6 p. m. when they meet up with the regular nighttime programming. The emphasis is largely aural rather than visual, so that Mrs. Housewife can peel an eel and keep tabs on the programs at the same time. (In fact, the 1:30 to 2:30 and 3:30 to 6 p. m. periods which are filled locally, are simply music shows with still pictures substituted for the utilitarian but unaesthetic test pattern.)

The other shows, all Monday through Friday programs, follow the format of daytime radio shows for the most part.

DuMont in New York has been telecasting some of these shows since November. With the linking of the East and Midwest networks the shows were made available to other stations. (Some of them began picking up the material Wednesday; WTTG chose to wait for the new week.)

INGRID BERGMAN'S latest film, "Joan of Arc," is another feature of Inaugural Week, opening Wednesday at Keith's. Here is Miss Bergman in the climactic scene of the French saint's life, her martyrdom at the burning stake

Audience In On It

JOHNNY OLSEN'S "Rumpus Room" at 10 and "Welcome Neighbor" which follows it, are of the audience participation variety. Dennis James, noted for his explanations of wrestling strangleholds for ladies in the TV audience (whom he customarily addresses as mother), has an audience participation program at 1 called "Okay, Mother." This is lively and conforms to the usual format.

There's an hour-long deal at 11 with a Manhattan hot shot called Stan Shaw which could be a very tidy item without the aforementioned. There is a trio (piano, guitar and bass fiddle) of musicians and several young singers who excel at their own jobs and run rings around Shaw in the ad lib patter department.

There's a man-on-the-street show at 12:15 and a news show profusely illustrated with still pictures at 12:30. Amanda, a Negro pianist and singer, has a gay little show at noon and there's another musical period at 12:45 with Ruth Winchell who plays the piano and the accordion, and speaks with an engaging accent.

A "Needle Shop" show at 3 gives brief and not very clear lessons in sewing. The idea of sewing lessons on video is excellent; the execution here is not.

Two big name shows surround this needle twaddle. At 2:30 Wendy Barrrie burbles along gaily on "Inside Photoplay" which is a Hollywood gossip show. Evidently a blood relative of Photoplay magazine, the show presents the magazine's editors as well as guest stars from the entertainment world. Wendy maintains a rapid pace and twitters on past any technical calamities which arise. She looks pretty on TV, too.

At 3:15, Vincent Lopez, who doesn't look pretty on TV, interviews guests from the entertainment world between bouts at the keyboard. This and the Barrie show might better be put back-to-back, I would think.

For the moment, DuMont (both here and in New York) is holding the daytime fort alone. The other stations have a few scattered daytime shows although NBC is expected to offer daytime programming to its stations in a couple of months.

For dealers with sets to demonstrate, for people who work at night, for invalids and such idle housewives as may exist it's a very passable set of programs. It was not designed—nor is it apt—to cause mass absenteeism from more important daytime pursuits.

WOIC Joins Scene

TWO'S COMPANY, three's a crowd, but four makes a party. In any case, WOIC is a welcome addition to the local video scene. Occupying the last of the TV channels currently allocated to Washington, WOIC is to be a CBS affiliate now, and an affiliate of both CBS and Mutual when Mutual gets its TV network together.

More (much, much more!) information on the new occupant of channel 9 will be offered in Wednesday morning's paper. For the nonce, you need to know that WOIC will be carrying regular CBS-TV network programs beginning at 4:30 this afternoon, with "Lamp Unto My Feet" which is a religious program. From 7:30 to 8:30, Ford's once-a-month theater program will be aired with Edward Everett Horton in "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Ed Sullivan's popular "Toast of the Town" is on at 9 tonight, with "Riddle Me This" preceding it at 8:30. This latter is a quiz show with Conrad Nagel as emcee, which hasn't been seen previously in Washington. (Up until now, WMAL-TV which is an ABC-TV affiliate, has been taking as many CBS-TV shows as it could manage.)

At 10:15 tonight, a film of Arthur Godfrey's new Wednesday night TV show will be telecast. This gives Washington viewers a chance to catch

About Herb Shriner

A Breath of Indiana Free of Stale Corn

By John Crosby

HERB SHRINER has just been picked by radio editors as the most promising young "star of tomorrow," a resounding title which is virtually a kiss of death. As prophets, radio editors are even less gifted than poll-takers and a great many of their "promising stars of tomorrow" have plunged directly into obscurity.

Nevertheless, in Shriner I think the radio editors have picked something pretty special and he may survive the horrible title that has been thrust on him. Shriner is a throwback to an old, almost vanished tradition in American humor. He has a bit of Mark Twain, a bit of Artemus Ward, quite a lot of Will Rogers and perhaps a little too much of Bob Burns in him. Much of him nevertheless is pure original Shriner. His is a gentle, thoughtful humor, perhaps a little too gentle for a medium that specializes so exclusively in yaks.

A Fort Wayne, Ind., boy, Shriner likes to talk about his home town, which, if Shriner is to be believed, must be brimful of weird individualists. The barber, for example, who drank to steady his nerves. "After a while his nerves got so steady he couldn't move."

Or the mayor: "We had some mayor in my home town. I'll never forget his campaign speech. He said, 'Friends' . . . that was an overstatement right there. He said, 'Friends, I'm proud of you all here in this town and everything you stand for.' And believe me we stood for plenty."

The Shriner program is a 15-minute five-a-week affair on CBS at 6:30 p. m. (EST). When Shriner isn't drawling his homespun jokes, Raymond Scott's quintet plays twentieth-century tunes—"Crazy Rhythm," "Dinah"—as if they were eighteenth-century chamber music, an attitude toward contemporary melody distinctive with Mr. Scott alone and one I find captivating. You are also likely to find a guest on there every night—Earl Wilson, Paul Muni, Peter De Rose—and these intervals of wisecracking between Shriner and guest are dreary and, I think, unnecessary.

All this may seem quite a lot to compress into 15 minutes, but they get it all in nicely. Incidentally, CBS has been conducting what I consider some notable and healthful experiments toward wringing the excess poundage off radio programs, and these 15-minute shows, of which they have a great many in the early evening, are clear evidence that many radio programs could be cut in half without losing anything of importance.

The feature of the Shriner program is his three-minute monologue in which he discusses current events or tells stories about his home town. They're quiet, satiric, folksy little yarns. Here's one: A farmer he knew once found a nickel in a potato and was catapulted to fame. People came from miles around to see the man who found a nickel in a potato. He sold them photographs of himself and potatoes and prospered mightily.

Then one day his wife inadvertently put the potato with the nickel in it in a stew. "Folks discovered he had no talent any more," said Shriner sadly. "They came around and threw rocks at his house. Nobody wanted his potatoes or his photographs. Well, sir, he searched but he never found another potato with a nickel in it. He found potatoes with 3 cents in them and potatoes with 6 cents in them, but never one with a nickel in it."

New York's recent 20-inch snow brought forth the following apology from Shriner: "I like to go through the papers to find something to talk about, but I couldn't find the papers. I couldn't even find the news stand. You know, our weather was the main thing at home. We wasn't having any. Pretty hard for something to be the main thing and not to have any."

Fort Wayne must be some town, all right. "It's so peaceful out there," according to Shriner, "that if someone dropped an atom bomb on it the darn thing would just lay there and grow."

Radio-Record Combination Commended

By Paul Hume

MY CLOSER FRIENDS will tell you that in mechanics, engineering, household gadgets and similar technological materia, I am an utter and unrelieved dope.

Therefore when I begin to tell you about the new radio-phonograph combination that came to my house this week, you are reading the words of one who listens to music and musical sounds—not to a man who knows why lights blow out, refrigerators refuse to work, and electric fans stop in the midst of oscillating.

The new machine plays smoothly, quietly, efficiently, with a minimum of record-changing noise. In short, as far as I can tell, it is mechanically excellent. But that is not, never has been, never will be, what I care about in a mechanical music-maker. I want tone—clear, unfuzzy, natural-as-possible sounding tone. I hate booming bass, and I don't like over-shrill treble.

Nor does it seem reasonable to me to have to adjust various tone controls, knobs, buttons and levers from record to record to enjoy several hours of recorded music. Now when you buy a standard commercial machine, you are paying for a finished piece of cabinet-making. You are paying for a radio mechanic's time and talent in assembling a variety of parts and large units into a single ensemble, and you are paying the inevitable markup involved in manufacturer - wholesale - retail dealings. This markup ranges from 30 to 200 per cent, and you can imagine what that does to the final cost of your machine.

My new machine does not include television—I did not want TV, and don't think I will for some time. But the new machine does include AM-FM reception, a 15-inch diacone speaker, standard record changer and pickup, together with the one of the finest amplifiers and tuners on the market today. By having the machine made to order, you can select the type of speaker, pickup, amplifier, and tuner you want or can afford, and have them assembled into a machine that will come as near as possible to what your ear and pocketbook say you want.

Also, if at some later day, you want to put in a better speaker, it is a simple matter to change speakers, without affecting the rest of the system in any way. Thus you can improve your set in gradual steps rather than having checking some detail with Barron. A press release is issued by radio's drama critic, Nelson B. Bell, drumbeater for the gala.

Overtime Piling Up In Show Business

Harry Lohmeyer arrives to take Barron out to the National Guard Armory, for which, those two big nights, he'll be house manager, a task that falls his way because Harry knows about such things. He's in charge of Warner's 21 neighborhood houses—or is it more, Harry?

Jack Foxe, the publicity director for Loew's, is in with a list of where each visiting star or starlet will stay, what time they'll arrive, who'll be with them, when they'll leave.

Out at the Armory, the two producers of the Gala are checking the stage, James Sauter and Alan Zee, with the Capitol's Joel Margolis as their assistant. Checking acoustics and sight lines is Lester B. Isaac, technical director of all Loew theaters. One of them waves a wire from talent producer Sidney Piermont.

Even this far ahead the Gala is timed to two hours and ten minutes running time, with a 20-minute intermission; and woe betide the star, no matter how spectacular, who takes more than his allotted span. You suspect—and knowing that such fine performers are on the bill, even hope—that the show will run overtime, despite the planning.

Details Fascinating

YES, THE TWO EVENTS at the Armory are big stuff and the details of the giant parade are equally fascinating.

The States that are sending their own floats, for instance, will get garage space, for want of a clearer term, in unused hangars over at the airport. Arrangements must be made for fresh roses for that Tournament of Roses float that will be brought on from California. And there's that posse group about which the sheriff of Kansas City told Mr. Truman, to be given the reply: "See Carter Barron."

Through it all Barron is as busily composed as when he played football at Carnegie Tech. He's a big man, sandy haired and florid complexioned. The criticisms inevitable to such a task hurt him, you suspect, more than he lets on, but all he asks is that he do his work as well as possible. He always does.

Carter is a natural for the job he's got and was appointed by a near-showman, General Chairman Melvin D. Hildreth, the attorney high in the councils of the Democratic Party. Former president of the Circus Fans Club, he's America's No. 1 circus fan and legal adviser to Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey.

Yes, the Capitol's showmen have had a big part in this week's arrangements while tending to their regular chores as well. And they know that when this week is over, there'll be something else, as there always is, in this city of perpetual transients. When a job's to be done, the same names appear—this column has mentioned only a few. As Irving Berlin so rightly sang, there really is "No Business Like Show Business." Especially in Washington.

'Annie' Opening at Ford

THE touring counterpart of Broadway's long-lived "Annie Get Your Gun" opens a two-week run at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, tomorrow night.

Heading the cast of Irving Berlin's musical is Billie Worth, a young lass who saved the show one night in Chicago last summer and was awarded permanent possession of the juicy role created by Broadway's Ethel Merman.

This production by the writing team of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d is one of the largest now touring the road. The Herbert and Dorothy Fields story employs 56 speaking roles, 9 settings, 22 musical numbers, over 350 costumes and 100 performers. Joshua Logan, one of the busiest directors of the day, directed the touring company as he did the original.

In the supporting roles are Taggart Casey, football star turned thespian; Donald Burr, Jack Rutherford, Tommy Wonder, Reta Shaw, Mimi Walters, Zachary Charles and Charles Watts.

A special Sunday night performance is scheduled for January 23.

London Opera Now 'Racket'

BRIGHTON, England, Jan. 15 (AP).—Sir Thomas Beecham, the firebrand of British music, complains that a "hapless set of ignoramuses and nitwits" are making a "racket" of the Covent Garden National Opera in London.

Sir Thomas, almost as well known for his acid tongue as for his ability as a conductor, exploded at the annual conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians.

Chief targets of his remarks were the Covent Garden Opera Trust and Karl Rankl, the opera's Austrian-born musical director. He asked the society to demand an inquiry into the opera.

Reading out the names of the trustees, Sir Thomas cried, "What does this list suggest to you? The first and most noticeable feature is that there is not a single person who knows anything about opera or has practical experience of it, and whose opinion is worth a brass farthing."

He also complained that there wasn't a single British musician on the opera panel of the government-sponsored Arts Council, observing: "I don't think the word 'racket' is out of place."

Of Rankl, he said, "the appointment of an alien, and especially one bearing a German name, to the post of musical director of the British National Opera is so incredible that I have from time to time to remind myself that it has actually happened and is not some fantastic dream."

In London Rankl said he had no comment.

That 'LP' Record

Here are the new midget phonograph and records introduced last week by RCA Victor. Note the large spindle. Turntable speed is 45 rpm, records play up to 4 minutes, change in less than 2 seconds

CURRENT new long-playing records are 12 inches and 7 inches in diameter. Twelve-inch discs play at 33 1/3 revolutions per minute, and last 22½ minutes per side. Made of vinylite, unbreakable, light in weight, of standard thickness, they are played with a pickup weighing one-fifth of an ounce. Grooves are approximately three one-thousandths of an inch wide. There are from 224 to 300 of them per inch on microgroove long-playing records. Standard records have about 80 to 100 grooves per inch.

Standard records play at 78 rpm with a conventional pickup weighing half an ounce to 1 ounce. Both standard and long-playing records are placed on a spindle about one-half inch in diameter. Standard records play up to about four minutes without changing.

RCA Victor's new slow-playing records are not long-playing. They will play up to around five minutes, as standard records do at present. They will play at 45 rpm on a spindle about 1 inch in diameter (see cut). Victor's new player for these records will change them at a new fast speed so that the interruption in the music will be less than two seconds.

New Victor records will be lightweight and 6¾ inches in diameter. Victor claims 100 per cent freedom from distortion in reproduction. The records will be of unbreakable vinylite. Prices are not yet determined for Victor disks.

Columbia's long-playing records cost $4.85 plus tax for 12-inch classical records, $3.85 for 10-inch classical, and $2.85 for popular records. Their new 7-inch long-playing records cost 60 cents for popular releases and 90 cents for the masterworks.

New Columbia 7-inch disks present the same amount of music as standard 12-inch records, but employ the long-playing devices in the same manner as the larger records.

Critic Commends Tone Of Radio-Phonograph

to invest in an entirely new outfit. In such purchases your money goes into parts which produce good tone and fidelity. Your markup is reduced, your workmanship improved, and your dollar outlay more than doubled in results.

Advice Is Sound

THERE are good, honest, reliable men in every community who are in the business of making sets such as these. They will plan them for your particular home, whatever its problems and possibilities, and for your own budget problems. Their work is guaranteed, and their advice sound. If you're interested I have no objections to answering inquiries by mail or phone about where I bought my new machine.

It sounds wonderful. Piano tone emerges with high fidelity to the actual tone of the piano today. Enormous ensembles, such as the brass choirs, organ and chorus of the Berlioz Requiem, come through with no blasting, tremendous power, clear, and real, in sound. A string quartet sounds as if you were in the presence of the players. The same is true of many vocal records. From now on, reviewing records will be an even greater pleasure, and we should be able to give you more detailed information on technical qualities of recordings.

Speaking of records brings us to the other technical matter for today. The record manufacturing industry is on the brink of confusion if not war. As you all know, last summer Columbia Records brought out long playing records. These discs, of standard size, play at 33 1/3 revolutions per minute instead of the 78 now considered standard.

They are pressed on vinylite, so they are unbreakable. They make it possible to hear an entire symphony from a single 12-inch record, with only one break in the music, and none of the old interruptions every four minutes. Also they cost about half as much as the older, bulkier sets of records.

Adapted to Standard

COLUMBIA made its new records to revolve at 33 1/3 r.p.m. to conform to standard equipment throughout the country in radio stations, where transcriptions are all played at this speed. Since the new disc came to market, a million and half of the records have been sold, and about half a million instruments sold on which to play them. The instrument is a simple turntable, designed to play at the slower speed, and with a lightweight pickup. This equipment plays through any standard phonograph and costs a small sum.

RCA Victor now enters the lists with its own long-playing records. These will be 6¾ inches in diameter, and will play at 45 r.p.m. Some weeks ago we talked with an official in charge of production at Victor. We expressed the opinion that such a move would not be in the public interest, would create confusion in the mind of the buying public, and would set the record industry back. The official pooh-poohed the idea of any need for standardization in the field, but implied that Victor considered long-playing records and unnecessary and intermediate step between what we have now and eventual wire recording.

Nevertheless, Victor is coming out with its own baby, in the face of a dozen leading manufacturers whose machines are now designed to play at 78 and 33 1/3 r.p.m. No less than Capehart, Stromberg-Carlson, Philco, Magnavox, GE, Westinghouse, Wilcox-Gay, Crosley, Farnsworth, Admiral, Stewart-Warner, and Zenith make machines which will accommodate Columbia's records.

Victor will, of course, claim that its new records are finer than any other on the market. And they may prove to be. But it is extremely difficult to see how they can be any better because they turn at 45 r.p.m. instead of 33 1/3. Record buyers, faced with the need for three turntables, if they want to play the new Columbias, new Victors, and their old favorite records, will do well to wait before investing in something as questionable as the new long-playing Victors.

Choral Work Tops Week's Music List

OUTSTANDING music this week: a world premiere this afternoon in the National Symphony Orchestra's performance of Rudolf Mengelberg's Missa Pro Pace, to be given with the Washington Choral Society, and soloists under Louis Potter. The program also includes Beethoven's seldom heard Choral Fantasy, for chorus, orchestra, and piano. Etelka Freund will be the pianist. Howard Mitchell conducts the first half of the concert, with the local premiere of Gian Carlo Menott's Sebastian music, and Louis Potter the latter half.

JEAN CASADESUS, son of one of the most distinguished pianists of our time, makes his Washington debut tonight at the National Gallery. He seems destined to become his father's worthy successor. TUESDAY EVENING Mary Alyce Bennett comes up with a great program for the Institute of Contemporary Arts. Wednesday finds Georges Enesco once more leading the National Symphony, with Erica Morini as his violin soloist. Enesco's programs in recent years have brought some of the most satisfying performances we have heard.

THE SAME EVENING the East-West Association lists an Inaugural concert by Jean Murai, folk singer, in "People of Mexico," slated for Cafritz Auditorium. Operetta lovers will note the two openings of "Naughty Marietta" in Lisner Auditorium this week by the Columbia Opera Company, starring Catherine Emery.

MYRA HESS comes Wednesday, January 26, to play solos and a Mozart concerto with members of the National Symphony under Dr. Kindler. This concert is not included in any series tickets.

MUSICAL VESPERS come today at Emory Methodist Church at 5 p. m., Foundry Methodist at 8 p. m., where the Boston University Seminary Singers will appear, and at Mount Zion Methodist Church, 29th st. between O and Dumbarton, at 6 p. m.

NEXT METROPOLITAN OPERA tour will be sponsored by the Zonta Club of Washington. Details from Mrs. Nancy Poore Tufts, Spruce 0199-J.

WASHINGTON friends of William Strickland, who was stationed at Fort Myer for part of the war and served as director of the Cathedral Choral Society for some time, will be interested in a forthcoming broadcast. Saturday afternoon, the fifteenth, at 2 p. m., Strickland will lead the Nashville Symphony Orchestra, of which he is permanent conductor, in an all-American concert, with Robert Ward's second symphony, Homer Keller's Overture, 1947, and the MacDowell Piano Concerto in D Minor.

The Record Player

Anderson Voice Still One of Our Greatest

MARIAN ANDERSON in spirituals. Victor 1238. $5.

Some of these are recorded by Miss Anderson for the first time and some are among her oldest and best concert spirituals. Her voice is well recorded, and sounds rich and assured most of the time.

There are more frequent moments of uncertainty in pitch and tone than we used to hear from this unique artist, but her singing is still one of the great things about our generation.

Bach: Prelude and Fugue in A Minor. Byron Janis, pianist. Victor 12-0379. $1.25.

One of the finest transcriptions Liszt ever made was his account of Bach's thrilling organ prelude and fugue. Janis understands three things necessary to make this music sound well: he knows how to play the piano beautifully, he understands the nature of contrapuntal music, and he is acquainted with the pivotal points in performing Bach.

The tone of the piano is big, resonant, and healthy. Janis will be here in March with the Philadelphia Orchestra. He is unusual, in a day of virtuoso techniques, for his command over the gentler sides of his art.

DVORAK: Symphony No. 4 in G Major. New York Philharmonic, under Bruno Walter. Columbia 770. $6.

Buy this set if you love symphonies of the nineteenth century. Here is the sound of Brahms heard in the clearer vision of the orchestra Dvorak preferred. Here are folk melodies that lighten the heaviness of the late romantic symphony. Here is a masterful performance by one of the most mellow of orchestras, under a conductor born to such music as this.

Vastly superior in musical content to the fifth, or E minor, symphony of Dvorak, the fourth to be published was actually eighth in point of composition. The score sings. Listen to the first side, or the opening section of the slow movement. We have long needed just this performance of this particularly happy music.

SONGS of the Auvergne. Madeleine Grey, soprano, with orchestra under Elie Cohen. Columbia 758. $4.75.

Now look. If enough people thought this album was worth shouting for to cause Columbia to re-press the entire album made some years ago, don't you think you had better try it?

Here is something special in the whole world. Madeleine Grey, who was Maurice Ravel's choice time and again to sing his songs, sings these fascinating songs from southern France. They are arranged for orchestra by Cantaloube, and could not be better done.

The album was made over a decade ago, and has lost none of its charm. There is some of the most scintillant, intriguing, absolutely bewitching music in the world contained on these discs. And for my money the performance could not be improved. Do not delay or neglect to get these. There is nothing like them anywhere else, and they are gems no matter how great your collection of records may be.

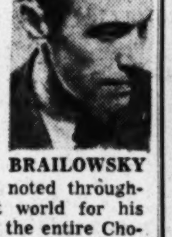
Brailowsky Here Tomorrow Night

Frederic Chopin died 100 years ago this year.

The greatest innovator in writing music for piano, Chopin with Beethoven, is probably the most performed of any creator of piano literature. He is often called the greatest composer for the instrument.



BRAILOWSKY

Tomorrow night Alexander Brailowsky, noted throughout the concert world for his performances of the entire Chopin repertoire, will include a group of representative works from the pen of the poetic pole.

A ballade, polonaise, waltz, and nocturne are listed for the concert, in addition to the Schumann Fantasy, and music by Scarlatti, Ravel, and Debussy.

Kokoschka Gets Reacquainted With His Work

AT THE Phillips Gallery, Oscar Kokoschka had the experience of renewing acquaintance with his own paintings, some of which he had not seen for 40 years. In his wanderings many of his paintings were lost or left behind. Major works rescued from oblivion under the Nazis were purchased in countries outside of Germany. United are paintings which for years have been widely scattered in public and private collections in Europe and the United States.

KOKOSCHKA

Despite a series of vicissitudes that would long since have vanquished a lesser man, the painter has a warm outgoing personality and an eager curiosity. On the surface at least there is no hint of bitterness. Several times he was forced to pull up stakes and flee before the oncoming Nazis; but he never joined a campaign of hate against them or anyone else. Like Gandhi, whom he passionately admires, Kokoschka believes in the "propaganda of love." In World War I he came so close to death in direct enemy combat that he feels he has been immune from fear ever since.

'Vision Everything'

KOKOSCHKA repeated several times the phrase, "Vision is everything," which appears in his published writings. "The world is too much concerned with theories," he said. "They are taking the place of experience and ideas. And the painters are relying on theories at the expense of personal vision."

Stopping before the big "Tempest," which had the key position in the show, Kokoschka recalled that this painting in 1937 was featured in the "infamous" Hitler exhibition of Degenerate Art in Munich, where it hung with eight other of his works. The painting was rescued through purchase by the Basle Museum in Switzerland, from which it is loaned for the American show.

Kokoschka reminisced about the early days of expressionism, the spark of which was extinguished in Germany but has since caught fire in other countries.

Television Expanding Three Ways From Here

up on the debut show of "Arthur Godfrey and His Friends." Hereafter it'll be shown "live" Wednesday nights at 8.

A special WOIC Inauguration program will be on at 7 tonight. Its content has not been announced, but it might well show the staff members of the station grinning a la Chessy Pussy about getting the station on the air on schedule.

Not Good Looking

THE LINKING of the East and Midwest TV networks has more commercial than programming significance at this point, although better (or at least more expensive) programs are the normal aftermath of healthy conditions in the sponsor area, which are in turn dependent in part on the number of outlets available.

The opening ceremonies Tuesday night put me in mind of the phrase, "Off with their heads!" Any one of the four network presidents might easily have thundered it about his whole TV staff after the opening. All four were subjected to some of the worst TV coverage of the evening.

CBS' Arthur Godfrey and some of his crew did an informal stint at the beginning, which had such charms as Arthur has. DuMont contributed a session of the Ted Steele band, complete with comic (?) musician and a dancer. This is, item-for-item, the same material you get in similar short subjects from Hollywood. (This sounds unkind? Amend it to read that for what it was, it was good of its kind. Didn't help it one little ol' bit, did it?)

Steele and his band perform daily on DuMont but WTTG is not carrying them just yet for valid reasons which have nothing to do with the program's value.

NBC threw its Mr. M. Berle into the competition. Naturally, he won hands down for showmanship and pace. On the other side of the ledger, you might say that Midwesterners who have been hearing about Berle's TV personality have now seen it from A to Z, and may figure that's that for the season.

ABC closed with a short mystery drama from Chicago which proved to us in the East that the Atlantic and the Great Lakes are indeed in a position to splash the heck out of each other with big, wet programs. (Chicago was a big radio center years ago and may prove to be a big video center, although clearly not with this class of merchandise.)

Millions to See Truman In Telecast of Inaugural

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, JAN. 15 (AP).—If President Truman should get stage fright while being sworn in for another term in Washington Thursday it would be small wonder.

By means of television's electronic eye, Mr. Truman will be watched by more people than have seen all the previous presidential inaugurations starting with that of George Washington. In addition, tens of millions will be listening in by radio.

Industry officials estimate the ceremony will be seen by as many as 10 million television viewers in cities along the newly enlarged video network that extends as far west as St. Louis.

The Inauguration ceremony will be carried on the entire enlarged network that connects 14 cities, with stations in three others having access to it. Will Baltin, secretary of the Television Broadcasters Association, estimates there are 800,000 television sets in the area.

Baltin figures that 6 to 10 persons will watch the ceremony on each set—an average taking into account the larger numbers for sets in public places.

Unlike the radio setup in which the networks will have individual coverage, television coverage of the inauguration will be on a pool basis with all the networks cooperating and dividing up assignments and camera positions. The resulting telecast will be available to all stations with access to the television hook-up regardless of their normal network affiliation.

Most television stations will cover the ceremony from start to finish, beginning at 11:30 a. m. (EST) or earlier and continuing 5 to 5½ hours.

Blind Girl Sings Today

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Betty Clark, 12-year-old soprano, is getting her own network show. Her script is being printed in Braille. She has been blind from birth.

Betty's series with a sponsor will go on the full ABC network (WMAL in Washington) starting Sunday afternoon at 3:15. Besides songs, she will play the piano and do part of her own announcing, reading from the specially prepared script.

At the Bridge Table

A Busy Week Is Ahead For Duplicate Devotees

By Marian H. Barre

CONCLUDING event on the Northern Virginia Tourney program is the open team-of-four championship, to be played today beginning at 1 p. m. in the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. It is a two-session game, final round starting at 6 o'clock; defenders are the local foursome of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McGhee, William F. Million and J. T. McDermott.

Duplicate devotees have a busy week ahead. Monday evening marks the first match of the Federal Bridge League's new team season at 2600 16th st. nw.; also scheduled for that evening is the nationally awarded monthly pair contest at the La Salle Studios. Virginia fans will turn out Tuesday for the master point monthly at Buckingham Village. Ranking event of the week is the Washington Bridge League pair contest for ACBL awards on Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt. Friday evening Euclid Studios holds a similar match, this game having been deferred on account of the Alexandria tourney. Arlington Farms Club, too, has a game Friday.

The women's auxiliary meets for luncheon Saturday at the Roosevelt after a business meeting called for 11:45 a. m., with Mrs. H. G. Campbell presiding. Hostesses in charge of arrangements are Mrs. J. L. Herlihy and Mrs. J. G. Seabourne The usual duplicate game follows the luncheon.

Next annual tourney is Maryland State championships in Baltimore on January 28, 29 and 30.

A MEETING of the executive committee of the Washington Bridge League was held last Sunday at the home of James G. Stone, when plans were outlined for the coming season, including selection of dates for several annual events. First of these extra-curricular activities are the men's and women's pair championships, to be held concurrently on February 16 and 23.

Among new rulings adopted was one prohibiting two "Class A" players pairing up to compete in a duo section on team nights, which are the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. The current allocation of members into separate classes defines group A as the 75 (or more) master point holders; class B includes those with 10, up to 74 points, while members of the C group may have never won a national point, or have a maximum holding of nine points.

Members who increased their totals in the first WBL nationally awarded game in 1949 (on January 5) included: Charles Lyons-R. A. Houtz, Dr. N. J. McHugh-W. A. Poissant, Mrs. William McIntyre-R. A. Ashton, Mrs. C. W. Eager-Sue Gantt (first-time winners), Mrs. Dixie Wright-J. G. Fletcher, Mrs. Mary Goodstein-R. C. Frazee.

To the bimonthly Friday duplicates conducted by the Commissioned Officers Mess at the Marine Corps base at Quantico, Va., have been added matinee sessions for the women's auxiliary, the first game taking place on January 7, Mrs. Dixie Wright directing.

After the holiday recess, fortnightly tourney bridge was resumed at the National Press Club on January 7, and at Chevy Chase Country Club last Thursday. Both games are restricted to members and invited guests.

THE annual open pair bridge championship at the Chess Club was a victory for the younger element, Joe White and David Murray winning by a 19-point margin over Dr. J. V. Waits and George Dickerman, who had led in the first round. It was a two-session match played on January 4 and 11. Mr. and Mrs. George Kathan held third position through both sessions. Dickerman is the current "plaque" champ, having won that honor in the recently concluded July-to-January series . . . At the club's master point game on January 8, top awards went to Thomas Buford and Dr. J. G. Wooley, Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and Mr. Mowery.

During the past 10 days national awards were in competition in four other local clubs—At the La Salle Studio full points went to Mrs. T. E. Turner and W. R. Garrett, Mrs. S. H. Beasley and Mrs. M. J. Rahily; half points to Mrs. M. Goodstein and J. F. Overend, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Evans.

At Arlington Farms—Tops to the Kathans, and to Mrs. Kent Yoke and Raymond Kerr (this is a father-daughter partnership); seconds to Jesse Duke jr., and Paul Blassangame, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rhuby.

Euclid Studios—Miller Roberts and J. G. Stone, Charles Lyons and Ben Rosson; Mrs. R. H. Skinner and Miss K. McNutt, Mrs. Turner and E. R. Shepherd were runners-up.

The Count Club—Mrs. M. Schaff and A. C. Raynor, H. D. Sheitelman (a first-time win) and Mrs. Elizabeth Count; half points to Robert Wetherell and Col. H. A. Walker, Drs. N. J. McHugh and W. H. Gorton.

The Washington Philatelist

Temple to Give Course In Stamp Collecting

By William M. Stuart

THE PHILATELIC INSTITUTE of Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa., has announced a two-year course in philately, classes to start February 14. This might be termed an innovation, to be watched with great interest not only in educational circles, but by the public in general. This course will lead to the degree of associate in business (philately), and has been planned with the assistance and advice of stamp collectors. It is hoped young people interested in philately will enroll in the institution.

The institute founders deem philately a business and have established its courses along vocational lines. Students enrolled are expected to meet certain requirements of the university by courses in English, psychology, social science and business.

The philatelic courses will be taught by qualified instructors, members of the faculty of Temple University, and there will be specialists in various fields of stamp collecting. Facilities of the Philatelic Museum with its library and exhibits will be at the disposal of the students. Also students will have access to many rare collections. While this new course may be regarded as purely experimental, it is believed it will greatly enhance the study of philately.

THE FOLLOWING commemorative stamps, all issued in 1947, were taken from the sales list at the Philatelic Agency on January 6: Thomas A. Edison, Joseph Pulitzer, Centenary of Stamps, Doctors, Utah and Frigate Constitution. The $1 migratory bird or hunting stamp issued in 1946 has also been taken from the list, leaving only the 1947 and 1948 hunting stamps available.

The Capital Precancel Club held its first meeting of 1949 on Monday evening at the office of Dr. Chester Uhler, Hill Building, 839 17th st. nw.

The Colonial Stamp Shop, owned and operated by James H. Hoffman and Ruth Hoffman, at Saugerties, N. Y., has just issued a new edition of its United States price list. The volume of 50 pages is fully illustrated and its prices are very attractive. The list may be obtained by sending 10 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing.

The canceled black postal note stamps, from 1-cent to 90 cents, are quoted in New York at $1.95, face value being $4.95. At last accounts these stamps were not to be offered for sale. A postal official may soon issue a statement explaining why the stamps have been placed on the market.

The new 4-cent airmail postal card was placed on first-day sale in all Washington postoffices on Monday. In honor of the new card, a special program was held in the office of Joseph J. Lawler, Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, when an album containing an autographed 4-cent postal card was presented by Lawler to George W. Angers of Springfield, Mass., one of the leading members of the American Air Mail Society and collector of note. Among those present were Robert E. Fellers, superintendent of the Division of Stamps; Robert S. Burgess, in charge of air mail transportation; L. B. Gatchell, Upper Montclair, N. J.; Admiral Jesse G. Johnson, Norfolk, Va.; George D. Kingdom, Conneaut, Ohio, and Representative Foster Furcolo of Springfield, Mass.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow evening in the Recreation Center, 1818 Rhode Island ave. ne. Max Tryon will speak on "My Visit to Switzerland," illustrated with projected colored slides.

At the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, SPA, Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple Svend Yort was elected a trustee, vice Henry Gabriel, resigned, having gone to California. Ellery Denison presided. At the meeting on Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., a program will be given with speakers in commemoration of the new 6-cent air-mail stamp.

There's No Disputing It, but—

The Question Is: Whose Taste?

Marsden Hartley's "Fishermen's Last Supper," currently on display at the Corcoran Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

WE HAVE always felt that the matter of taste is a subject which should be approached gently, and the Corcoran in its survey of a century of taste in American painting has done just that. The difference between this show and many others built around an idea is that in this case the examples are excellent. The assemblage, which includes loans from several other museums and a few private collections, brings together standbys that for years have adorned the pages of histories of American art.

"De Gustibus" is the title chosen from a Latin proverb meaning there is no disputing of tastes, and the examples are from 1830 to 1930. The maxim sounds simple enough, but considering that most of the disputes in this field still center on the matter of taste, and frequently nothing but taste, it is worth repeating. How often the good taste and bad taste discussed so heatedly is really a question of "your taste and my taste." How deadly dull can be a room or a collection picked with care but without conviction according to the rules of "good taste" laid down at the moment.

We recall a remark made by one of this country's most eminent and courageous art critics which left no doubt as to his preference for a display of what would be considered in polite circles robust bad taste, over its pallid opposite. Tastes develop if they are exercised honestly; in other words it often happens that someone who begins with a love for only the most obvious and pictorial grows to enjoy a much wider and more subtle selection. Tastes atrophy if they constitute merely the acceptance of other people's opinions.

All Well Done

IN THE Corcoran show the selections are all well done, and in some cases superbly done. Some are artificial, like Leutze's version of the historical episode of Milton playing for Cromwell, or meaningless, like the carefully posed "Housemaid" of William Paxton. The difference lies more in whether the artist has breathed life and feeling and imagination into his work than in the matter of taste.

For example, what a world of difference between Eakins' "Pathetic Song," which reaches to the hearts of his subjects, and Tarbell's genteel interior "Josephine and Mercie," which does not go below the surface appearances. Perhaps the most striking thing brought out in the assemblage is that the men, like Quidor, Ryder, Henri, Sloan or Hartley, who had strong individuality and something out of the ordinary to say, were less acceptable in their time than those who were correct and polite. Nineteenth century tastes were conservative and the genteel tradition was strong. The man who came closest to spanning the distance between the acceptable and the real was Winslow Homer.

Eleanor Swenson, who spent a great deal of time and effort in assembling the show and developing the ideas it embodies, has written a thoughtful and illuminating introduction. She has aimed to prove that the progress of painting in the American past has always been troubled with controversy, as new styles or subjects have appeared. There have always been individuals who have kicked over the traces. Only today there are perhaps more traces to kick over.

"De Gustibus" is a splendid prologue to the Corcoran's coming event, its biennial which will open in March. It offers a rare opportunity to see American painting in progress over the years which are now most generally overlooked. The chance it offers to see paintings like William Morris Hunt's "The Bathers," George Caleb Bingham's "Rafsmen Playing Cards" or John La Farge's beautiful "Flowers on a Window Ledge" would alone make the exhibition worth while.

Art Notes

Exhibition of Polish Manual Arts Opens Here

AN EXHIBITION of Polish manual arts by trained designers and village folk opened Wednesday at the United States National Collection of Fine Arts. The show was lent by the Polish Ministry of Arts and Culture to the American Federation of Arts for circulation in this country.

Behind the enterprise are three chief aims: to seek inspiration for modern design in the old skills and crafts; to promote the manual arts as a means of offsetting the increasing mechanization and standardization that has come with industrial development in Poland, and to promote good handicrafts as an antidote to the banalities of commercial production.

Included in the group are tapestries and examples of the famous reversible rugs, ceramics, wood sculpture, folk painting and contemporary painting on glass in tempera, according to a technique which has been handed down for generations.

The show presents a charming combination of the work of the skilled and the unskilled. The tapestries are the work of those with academic training; other objects are principally produced by town and village artisans. The connection between is that the textiles are being developed into a modern industry which stems from a peasant tradition.

The second exhibition of paintings at the Trans-Lux Theater consists of work by the following Washington artists: Robert Gates, Eugen Weisz, Kenneth Stubbs, Marcella Comes, Carl Nyquist, Helen Rennie and Rowland Lyon.

The Corcoran Gallery will open a one-man show of oils by the French painter, William Malherbe, beginning January 22. Twenty canvases will be included in the collection, which will continue through February 25.

French Give Germans Aid In Education

By Fred M. Hechinger

(First of two articles.)

A LEGEND has grown in Germany. Its central theme is that the French are intent on some devilish plan to persecute that country, to draw the lifeblood from its veins, and to turn the weakened neighbor into a giant French colony. And since the Germans are master-propagandists, that legend is being spread obligingly.

I discussed the French reeducation effort with an American officer. "Don't talk to me about them," the soldier said. "They just want to Frenchify the Germans." I asked him when he had last visited the French zone. He answered that he had never been there. I dropped the argument.

Whatever errors the French occupation forces may have made economically and politically (and some of these "errors" should be considered in the light of the Nazi occupation record in France!), objections to the French reeducation effort can only be based on ignorance or false reports. After an extensive on-the-spot study of the French plan and action I recommend it to the other Allied authorities for serious study.

The French plan is based on the assumption that it takes teachers to teach children. Since Nazi and nationalist teachers cannot be expected to teach anything but nazism and nationalism, Gen. Raymond Schmittlein, director of the education branch in Baden-Baden, has given first priority to the training of new teachers. "To hand the children over to the old group of poisoned men and women would be a crime against humanity," said the officer.

Boarding Schools Used

PERHAPS the best of all German education plans, French teacher training utilizes the boarding-school method in order to protect the youngster against the omnipresent Nazi influence. In the first part of the program qualified candidates finish their secondary schooling in special institutes from their fourteenth to eighteenth years. After that they attend a two-year seminar in another special boarding school.

When I visited the Pestalozzi school at Alzey, I found an institution based on the best traditions of progressive German education. Aside from a young French university student, who acted as assistant tutor, there was no French influence—unless the generous present of German-language, Swiss-produced and French-paid volumes of modern art are to be rejected as symbols of vicious colonization. The German teacher showed them to me with obvious pride.

Above the entrance to the school's main building is the motto of Pestalozzi, one of Germany's most enlightened educational leaders: "Our Country! Don't teach your boys to look upon the sword as the highest ideal. Teach them to find the light—the understanding of your real meaning!"

Inside, we were told, examinations were in progress. But when I protested that we did not want to interrupt the proceedings, Director Mayer laughed and took us to the examination room.

A group of 16-year-olds were informally seated around a large table. Teachers asked questions or wrote problems on the blackboard; pupils answered cheerfully and without fear or inhibitions. If one of them got off the track others helped out. If the answers were questionable, the teacher would debate the solution rather than dictate it.

Library Well Stocked

AS I walked down the corridor with the director and members of his staff, a student came rushing out of one of the rooms and slammed the door behind her. I expected the worst. But Dr. Mayer said smilingly: "Do you think that door is closed, Irma?" The girl laughted, bid all of us a "good-day" and hurried on. "It is good to be young," said Dr. Mayer.

The library at Alzey is not only well stocked, but contains such valuable titles as "Rauschning's Conversations with Hitler," a book on "War Criminals" and a number of volumes of the United Nations.

Twice every week the students at the Pestalozzi School meet to discuss current events under the guidance of an instructor. Several of the youngsters are assigned to the study of a particular topic. Books as well as newspapers are used as research sources. Whenever possible, German and foreign guest speakers are invited to participate in these debates.

Recently some of the young people of the town asked Alzey students whether they could participate in the discussion of some of the important "social problems." The matter was brought to the attention of Dr. Mayer, and regular school-community get-togethers have been part of the program ever since.

Even though facilities are still not ideal, Dr. Mayer has begun to furnish laboratories and workshops. There are weekly sports periods, and the students have formed teams which compete with other schools. "We must see to it that our teachers don't turn into bookworms," said the revolutionary director.

Pupils Edit Paper

SINCE the school cannot afford technical equipment at this time, the students are editing a wall newspaper. The week's editorial, written by the 14-year-old freshmen, was: "Why should the upper-classmen have a greater voice in running the school?" In a few well-illustrated paragraphs it was pointed out that greater experience should entitle to additional rights while, at the same time, imposing a heavier burden of responsibility.

Mme. Giron, codirector of education for the French zone, promised Dr. Mayer a mimeograph machine and other equipment to facilitate a school paper. But the principal rejected the offer, explaining that it was better for the youngsters to work with primitive tools. Mme. Giron gracefully accepted the educator's voice of experience and thereby gave a clear illustration of dictatorial French practices in German schools.

Ten U. S. Leaders Will Give Lectures for Foreign Students

TEN OUTSTANDING Americans, each representing a distinctive phase of culture in the United States, will give a series of lectures for foreign students attending colleges in the New York area and for members of the United Nations Secretariat, it was announced by Dr. Frank D. Fackenthal. Dr. Fackenthal, former acting president of Columbia University, is now president of the Greater New York Council for Foreign Students, 500 Riverside dr., New York.

The series is being presented with the cooperation of International House, Columbia University and the United Nations.

The lectures, under the general title of the "Living America Series," will be held at International House, 500 Riverside dr., at 5:45 p. m. Next lecture will be held January 23. Speakers include Bernard DeVoto, author; Senator Estes Kefauver, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, theologian, and Dr. Philip C. Jessup, United States delegate to the United Nations.

"The series," Dr. Fackenthal said, "is planned for the purpose of bringing to the foreign students and the United Nations group interesting, informative background on American life to enable them to understand and become acquainted with our Nation. The speakers will explain our literature, music and religion, and the points of view of labor, industry and the Midwest farmer, as well as the regional outlooks of the Far West and the South.

"We want our visitors," he continued, "to see a farmer, to hear a Southern accent, to hear our folk music, to learn how representatives from labor and big business talk and think. It is not in any sense a propaganda effort. We want a totally honest picture of the United States to emerge.

"To people from abroad, the United States is a vast country which often appears more simple than it is. Too few of its own citizens fully understand it. When foreign students and the United Nations people return to their own countries, their homelands will look to them for an understanding of America."

The other new courses, also beginning in February, are "Fundamentals of Gaseous Electronics," "Polymer Chemistry" and "Systems and Procedures."

Whistle Stopping

Inaugural Alerts Airline Industry

By Orval Hopkins

MAKING certain not to be caught with their flaps (permit me to employ this hoary jest) down, the aviation industry has alerted all hands, thumped on the desk, laid out flow-charts and generally taken in hand the problem of how to get to Washington all the people who want to get here for the Big Thing this week.

The air transportation committee, representing the aviation industry, says the number of persons flying to Washington for the Inaugural will break all previous records. And I didn't know anybody even kept records. Linus C. Glotzbach, chairman of the committee and vice president of Northwest Airlines, said that among the hard questions for which answers had to be found were these: Arrangement of special flights carrying regional or local groups, how many; points of origin, what are their; parties, size of; and from Washington, their departure.

Glotzbach said the airline people, who apparently didn't need to be alerted at all, also have asked their traffic and sales departments to be on their toes about the possibilities of promoting air travel and fostering good will for the airlines which are "offered by the huge movement of persons to the Capital for the swearing in of a new President."

SIR ALEXANDER MAXWELL, chairman of the British Tourist and Holidays Board, said here the other day that the "resurgence of the tourist industry is emerging as one of the brightest spots in western Europe's battle for economic recovery." Sir Alexander was in town for a luncheon at the Mayflower and was being closely watched by Donald N. Martin, an indefatigable young public relations counsellor from New York and Campbell, Calif. Martin, who once lived aboard a Navy minesweep, is with Irwin Robinson and Austin Fisher Associates, as I understand it, though I can't vouch for the protocol here. Sir Alexander was but adding his voice to that of Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, who a few days before said succintly in New York: "We have something to offer visitors."

IN THE BAHAMAS, 14 Georgian style houses, each accommodating six persons, are ready for occupancy at Sir Oliver Simmonds' (the peerage has certainly wormed its way into this today) new Balmoral development on Cable Beach, 5 miles from Nassau. A swimming pool, clubhouse, shops and apartment hotel are to be built to complete the colony . . . Work has been started on William E. Butlin's new resort village at West End, Grand Bahama Island. Eventually it will accommodate 2000 guests.

KLM ROYAL DUTCH Airlines now is including Barcelona, Venezuela, in its West Indies division network. Direct connections from Miami to Barcelona, via Havana and Aruba, will be provided on night service departing from Miami at 2300 (ah, the War) on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

THE CARONIA'S maiden voyage was not the first Caronia crossing for two of the ranking officers on the new Cunard White Star ship. Capt. Donald W. Sorrell and Staff Capt. William Butler Tanner both served as deck officers aboard the first Caronia, which cruised the Atlantic and Caribbean lanes from 1904 until 1932. "In contrast to past decades, however," says Cunard, looking down its nose a little, "the two veteran officers are today aboard a luxury liner boasting radical advances in marine design even by 1949 standards." I happen to know a guy who sailed on the old Caronia. He says she was a steady ship and a good sleeper and that everybody loved her.

THE FIRST POSTWAR CRUISE of the French Liner De Grasse comes off early in February, when the ship will undertake two 13-day trips to the Caribbean. Under charter to Simmons Tours, the vessel will sail February 5 and 19, making stops at San Juan, La Guaira, Curacao and Jamaica.

Williamsburg Revives History With Realism

By Hoyt McAfee

There should be a special spot in your travel plans for Williamsburg, Va., since it reflects the true atmosphere and spirit of Colonial days. Thus its restored taverns, gardens, walkways, historic houses, the pillory, the jail, the peruke-maker's place, and the Governor's palace take your thoughts back to Williamsburg's period of greatest glory: from 1750 to 1760.

Most interesting of all, however, is the fact that Williamsburg's 200-odd employes do their tours of duty dressed in the authentic costumes of the 1750-1760 period. Each visitor is greeted by pewterers, jail keepers, and wigmakers and escorted about the grounds, gardens, and through the various buildings.

No usher or hostess goes without an appropriate costume. As for the men, they strut their stuff in three-cornered hats, waistcoats, and knee breeches. Their shoes have attached tongues and buckles, to add a touch of realism.

Equally authentic are the costumes worn by Williamsburg women hostesses. They remove their everyday rouge and fingernail polish and then change into outfits which were popular in pre-revolutionary Williamsburg. These outfits consist of: long-waisted dresses, snug-fitting bodices, appropriate caps, and pleated skirts which spill in graceful folds over side-hoops.

If you're intrigued by dresses that billow and skirts that puff out, the explanation is that farthingales are used to achieve these effects. When a hostess passes through a doorway, she lifts her hoop. It's at that moment that she looks her prettiest and most appealing.

Old prints and portraits serve as the pattern for the creation of all Williamsburg costumes. Authenticity of detail is important to all the dress makers and costume designers. Old cedar chests are the guideposts to fashion in present-day Williamsburg.

And yet, much of the material for the costumes is purchased in New York. A well-informed representative of the Williamsburg project does the buying. He makes sure that the woolens and taffeta contain material identical to that used in colonial times.

Most Williamsburg employes enjoy wearing their Colonial garb better than their everyday clothing. It's an uplifting moment each day when they switch from the drab present to the romantic and colorful past. It's a source of gratification to them that their costumes have eye-catching appeal and lend them an air of distinction.

No one wears wrist watches. All the girls give their hair the upsweeping effect, as was the custom from 1750 to 1760. In those days a girl's hairdo wound up and around her lace cap.

Each costume is treated with scrupulous care and attention. It's always scrubbed and washed by hand. This work is done in the restoration laundry, which, incidentally, is one of the sights you take in on a tour of Williamsburg.

Other picturesque sights entice the visitors. For example, the tavern, the pillory and jail, and the peruke-maker's place. Everywhere you look you note that the furniture and costumes are authentic. For the sake of realism, the peruke-maker does his "work" while dressed in a powdered wig. At the pillory, Williamsburg employes demonstrate how victims were punished in early colonial times.

You inspect two other places of interest: the Governor's palace and the lovely ancestral Tucker House. It's a delight to stroll about the gardens of the Tucker House. In doing so you glimpse the foundations of the first theater in North America.

On or about March 15, the ushers and hostesses at Williamsburg don summer attire. On October 15, they revert to thicker winter costume garb.

All the employes—or "guides"—at Williamsburg are natives of the town. They think that they have a pleasant way to make a living and to be of service to the public. Aside from that, they profit from their talks with visitors from every State in the Union and from foreign lands.

As for entertainment, the Saturday night concerts, held in the Williamsburg palace ballroom, enjoy great popularity. They have the festive touch. The men dress for the occasion in their gayest regalia. But it's the ladies-in-waiting who provide the crowning touch in their quilted silk gowns. Their attire is remindful of that worn by the women in George Washington's early youth.

So, with all these inducements, Williamsburg hopes that you, a visitor, will let your thoughts drift back to the most colorful period it has ever known.

This Police Chief Has A Happy Life

By Aline Mosby

PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Jan. 15. (U.P.).—Today's ray of sunshine concerns the happy life of the police chief of Palm Springs.

Chief Gus Kettmann hobnobs with movie stars who winter at this desert cash register, beats them at tennis, appears on their radio shows and rushes off to Hollywood to be a house guest of Jack Warner, Hal Roach, and other movie moguls.

He also keeps Palm Springs crime under control. This includes hauling drunk celebrities back to their $45-a-day bungalows ("I don't like to lock them up") or pulling some luminary out of a swimming pool that didn't have any water in it.

Never a Uniform

GUS is broad-shouldered, young and handsome, and he carrise out his duties in well-tailored slacks, soft sport shirt and tweed sport jacket.

"I never wear a uniform," he explains. "If I walked into a club in uniform, it would disturb the complacency of the guests."

Kettmann is sympathetic with the tourist business. He runs a small bungalow resort on the side himself.

Last year Chief Kettmann was runnerup in the Palm Springs tennis tournament. This talent has made him honorary member of both the Racquet Club and Tennis Club, lolling-grounds of movie stars.

"I play tennis with Paul and Charlie and Mousy and Errol," says the chief, meaning Paul Lukas, Charlie Farrell, Mrs. William Powell and Errol Flynn.

He also chums around with Clark Gable. And when he celebrated his fourth year as police chief, pals Frank Sinatra and Jimmy Van Heusen, the songwriter, flew down from Hollywood to entertain. Chief Kettmann was on a Jack Benny program when the cast did a skit about "Murder at the Racquet Club." Benny called Kettmann's bailiwick "The Palm Springs police dept. and date shop." Bob Hope tosses around wisecracks about the chief on his show, too.

Lady Charleston Goes After Trade

By Bem Price

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 15 (AP).—The grand old lady by the sea, the one-time queen of the Atlantic, is courting again.

The old girl began to get restless right after World War II.

She saw the hustle and bustle of the war years dying away again as it did after the first World War.

And she was no longer content to return to the quiet that settled over the port after the Civil War, which ruined her commerce and made her a strictly second-rate competitor.

So, in 1945, the Charleston Development Board was formed by 16 businessmen, each of whom put up $10,000.

The money was there; how to use it?

The Government put up the Starke Hospital and its grounds for sale, and what happened since sent the old girl's blood pressure chart climbing at a 45-degree angle.

Using the years 1940-45 as a norm, the line on the chart is straight across, but beginning in 1945 it started climbing on the boosts provided by the convergence of 68 new industries making 37 new products.

The South Carolina State Ports Authority also went to work improving harbor facilities, rail and truck connections and generally making it easier to do business in Charleston than any other Southern port on the Atlantic.

Charleston's population climbed from 98,711 in 1940 to an estimated 145,000 in 1948.

Called in Field

BUT back to that Starke Hospital.

The 16 businessmen called in Arthur M. Field, native of Seattle and engineer graduate of Cornell University.

Field cut the hospital up into small plant areas, he hunted up skilled men and $500,000 in risk capital, and then set about hunting business to start or move to Charleston.

Now the one-time hospital is an industrial park in which 1500 men work.

Since more than half of South Carolina is covered by timber, Field's first move was to utilize that vast resource. He obtained a furniture plant which now employs 400 of the 1500 total alone.

Then Field undertook to sell the products of his new industries. He met with 40 representatives of chain stores, told them what Charleston had to sell, and many bought.

In the park are makers of rubber gloves, insecticides, optical products, dog food, plywood, paper boxes, fishing tackle, fancy candies, tool handles, canned sea food, Venetian blinds, burlap bags, frozen foods, shirts, trousers, pipe organs, and so on down a long list.

Also the Port

BUT while Field and the development board were working mightily, so was the port authority.

Last year the port handled 5,300,000 tons of cargo, more than twice prewar volume.

The authority took over operation of all public shipping facilities—two million dollars worth of docks, warehouses and office buildings.

Out of the war the authority inherited from the Government a 35-foot channel, a 40-foot wide quay-type dock and a million square feet of concrete-floored, sprinkler-protected warehouse space.

So brisk has been Charleston's business that more than a dozen steamship lines have inaugurated service there since 1946, carrying textiles, lumber, tobacco, cotton, coal, pulpwood, rayon fiber, Philippine hardwoods and oil.

In seven years, from 1940 to 1947, Charleston bank deposits jumped from $83,796,000 to $251,533,541, postal receipts doubled, the value of manufactured goods leaped from $31,758,000 to $81,999,000, the number of registered automobiles increased from 18,087 to 24,275.

Bus passenger revenue climbed from $5,862,327 to $24,944,925, which means Charleston is really moving around.

Who had the original idea for making Charleston into the number one south Atlantic port?

He was Daniel Ravenel, president of the Ravenel Travel Agency. He made the proposal to the local chamber of commerce. They snapped it up.

Guests to Receive Own Stationery

Guests of a week or more at the Fort Montagu Beach Hotel in Nassau this winter will be presented with personal stationery imprinted with their names and home address, according to John L. Cota, manager.

Agents throughout the country making reservations for their clients in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Toronto and Miami have been asked to supply in advance the correct home address desired by a potential Nassau visitor to allow for printing of the stationery before the date of arrival.

Big Round-Up Time Acomin' for Florida

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The biggest cattle round-up east of the Mississippi may be conducted by Florida motorists if a law proposed by Governor-Elect Fuller Warren is put on the books.

Since the Seminoles gave way before the white man, the major problem for Florida sunshine hunters has been cows. Thousands of 'em.

The creatures are standing on, crossing or about to cross the highways of all but 25 of the State's 67 counties.

The sober facts read that in one year, 1947, accidents attributable to livestock on the highways totaled 454, resulting in 67 injuries and 16 deaths.

Warren proposes to end this by making the counties fence in all their cattle ranges or by making the ranchers do it themselves.

But the clause that will appeal to the tourist provides a happy means of revenge for man against cows and/or cattlemen.

Under the proposed law any driver who sees a cow in his path can stop and capture it. The motorist would be required to feed the cow twice a day and turn it over to county officials within three days.

But he could claim expense money for transportation and care of the cow from the owner.

Sheriffs also would be empowered to impound roaming cattle and there are as many Floridians as tourists, many of them ranchers themselves, who use highways.

The law is expected to be introduced and passed quickly in both Houses of the Legislature. The measure provides a county option, whereby counties can force the owners to fence in their own cattle or vote to do the fencing themselves.

Route Well Mapped

Inland Waterway Is Auto Attraction

By Daniel S. Slawson

Editor, Inland Waterway Guide

Even without a boat, it is possible to enjoy the Inland Waterway. How? Simply by driving to one of the many places where a road spans this great artery of water-borne traffic. There's a bridge, on the average, every 10 or 12 miles all the way from Norfolk to Miami, a distance of about 1000 miles.

It is even better to visit some of the tie-ups, starting, lets say, at Chesapeake City or any of the ports on the east or west shore of the bay. There are marinas at almost every town or city all along the waterway from Norfolk on down.

Road maps generally show the Inland Waterway route. The leading oil companies have a marina service with charts as well as road information. Armed with this help and an exploring urge to leave the rather monotonous main highway in favor of side trips seaward, a motorist can find all sorts of interesting places. But don't count on bridge signs to tell you when you are crossing the waterway. Although other bridges usually announce the names of whatever streams they span, for some reason the waterway is almost never labeled.

There are few people who have ever been on, or even seen, a boat, who don't cherish the dream of some day cruising South by the inland route. If you are one of those dreamers, why not have a look now to see what it is that fascinates so many yachtsmen? The chances are you'll discover at least part of the allure that annually causes thousands of pleasure craft to go South all fall and winter and to return North on the heels of spring.

Route Is Various

THE route is not a continuous body of water, as many picture it. It is a loose conglomeration of rivers, sounds, bays, cuts and canals. The water itself varies from salt to fresh, and in color from clear to a silted cafe-au-lait or a cypress-tinged cola tint. It runs in every direction through many different kinds of country. There are great forests and flat lonely dune country, busy harbors, islands and tiny settlements.

Officially the route starts at Trenton, N. J., turns off from the wide Delaware into the 10-million-dollar canal that connects with the head of the Chesapeake. Actually, most of the yachts came down outside from New York to the Cape May Canal into the mouth of the Delaware and thence to the canal. At the foot of Chesapeake Bay there are alternate routes from Norfolk, through the Dismal Swamp or through the Virginia Cut, a little to the East. Both are worth visiting, if only to see the locks in operation, the only ones on the route.

But what can one see from a bridge or the shore? Well, at any time of year there is the commerce, part of the more than four million tons that are carried annually on the waterway. The war gave a great impetus to inland freighting with the submarines prowling offshore. You may see a huge barge riding lightly despite the hundreds of new automobiles it is taking to Jacksonville, a string of barges carrying pulp wood to hungry Kraft paper mills, smaller ones loaded with gum logs for furniture and baskets, oil barges, others carrying oysters or shell.

Then there are the fishing boats—shrimpers, the sharp-prowed sailing bugeyes or skipjacks that still transport oysters and crabs, and hollowed-out log canoes.

Old Towns to See

IN SOME ways the motorist has an advantage over the yachtsman. It is easier for him to examine old towns like Annapolis, Williamsburg, the less well-known but more endearing Gloucester, and all the other historic spots on or near the Chesapeake. He can more easily make side trips to places like the Banks of North Carolina, site of the Lost Colony and of the Wright Brothers' first flight, and now the home of isolated fishermen who retain some of the speech of their Devon ancestors. There on the dunes that rim the sea you may glimpse the wild ponies and cattle that thrive despite bleak winds.

Las Vegas, Nev.—Man-made Lake Mead, reaching from Boulder Dam 115 miles to the Grand Canyon, is a water skier's paradise. From the face of the dam to the big gorge of the Colorado are 500 miles of quiet inlets surmounted by purple basalt peaks

Once Oglethorpe's Home

Jekyll Island, now the scene of a celebrated Georgia State Park, was named for Sir Joseph Jekyll, one of the sponsors of the colony of Georgia. General James Oglethorpe, founder of Georgia, made his home at Jekyll for several years and built a barracks there in 1739 which still stands.

ATLANTIC COAST LINE RAILROAD

"the only DOUBLE TRACK ROUTE BETWEEN THE EAST AND FLORIDA"

Virginia Beach to Nags Head

Road to Pierce Coastal Moor

By Bill Sharpe

COROLLA, N. C., Jan. 15.—One of America's most varied oceanic wildernesses will be available to the traveler within a year or so when plans of a group of North Carolina and Virginia capitalists come to fruition. A toll road, to be laid down narrow Currituck Beach for 57 miles, will connect Virginia Beach with Nags Head, and will open up a sportsman's paradise, give a new and easier access into a land of romance, mystery and recreation.

Travelers following the north-south route will have a new speedy and fascinating route, one which for nearly 60 miles will be devoid of towns, stop-lights or intersections, with a tumultuous ocean beach on the east and Currituck Sound on the west.

The new highway will start at the southern end of Virginia Beach, connecting with U. S. 158 just north of Nags Head. From here, the traveler will have the option of turning west on U. S. 158, joining U. S. 17 at Elizabeth City. Or he may follow U. S. 158 south to Nags Head, Kill Devil Hill, and history-drenched Roanoke Island, thence by free ferry to the wildnerness area of Dare County, and so to Lake Mattamuskeet (via U. S. 264) and on to U. S. 17 at Washington, N. C.

Seaside Highway

THE FIRST part of this new seaside highway (and it will be just that) will take tourists quickly from the populous Norfolk area into one of the finest game sections of the South. Currituck Sound, fresh water, is considered the best duck-hunting area on the Atlantic flyway, and the fishing for large-mouth bass is almost as equally well known (the word comes from Coratank, Indian for wild geese). Heretofore, however, the access has been from the mainland side.

Only two small villages—Corolla and Duck—lie on the route, and the road likely will skirt both.

The only other habitations are Coast Guard stations. The beach usually is wide, flat and firm; the surf somewhat turbulent since the coast is so exposed. Wildlife—especially bird-life—abounds. All the familiar shore-birds are present; in winter, a jeep following the beach, or the sandy soundside, provokes geese and ducks into reluctant and complaining flight. The rare American bald eagles—the ones you see on your money—are numerous. Once they built nests across the telephone wires of the Coast Guard, and an eagle patrol was established to tear them down. They are still numerous, easily seen at close range. Foster Ambrose, caretaker of the Whaleshead lodge here, trapped 600 muskrats this season, and gets many gray foxes, an occasional mink and even an otter.

Beach Narrows

The beach narrows to a few feet in some places; toward Duck, at the southern terminus, it spreads out into a magnificent forest of water oaks, bays, pines, holly, yaupon, dogwood and other species. It is a beach-land which still affords, to a gratifying degree, a picture of the first land which explorers saw over 350 years ago when they sailed this coast and entered the inlets.

But it is not without human interest. Here is 163-foot Currituck Light (locally called Whaleshead, after the barchane nearby). In 1878 the Metropolis came ashore 3 miles south of the light, with a loss of more than 100 lives—one of the most sensational sea disasters of the last century. Passengers were looted by local ruffians.

North of Corolla lies Washwoods, where the forest once extended right down to the surf. The battered tree stumps, survivals of a once great forest, now stand out to sea at high tide, spray-splashed evidence of the conflict of the elements and that geography still is a dynamic subject in this area.

Southward, the route includes Fort Raleigh with its summertime Lost Colony, site of the Wrights' first flight and Fessenden's first wireless experiments.

Sportsmen will encounter big-game territory at Manns Harbor, Stumpy Point and Englehard—an area overrun with bear, deer and by waterfowl, squirrel and other game, climaxed by the famous federally sponsored Lake Mattamuskeet, favorite winter feeding ground of the Canadian honkers.

It is estimated that a minimum of a million persons a year will traverse the road. And that would be a mess of comers-an'-goers when compared with Currituck County's population (including the mainland) of 6709 persons.

Yes, You Can Still Drive Along Daytona's Beach

ONE of the few beaches in the world where you may drive your automobile at the edge of the surf is at Daytona Beach, Fla. You may cruise for 23 miles down its hard-packed surface, as smooth as any super highway and 500 feet wide at low tide.

Rentable beach vehicles, such as the sand sailer, 3-wheeled tricycle affairs with sails, beach buggies, scooters, motorettes, cub cars and surf boards add to the fun.

Or sightseeing tours down the beach via miniature, streamlined trains or 20-minute ocean voyages aboard amphibious ducks are also available.

Deep-sea fishing craft make daily pilgrimages out into the ocean. They return laden with sea bass, red snapper, king mackerel, dolphin and barracuda, and often bring in sailfish or tarpon, the gamest fighters in the ocean.

River docks and bridges yield ample catches of trout, snook, chobie, flounder, crevalle, mangrove snapper, sheepshead, bluefish, channel bass and whiting.

The annual city-sponsored fishing tournament offers valuable prizes in 26 different categories of fish, with a $500 prize going to the entrant making the outstanding catch of the season.

Adjoining the beach is one of the longest boardwalks south of Atlantic City. At the foot of the boardwalk is the open-air bandshell and the lofty, coquina rock clock-tower, a landmark to tourists.

THE COLORADO mountain region boasts quietly of places like Aspen, where the world's longest chair lift carries skiers to the sundeck atop Mount Ajax. Improved facilities have been provided for beginners and experts, and a new ski school has been opened. The Broadmoor at Colorado Springs offers guests skiing facilities on nearby Pikes Peak as well as skating in its famous Ice Palace. Steamboat Springs, at the foot of lofty Rabbit Ears pass, is one of the West's best-known ski spots. The Denver region offers attractions to skiers at Winter Park, where there are comfortable accommodations and ski tows designed for novices as well as experts.

Johnsen Is Chef at Miami Beach

The new Sherry-Frontenac Hotel in Miami Beach has announced that Chef Edmond Johnsen has been placed in charge of its dining facilities. For many years associated with the Raleigh and Willard Hotels, Johnsen is a member of the culinary society Les Amis d'Escoffier and is the secretary of the Epicurean Club.

City of Light Solves Illumination Problem

By Stephen White

Paris.—The Pont du Carrousel crosses the Seine and leads directly into the Louvre. It did not always do exactly that. Before the war the Pont du Carrousel was a few dozen feet down river and not quite square with the Louvre. But when the growing demands of automobile traffic made it necessary to widen the bridge, the powers-that-be decided that it would look better if it were placed a little more judiciously in respect to the Louvre, and it was rebuilt.

This makes a most attractive design. From the left bank, it forms a broad avenue leading harmoniously through the square on the river side of the Louvre and directly into the gardens. From the Pont Royal, it sets off quite nicely the Ile de la Cite, with the towers of Notre Dame in the background. Upstream, from the Pont des Arts, it is no less handsome; the Grand Palais looms behind it and the Eiffel Tower rises in the distance. All in all, a most handsome bridge.

It was the very fact that the bridge was so handsome that created a problem. If it had been an ugly bridge, there would have been no difficulty. But beauty involves certain responsibilities, to which Paris is always alive.

For bridges, it goes without saying, must be lighted. Normally in Paris as anywhere else, they are lighted by erecting street lamps along their length.

This, no doubt, is no more than fitting for a common bridge. But street lights on the Pont du Carrousel seemed almost an indignity. They would have meant that the Ile de la Cite would be viewed, from downstream, through a picket fence of lampposts, and from upstream, the long dominating lines of the Grand Palais would be chopped by the verticals of the posts.

The alternative immediately offered itself; lights on either side of the bridge at both its ends. Yet this solution, too, had its flaws. The Seine is decently wide. To light it from the ends would mean powerful installations. Set low, they would blind the motorist crossing the bridge. Set high—but this prospective indignity demands a paragraph of its own.

Set high enough to fulfill their functions, the lights would be yards higher than the Louvre. That would mean that the view from the left bank would be destroyed. The broad avenue would no longer bring out the beauty of the Louvre—the posts would dominate the lines of the palace, cheapen it, hack away its harmony. Paris will not contemplate such treatment of the Louvre.

Yet the bridge had to be lighted. There was a series of conferences among the department of bridges, the department of lighting, the department of fine arts, the committee on aesthetics for the city of Paris, the committee on the Louvre, the union of architects, the union of lighting engineers—about 30 men in all.

Plans were made and work was begun. Then war came and the plans were set aside. The copper that had been machined, the bronze that had been cast and the machinery that had been built were hidden carefully. Throughout the occupation they escaped the attention of the Germans, who had a certain affection for copper, bronze and machinery.

As the war ended the plans were dusted off, the material withdrawn from hiding, and the work resumed.

The result is that today the Pont du Carrousel is bare of lampposts, and the Grand Palais and the Ile de la Cite are undefiled. At the ends of the bridge are four lampposts, discreetly low, so that they blend into the masonry of the Louvre. The columns that make up the lampposts, 40 feet high, are fluted to harmonize with the columns of the Louvre, and the lamps themselves imitate, without being slavish copies, the towers of the Louvre.

And when night falls, a five horsepower motor in the base of each post goes into action; noiselessly, the lampposts lengthen. In a minute or two they have gained 20 feet in height, and when the lights go on, the entire bridge is illuminated without glare. At dawn the motors whirl again and the posts quietly shrink.

It is true that these telescopic lampposts were rather expensive to build and that the four motors use almost as much current each night as the lights themselves. On the other hand, Paris has managed to have, all at the same time, the bridge, the illumination and the beauty.

Word 'Luxury' Is Out

LISTENING in on the discussion at the recent convention of the National Association of Travel Officials at Miami Beach, one promptly detected that this abused term of "luxury" was not in the agenda. It was not deliberately omitted in the deliberations; probably it was just eliminated because the representatives of all regions spoke about tours and places which provided pleasure and enlightenment on reasonable terms, without those gold trimmings that only a select few would want as prerequisite to their manner of life.

There is a relationship between cigars and travel. Both have been referred to as luxuries, yet are quite the opposite. Perfumes, like the handbags with their excise tax, to women are actually necessities. Cigars and tobacco to men are undeniably necessities. Tobacco rates right behind food, shelter, and clothing in the family budget. Travel is a necessity for the joy of living.

"When you stop learning, you stop living" is a quotation widely used. The word visiting might be substituted for learning and the meaning is the same. The urge to see other places and meet new friends has been growing, as more conveniences in transportation are available.

From the larger viewpoint, the Nation's progress depends on unity and cooperation within its borders and beyond them; to marked degree that objective is attained as folks get to know each other. Travel means cheerful and profitable social and cultural intercourse among peoples, if high politics and ideological rivalries could be chastened.

Indeed, travel is vital to a thoroughly rounded education, as well as relaxing, akin to the cigar.

Sees Good Travel Outlook

NEW YORK, Jan 15.—A greater variety of vacation offerings than at any time since the war, coupled with a general leveling off of prices, promise to make 1949 the biggest American travel year in history, Newell Grinnell, president, American Society of Travel Agents, declared as he sailed aboard the Mauretania for the Bahamas.

"We have just completed a Nation-wide survey of travel agents, transportation companies, hotel and resort operators," Grinnell said. "The industry is optimistic about the outlook for this year, despite reports of consumer price resistance. There is general recognition of the need for a more realistic appraisal of the values being offered, and all branches of the industry are determined to offer services that match the buying ability of the average American vacation seeker.

"For the first time this year we are approaching a more even balance between travel supply and demand. This can only mean more spirited competition within the travel industry itself, and between travel merchants and other lines of business reaching out for consumer dollars.

"Whenever this occurs it is the consumer who reaps the benefit of the rivalry for his dollars."

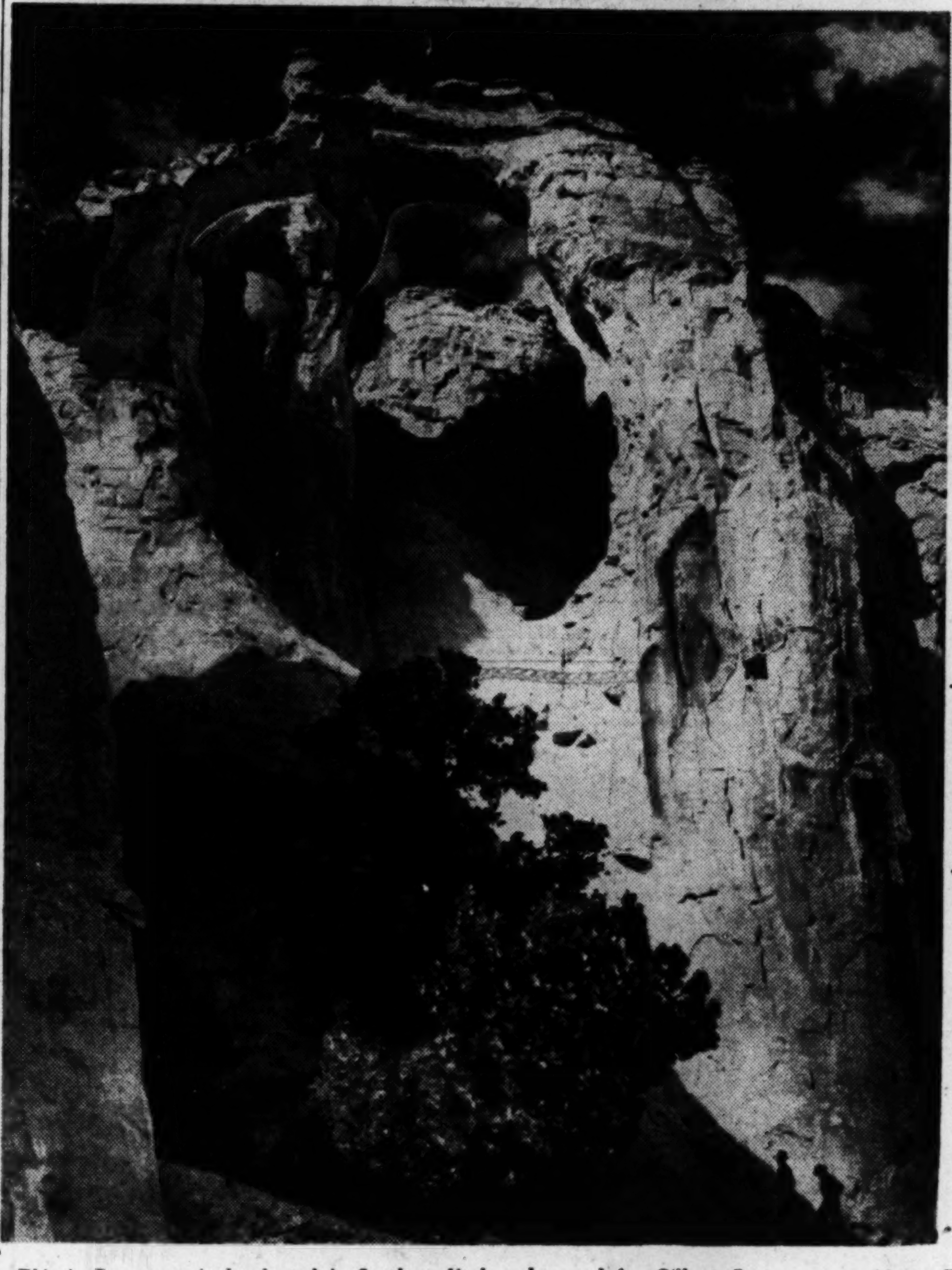
Giant Natural Arch Charted in Utah



This is Grosvenor Arch, charted in Southern Utah and named for Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society

A LARGE and previously uncharted natural arch of white sandstone in the hills of southern Utah has been lifted from the obscurity of centuries and put on the map as Grosvenor Arch.

The magnificent formation is a double arch worn by wind, sand, and water in the side of a massive ridge that forms part of the north boundary of a grazing land known only to a handful of local cowmen as the Butler Valley.

Located in upper Wahweep country, it is 40 air miles east of the southern tip of Bryce Canyon National Park and about the same distance northwest of Rainbow Bridge, best known of natural arches in the American Southwest.

Jack Breed, Harvard-trained naturalist and scion of the Boston, Mass., family that gave its name to historic Breeds Hill, came upon the striking work of Nature in leading his Escalante Expedition eastward from Bryce Canyon late last summer. Carefully photographing it and determining its exact position, he named it in honor of Gilbert Grosvenor, long-time president of the National Geographic Society.

Gleaming white in the morning sun, Grosvenor Arch thrusts eastward from its ridge and towers above nearby trees to 152 feet above the valley floor. The underside of the main arch is 139 feet high, but the opening is worn only part of the way down, being 40 feet wide and 73 feet high. The second opening, just big enough to create the double arch effect, is close to the top, and is 6 feet high and 4 feet wide.

Breed takes the view that, since the previously unnamed erosion formation was known to at least a few of the men who ride the wide neighboring ranges of sparse grassland, Grosvenor Arch cannot be termed a discovery in a strict sense. He first learned of it from a cowman who had never seen it, although born and raised only 35 miles away.

Such men and their families compose most of the population of such towns as Cannonville and Henrieville, Utah, jumping off places for a 30-mile pack trip to the newly charted arch. The nearest ranch house is almost as far from the arch as these towns.

The Grosvenor Arch, Breed maintains, has been until now the least known of all the true arches in southern Utah. He found it possible, however, to drive a jeep over the rugged rangeland to its base.

Breed's home is in Marblehead, Mass.

4 Roads Cross Mississippi to New Orleans

TRAVELERS looking for variety in a Southern vacation might look toward Mississippi and New Orleans.

Four U. S. highways, entering the State from the north and east, lead the motorist through Mississippi to the carnival city.

U. S. 61 follows the Mississippi from Memphis, through the heart of the Delta country to Vicksburg, siege city of the Civil War, to Natchez on the bluffs and into New Orleans.

Natchez, the South's famous pilgrimage city, will hold its annual home and garden tours from March 5 to April 3 this year.

U. S. 51 is a more direct route from Memphis, passing the huge Sardis Dam in north Mississippi and going straight southward to Jackson, hub of six mainline highways, and into New Orleans.

U. S. 45 from Jackson, Tenn., enters the northeastern corner of Mississippi at Corinth, heading southward through Tupelo, Columbus, one of the oldest Mississippi towns, and into Meridian. Here the traveler may switch to U. S. Highway 11, which takes him to Hattiesburg and south through the tung tree belt into New Orleans.

U. S. 90, the Old Spanish Trail, traverses a scenic section of the Gulf of Mexico and connects Mobile and Mississippi cities with New Orleans.

Williamsburg All Set for Antiques Forum

THE Antiques and Decorations Forum will be held in Williamsburg, Va., late in January. Scheduled in two one-week sessions beginning January 24 and January 31, the forum is being jointly sponsored by the magazine Antiques and Colonial Williamsburg, the organization carrying forward the restoration of Williamsburg.

Registrations also are beginning to come in for another outstanding event in Williamsburg—the third annual Colonial Williamsburg Garden and Flower Symposium. The symposium, with many noted authorities scheduled on the program, will be held from February 28 through March 4.

Although visitors to Williamsburg usually anticipate touring only a dozen or so colonial buildings in the city, actually there are upward of 50 structures open to the public in the mile-long restored area of the city. The illusion partly comes from the fact that each of the six exhibition buildings of the city has a number of outbuildings in typical eighteenth century style and there are several old colonial craft shops, historic buildings and points of interest scattered throughout the colonial area of the city which looks today much as it did two centuries ago.

Williamsburg, while colonial in spirit and appearance, is well served by modern transportation services. The old city now restored to the way it looked in the 1700's is served by two national transportation systems, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and Greyhound Bus Lines. Five national airlines provide convenient connections at nearby Richmond and steamship service is provided at Old Point Comfort, just 30 miles distant, and at Norfolk.

Convenient for the north-south traveler, Williamsburg is close by the major routes south. United States Route 17 passes through Yorktown and connects with Williamsburg over the beautiful Colonial parkway. The coastal route 301 and United States 1 to Florida converge at Richmond from which Williamsburg can be reached by a short 50-mile drive over the new dual-highway Route 60.

AAA To Open In Brownsville

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Jan. 15. A travel information and service center for motorists bound for Mexico on the Pan American hwy. is being opened in Brownsville this month by the American Automobile Association.

Facilities at the new center will include maps and highway information, hotel reservation service, Mexican money exchange, issuance of Mexican automobile insurance and reports on highway conditions throughout Mexico and Central America.

The AAA announced it was opening the new office because of increasing motor travel to Mexico, and especially along the Brownsville-Ciudad Victoria route.

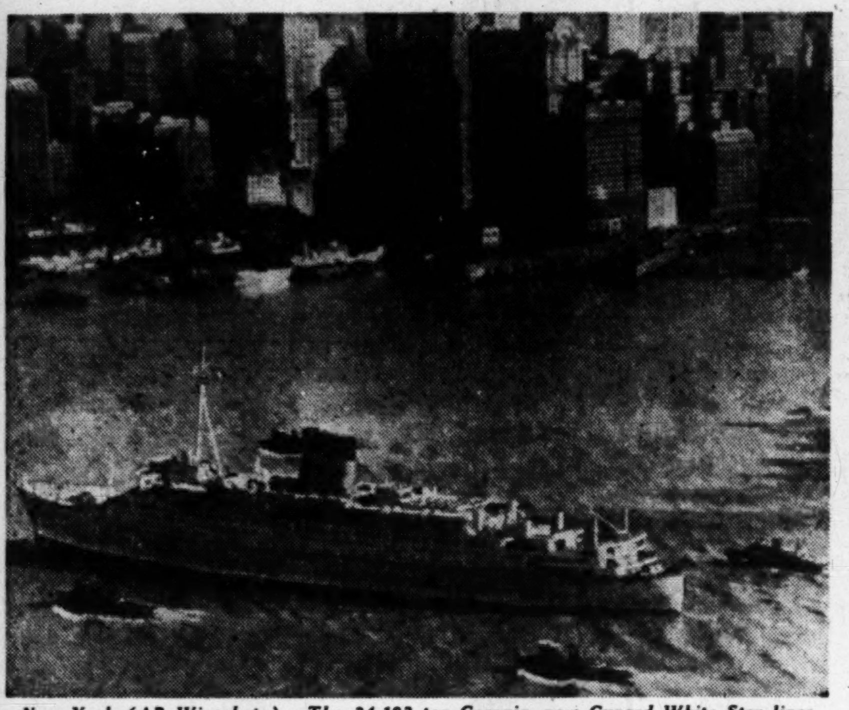
No Waiting for Space

You Can Cruise, but It'll Cost



New York (AP Wirephoto).—The 34,183-ton Caronia, new Cunard White Star liner, moves past the buildings of lower Manhattan as she arrives on her maiden voyage from Southampton and Cherbourg. The 715-foot vessel, largest passenger ship built in the postwar period, cost 20 million dollars and is intended for transatlantic and cruise service. She can handle 932 passengers

By John A. Moroso

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP).—You don't have to get on a waiting list anymore if you want to take that winter cruise to balmy southern waters—but the trip will cost you a fancy price.

There is plenty of space on the transatlantic vessels that go to the West Indies and South America. Rates range from $30 to $100 a day, more than double prewar prices.

Shipping folk and travel agents say bookings for this winter season are below last year because of high rates, induced by increased operational costs, and because of the mild winter. Bookings soar when a heavy snowstorm or zero cold comes along.

Another factor is that more ships have entered the trade, including the new 34,000-ton British liner Caronia, largest merchant ship built since the war.

People Holding Off

FRANK PHILGUS, travel agent, says business "is not generally bad but the increase in prices has caused people to hesitate."

"The general restriction in speaking money has begun to show itself very markedly in pleasure travel," he said.

A. L. Simmons, president of Simmons Tours, said operation costs, which include wages, supplies, fuel and dockage, have quadrupled the prewar figure on the cost of running a ship.

Simmons has chartered the French Liner De Grasse for a series of 13-day cruises to San Juan, La Guaira, Kingston and Curacao. When reservations dropped below normal, he reduced some rates 25 per cent, which cut his income $25,000 per voyage. Business immediately picked up.

He predicts this probably will be the last cruise season for large transatlantic vessels.

He thinks it is cheaper to lay them up during the slack season.

Before the war, minimum rates on the De Grasse for a 12-day voyage were $130. Today the same room costs $325 for a 13-day trip.

Lines' Reactions

THE spotty cruise business draws various reactions from the companies. The Holland-America Line reports excellent business. Elliott I. Liman, cruise manager, says the line's Nieuw Amsterdam is returning from a West Indies cruise with a capacity load of 806 passengers and the Veendam is returning with a full load of 402.

Although space is still available, the company expects capacity sailings throughout the season.

The Nieuw Amsterdam is scheduled to make four 13-day cruises to San Juan, La Guaira, Curacao, Kingston and Havana with minimum rates of $395. The Veendam will make one six-day and one seven-day voyage to Bermuda with minimum rates of $140 and $155. She will then make an 18-day cruise to Cap Haitien, La Guaira, Curacao, Kingston and Havana with a minimum charge of $450.

America to Sail

THIS country's largest liner, the America, will make one 16-day cruise to San Juan, Trinidad, La Guaira, Curacao, Havana and Cristobal. She expects a full passenger list. A minimum bathless room will cost $480. A suite for two will cost $3290.

Beginning February 14 the Caronia, capacity 932, will start a series of four 14-day cruises to La Guaira, Curacao, Colon, Kingston and Havana with a minimum of $425. The Mauretania, also a Cunard ship, with a capacity of 600, sailed for the West Indies recently with only 460 aboard. She plans a series of nine eight-day cruises to Nassau and Havana with a low of $195.

Queen Returning

ANOTHER Cunarder, the Britannic, leaves February 1 for a 48-day cruise to South American ports. Her lowest rate will be $1250 and the company expects a near capacity list.

The Queen of Bermuda, a popular British vessel that carried 375,000 Americans between Bermuda and New York before she was sent into the war as an armed auxiliary vessel, returns to her old run February 15. James Findley, passenger traffic manager of the Furness Lines, says the advance demand for passage has been heavy.

The Queen of Bermuda can carry 625 passengers and the round trip can be made for $125. She will be the only large vessel running between New York and the island, and her return is expected to revive Bermuda's economic status.

Irish Will Fly To Dublin for St. Patrick's

FOR the first time in history a party is being organized for Irish-Americans to fly to Dublin to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Knights of Columbus and the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick will form a large part of the group, which is open to all Irish-Americans.

The idea is to celebrate the feast day of the patron saint of Ireland in the old country and to celebrate and give thanks for complete Irish independence.

The party will be led by the Rev. Timothy MacCarthy, chaplain to the Ancient Order of Hibernians here. Father MacCarthy, pastor of St. Margaret's Rectory at Seat Pleasant, Md., is a native of Cork, Ireland.

Arrangements are being handled by the International Catholic Travel Service in Washington.

3 Golf Tourneys Make Up Cycle Of Championship

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 15. The early list of entrants in the east coast of Florida women's golf championship includes the name of Miss Roslyn Swift of the Glen Oaks Country Club, Great Neck, Long Island, the 1947 junior metropolitan cnampion.

The three tournaments which make up the cycle of title competitions are championship of Palm Beach, February 8 to 12, at Palm Beach; the South Atlantic championship, March 1 to 5, at Ormond Beach, and the Florida east coast championship, March 7 to 11, at St. Augustine.

Miss Swift is a freshman at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., and a member of the golf team there.

In her Florida tournament debut this season Miss Swift was runner-up in the Dubsdread Golfer's Association championship at Orlando.

Hotel Man Finds Prospects Bright

New York (AP).—Hotels generally will remain crowded during 1949, according to Gen. J. Leslie Kincaid, president of the American Hotels Corp.

Kincaid said that despite a perceptible hotel business slump on the West Coast and a diminishing number of weekend guests, the hotel industry will continue to enjoy peak prosperity next year.

Advance reservations for 1949 are well ahead of 1948 totals, he said.

The Chef a Mighty Man Is He on Cruise Ships

EVERY so often the passengers aboard a ship cruising to South America gather in groups on the sun deck by the swimming pool to discuss the latest rumor about the chef's fishing prowess.

On the deck of the ship, a long buffet table is spread with an array of luncheon foods. The place of honor in the center of the table is, likely as not, occupied by an enormous red snapper or a salmon elaborately garnished from tail to fin.

Propped up beside the platter is a small card reading, "This fish was caught off the stern this morning by our chef after half an hour's struggle. It is the largest of its kind ever caught in the South Atlantic."

The fact that the snapper is not indigenous to the waters in which these ships sail, after the Caribbean has been passed, matters not at all. The more gullible passengers are even willing to accept the presence of a forlorn salmon seeking its way to the Columbia River the long way round.

The story is quickly rampant and as it spreads it grows the more exciting. Passengers who have sat in on the joke on previous trips add their solemn avowal; they saw the catch, they helped. Gradually the story assumes an aspect of the utterly impossible. This passenger claims to have held the chef by the ankles during his epic struggle and this passenger claims to have held the first lest they both go over the side.

So it grows until even the most gullible traveler realizes he is being ribbed. But it is all in good sport and the initiate realizes he can sit in on the return trip and himself add his bit of embroidery to the story when others come upon South Atlantic salmon or red snapper for the first time.

Easy Reach by Plane

THE playlands of Hawaii, Southern California and Las Vegas, the ski country of the Rockies, the Pacific Northwest and New England, and all the old countries of Europe have become vacation areas through air travel for millions who never before have had time to go far away.

For example, the Hawaiian Islands are only 24 hours from the Atlantic Seaboard by United Air Lines, 20 hours or less from the Middle West and 9½ hours from San Francisco.

California is only an overnight flight by United from the East Coast.

The ski country is just as easy to reach. United serves points easily accessible to Aspen, Sun Valley, Alta, Paradise Valley and Timberline Lodge, as well as many excellent spots in the High Sierras and New England.

Pensive Ballerina

When photographer Andre de Dienes made this Degas-like study of ballerina Yvonne Chouteau, she was reflecting on the year just past. The most successful one she has ever had, it brought the 19-year-old dancer featured roles with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, plus an exciting cross-country tour. Born in Fort Worth, Tex., Yvonne grew up in Oklahoma. She's five-feet-five, weighs 105, has grey-blue eyes. When not on her toes, she's likely to be swimming or riding.

It's a pleasure, lady to be able to supply you with your favorite quality brands

He's a happy man again—the retailer who supplies you with candy and chewing gum. After years of shortages, he is now able to provide most of your favorite brands.

You prefer "familiar" brands of confections because they've won your confidence. Your retailer prefers them, too, because they represent top quality—and they sell fast, so they're always fresh.

To make your shopping easy, your retailer displays popular brands of candy and gum in a prominent place—where you can see them easily—and serve yourself.

Yes—your retailer is just as happy as you are that once again your friends, the popular brands, are on the counters.

America is lucky. You can eat all the candy—chew all the gum—you want!

The Turning Point

Lewis Allen Weiss

He put his faith and his future in an alarm clock

ON THE END of his watch chain where many men attach a rabbit's foot, Lewis Allen Weiss wears the replica of an alarm clock. For Weiss, chairman of the board of Mutual Broadcasting System and president of its Don Lee affiliate on the West Coast, feels he owes his early success to this generally unpopular article.

Weiss was in charge of the late Will Rogers's Sunday night broadcast some 15 years ago. It was the young director's first big radio break. For five weeks, however, the program had run over its allotted time. Network executives pleaded, coaxed and threatened, but Will just couldn't finish on time.

In desperation it was agreed that the next time Will went over the deadline he would talk into a dead mike. It happened the very next week. Will was irate when he learned that the punch line of his last joke had failed to come over the air. "That's the end," he roared. "You'll never get me on the radio again."

To the network and the sponsor it was a matter of grave concern. To Weiss it was a tragedy. If the actor failed to relent, Weiss knew his job was forfeit. After hours of pleading, Rogers agreed to renew his broadcasts. But, he made it plain, one more premature silencing and that would be his last program.

Came Sunday night. In a corner of the studio sat a nervous, squirming Weiss. Will blithely ad libbed his way when, thirty seconds before the program's end, there came the jarring b-r-r-i-n-g of an alarm clock. A startled Will paused—his face set. Then the wrinkled features broke into the wide, familiar grin. "All right, Lew," he chuckled. "You win." Never again did he go over his scheduled time.

Hollywood: Its Future

Wracked by storms, the film industry faces new adjustments

By ERNEST LA FRANCE and SID ROSS

Photographs by Ben Ross

WITH THIS ARTICLE on the outlook for Hollywood, PARADE completes its series on the film industry. It welcomes the views of readers upon points made in this and earlier articles.—Kay Sullivan, Movie Editor, PARADE.

A YEAR AGO, there was a cloud in the Hollywood sky no larger than a man's hand. By July 4th, when PARADE reported mild rebellion in a cross-section of moviegoers in Houston, Tex., the cloud was growing. In the succeeding months, it grew into a thunderhead. The barometer of U. S. box-office receipts dropped from 10 to 20 percent. The index of returns from foreign markets dropped almost to the bottom, fluttered slowly upward. The forked lightning of possible Federal anti-trust action licked menacingly around the big producer-distributor-theater combines. Television, once only a zephyr, began to blow over the celluloid city like a mid-season monsoon.

Battening down for the storm, the big studios, led by Universal-International, started throwing away everything expendable or not nailed down. By the end of summer, Universal was shut tight. In the late autumn, independent producers were flattening like houses of cards, and even major studios were operating on an emergency basis. In November, Eagle-Lion closed with a bang. Warner Brothers fired a thousand workers and dimmed the lights. By December, so many moviemakers were out of work that the A.F. of L. Film Council sent letters to 5,000 A.F. of L. locals asking members to go to the movies ("Every dime paid into the box-office helps employ a brother member.") By Christmas, RKO throttled down to part-time production. At year's end, 40 percent of the moviemakers were unemployed. Stars, producers, directors and writers not protected by iron-clad contracts sold or rented their houses and left the storm area by plane, train and boat.

Just now poking its head from the cyclone cellar, Hollywood is looking around to see what to do next. One by one, the studios are getting back in full production, but the aftermath of the storm is impressive. RKO had gone from a net profit of $6,900,000 for the first nine months of 1947 to a net loss of $356,000 for the same period in 1948. Universal counted up a loss of $1,700,000. The total net profit from moviemaking dropped a full $25,000,000.

Among other things, Hollywood seems to have lost, perhaps permanently, its full pre-war foreign markets, accountable for as high as 40 percent of its income. Led by England, which formerly paid 30 percent of the gross take, other countries slapped quotas limiting showings of American movies to protect their own producers or distributors and to help block the drain of dollars across their borders. Goldwyn had to take the bargain basement price of a flat $25,000 from Sweden for the rights to "A Song is Born." The spectacular "Joan of Arc" was offered only $35,000 instead of the $250,000 asked.

Threats to make the big combines sell either their production studios or their interests in theater chains cut the RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Paramount empires in half, and have battered the remainder of the "Big Five"—Warners and M-G-M (Loew's). Television, slowly spreading its coaxial cables across the continent, threatened to invade even the lush, entertainment-hungry West.

There were, and still are, many people even in Hollywood who claimed convincingly that Hollywood's days are numbered. Cooler heads, watching the storm in better perspective, are not so sure, for even with 35 percent less total net profit, the studios still made more money (approximately $70,000,000) than in any but the boom years of 1946-47. But there is little doubt that the storm has wrought changes.

"The Snake Pit" is one of Hollywood's answers to critics who charge that American films shy from realism. Starring Olivia De Havilland, it depicts plight of the mentally ill.

Cavalry charge in "Outpost in Morocco" was filmed in North Africa. Unable to recover profits from abroad, some U. S. companies are using blocked funds to shoot films overseas.

Local movie censors like Lloyd Binford of Memphis, Tenn., exert powerful influence on Hollywood's movie makers.

Public escapades by stars (like Errol Flynn, charged recently with kicking a cop) worry moviedom's big-wigs.

Jerry Fairbanks (left) has produced first Hollywood series ("Public Prosecutor") filmed exclusively for TV.

Retrenchment, crackdowns, and unemployment

LIKE ANY TOWN that has been storm-battered, Hollywood, which has survived several storms in the past, is busily picking up the pieces and trying to rebuild along less vulnerable lines.

The shape-of-things-to-come has already been foreshadowed by Eric Johnston, President of the Motion Picture Association of America and spokesman for the major companies: "Retrenchment, competition, and revolutionary changes in the production set-up." Better and more original stories, specifically tailored for the films must, Johnston frankly admits, be brought to the national screen.

Virtually all the major studios that suspended production in 1948 are expected to be back in production by the end of this month. A tentative plan made several weeks ago calls for 331 features to be completed or started by the 11 largest companies in 1949. Movie houses, rapidly using up a backlog of none-too-good pictures that run for only a few days instead of solid weeks, are clamoring for new ones.

"Retrenchment" and "revolutionary changes in production" are, in Hollywood's present mood, practically synonymous. M-G-M has hired former New York City License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding as an efficiency expert to find new ways to slash overhead costs. Hollywood moguls have often been known to shed false tears, but there is little doubt that they are right when they say picture-making costs have gone up 100 percent since 1939.

In general, movies will be much simpler in the future than they have been in the past. Such tricks as "painting with light" on bare stages will replace many a costly set. Pictures will be shorter. Producers saved some $20,000,000 in 1948 by planning their features to run from 85 to 94 minutes instead of the pre-war standard of 101. Pictures will be less lavish. Paramount has reportedly set a limit of $1,500,000 on its super-colossals. Even Cecil B. DeMille, The Master of The Extravaganzas, has, according to the story, been given a maximum budget for "Samson and Delilah," beyond which he will have to pay out of his own pocket.

Producers Emphasize Low-Budget Films

SOME OF THE smaller moviemakers are limiting themselves to "B" pictures (costing around a half-million) and "C" pictures (costing a few hundred thousand). Successful low-budget pictures like RKO's "Crossfire" and the Edward Small-Eagle Lion "T-Men" set precedents. Universal is planning three-reel westerns for the first time since 1917—a series of eight "oat operas" starring Tex Williams, modernized with music.

As a last resort to hike profits, virtually all the old companies are dusting off pictures filmed in the dear, dead days when the sky was the limit. RKO expects to squeeze $500,000 more out of the ancient "Last Days of Pompeii" and "She." In spite of pained squawks from Hollywood unions, top Los Angeles theaters are running epics made as long ago as the '20s and early '30s.

To get people back in the theaters, a move is on foot to form a huge all-industry pool of $2,000,000 per year for publicity hopefully designed to reverse popular opinions of Hollywood's lightheadedness. To what extent reform will follow the pious declaration is hard to say, but at present, Hollywood is frightened. There will almost certainly be a crackdown on too-colorful characters. Robert Mitchum's box-office appeal zoomed after his trouble with the cops, but it is not the kind of popularity Hollywood thinks is ideal. Robert Walker, at least temporarily retired, may have battled his way into oblivion. Rex Harrison has been shuffled off to Broadway, with, according to published reports, mutually hostile feelings.

Down to the sewers in celluloid: Hollywood's new "documentary" approach to movie making took an Eagle-Lion cast and crew into dank caverns of Los Angeles' underground storm drain system to film the climactic chase sequence in "29 Clues." Electricians produced six million candle power of artificial illumination to dispel gloom for cameras.

are result of setbacks

Hollywood seems at last ready to mix more serious stuff with its standard fluff. Selznick publicity head Paul MacNamara, alarmed at figures showing that people lose the movie habit after 30, compares Hollywood to the makers of soda pop who depended almost entirely on youngsters until some genius thought of packaging bottles in handy containers for the adult home trade. "The result is," he points out, "they have no age problem. Why should the movies?"

Adult Films Can Pay Well

SUCCESSFUL adult pictures like "Johnny Belinda" and "The Snake Pit" are already proving that there is profit in braininess. Burgess Meredith, Howard Da Silva and Lewis Milestone are reportedly designing "intelligent quickies" specifically for the adult trade. If they succeed, big companies will undoubtedly follow. Ellis Arnall, former Governor of Georgia, has been hired to advise the independent producers. He recommends more intelligence. It may mean a battle with the censors, but Hollywood is starting to realize that its own timidity has almost censored its movies out of business.

There will be fewer stories filmed from current novels and biographies. Virtually every studio entered the storm with huge backlogs thoughtlessly bought in the boom years. M-G-M which has had an F. Scott Fitzgerald story in the vaults for 25 years, is reputed to have a total of 243 novels and short stories and 135 plays still unfilmed.

Growing sensitive to the charge that it spoils what novels and plays it gets, Hollywood intends to avoid criticism by concentrating on specially written scripts expressly tailored for its limitations.

With the dissolution of RKO's theater chain under pressure of Federal anti-trust action, the days of the tight film empires are numbered. Hollywood is overcoming some of the loss of foreign markets by invading them with production units instead of finished films. Universal-International has teamed with an Italian company to make a Deanna Durbin picture in Rome for a low $200,000. Darryl Zanuck says 20th Century-Fox will make about a dozen pictures in Europe, using only American stars and top technicians, with $2.50 per day Italian film workers instead of $2.50 an hour Hollywood counterparts. The Hollywood unions are alarmed, and with good reason. It may cause even more unemployment in Hollywood, but it will probably save the companies. After a storm, the companies are taking no more chances.

Harassed by cost of living, moviegoers tend to rebel at high box office prices, want more value for their money.

New York theater audience which saw televised boxing match (see below) posed basic problem for the film industry: how to cope with this new invader in the entertainment market.

Movies and television eye each other with misgivings

HOLLYWOOD must do much more than streamline itself to live under the old status quo. The old times passed away one night last April when the audience in the Paramount Theater on New York's Times Square suddenly found itself looking at a full-size movie screen televising a fight going at that moment across the river in Brooklyn.

Moviemakers, starting to realize that they must either go along with television or lose their leadership in popular visual entertainment, are reconciling themselves to the new baby.

20th Century-Fox, with applications for video permits in five cities, has been making a deal to buy the entire American Broadcasting System, including its video permits, the necessary $15 to $22 million possibly to derive from the sale of its theater investments. It already has a newsreel program outlet. Paramount owns two video stations, in Hollywood and in Chicago.

Over 50 companies have been formed to make movies specifically for television. The Hal Roach Studios, Vallee Video, Jerry Fairbanks Productions, and Marshall-Grant-Realm Productions are already off to a start. The latter has contracted for 26 half-hour shorts for Lucky Strike at $8,500 each, the first truly commercial video films ever to be made in the movie capital.

An entire new television film art is growing up, though major producers are not yet ready to commit their stars to a rival of the movies. In some cases, television is helping movies. Jerry Fairbanks is working on "teaser" movies to show parts of scenes from pictures to stimulate moviegoers. He estimates it will make 50,000,000 more movie fans.

Telemovies May Pay for Selves

When Zenith Radio's "Phonovision" system is completed, movie patrons can see selected subjects at a turn of a telephone dial, with the charges applied to their regular bill. It may be all that is necessary to hurdle the last obstacle between Hollywood and television—finding a way to make expensively produced telemovies pay for themselves.

According to a survey conducted by the authoritative HOLLYWOOD REPORTER, movies have influenced every phase of American life—from French-type telephones popularized by Jean Harlow to glamorized bathrooms made popular by Warner Bros. Americans wore slave bracelets in imitation of Rudolph Valentino, slacks after Marlene Dietrich, bow ties after Frank Sinatra, sweaters after Lana Turner. TV-movies will make us more movie-conscious than ever.

Hollywood's leaders look for the

DARRYL F. ZANUCK, vice president in charge of production, 20th Century-Fox: "Exorbitant costs have created the need for efficiency and economy in the motion picture industry. When that necessary adjustment is made, the industry will again be in a salutary condition."

GEORGE SEATON, president, Screen Writers Guild: "My own feeling is that everyone is basing this industry on the abnormal war 'norm' of 1944. According to that year we're in a big slump. Compared to '38 and '39, we're not far off. The answer is to make better films."

HENRY GINSBERG, vice president in charge of production and studio operations, Paramount: "All business—particularly during the war years—found itself spending more and more. There's a readjustment going on. As soon as it's over, you'll find workers coming back."

RONALD REAGAN, president, Screen Actors Guild: "I think the box office is slumping because people don't have a dollar for a pound of butter and another dollar for movies. The industry was geared to the foreign market. I don't think we've approached real efficiency."

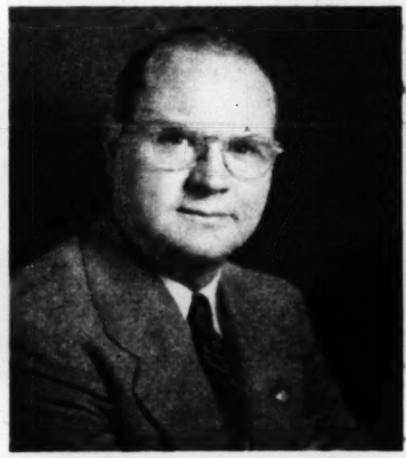
WALT DISNEY, president, Disney Films: "Hollywood was just going great guns during the war, way above normal. Now there's a leveling off. Many studios have a large inventory of completed films, so there's a slow-down. Producers are taking stock. They will make better films."

EDD X. RUSSELL, past president, Screen Extras Guild: "The first cause of the present troubles is the excessive production costs which are without entertainment dollar value. They should cut costs right at the top. They're making pictures like a cluster of diamonds set in tin."

sun after the economic storm

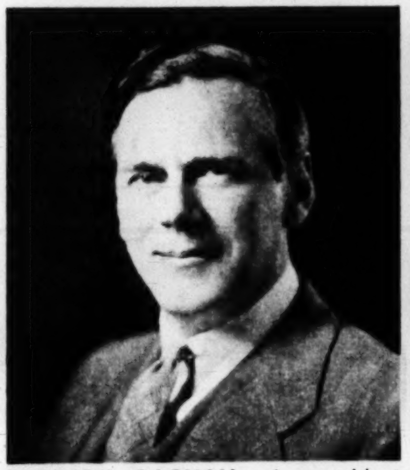
WILLIAM GOETZ, production chief, Universal-International: "The cause of some unemployment at the present time is only temporary while the industry readjusts to changing foreign markets. I think that we can make profitable pictures for the U.S. market alone. But it will take time."

ARTHUR B. KRIM, president, Eagle-Lion: "An unbalance between cost and revenue resulted during the war years. Basically, the business is sound and healthy. Waste must be eliminated. Naturally, the economies must show in all phases of the business—from stars down."

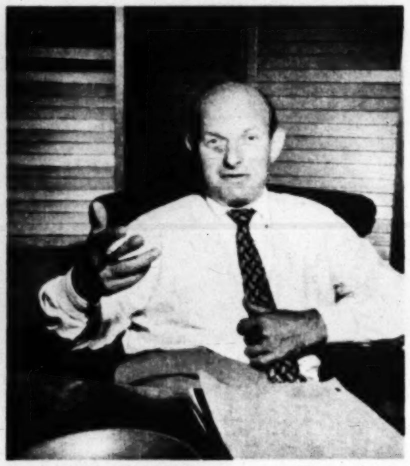


ROY M. BREWER, president, Hollywood A.F. of L. Council: "There is no question but that the American motion picture producers can produce American-made films for the domestic market and do it profitably. It is going to require a curtailment in expenditures that were never needed."

JEAN HERSHOLT, president, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences: "The welfare of the film business is closely tied in with the general economic structure of our country. When living costs are unnaturally high, there are fewer dollars left for movies. There is no easy solution."



GEORGE L. BAGNALL, vice president in charge of production, United Artists: "In my opinion there are three reasons for box office decline: mediocrity of pictures, decline of the amusement dollar, competition of other amusements. We should give movie-goers better films."



CHARLES EINFELD, former President, Enterprise Productions: "The basic cause of the drop-off is the high cost of living. Even with economizing, films cost more to make. For solutions, we must make better pictures, reduce the cost of living and protect our foreign markets." THE END.

STOP—
loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths! —it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

On a journey to visit relatives, this 12-year-old boy missed his train. He appeals—successfully—to Jean Duffin at the Travelers Aid booth in the station.

She's Every Traveler's Friend

Jean Duffin smooths the paths of distraught wayfarers at Salt Lake City

LIKE 599 other Travelers Aid employees stationed at lighted lamps in 122 major railroad and bus stations and airports throughout the country, Jean Duffin, 25, of Salt Lake City, Utah, specializes in solving the difficulties of harassed travelers. Demanding as her work is, it nevertheless has its compensations, particularly if it involves a long-range operation like that of a Dutch family which recently sailed to make its home in America.

In Holland, the young mother and her two small sons said good-bye to old friends and neighbors. They couldn't help wondering, they said later, about the new life just ahead. "What will it be like?" they speculated. "Will anyone meet us in America?"

Their apprehension was needless. For Jean Duffin had set into motion the Travelers Aid "chain of service" which made their arrival in New York, and their trip by rail pleasant and convenient.

The moment the immigrants arrived, they were welcomed by Travelers Aid representatives. All their train connections were arranged, and when they reached Salt Lake, Miss Duffin personally arranged for them to be met by the relatives with whom they were to make their home.

The Dutch family represents one example of Travelers Aid work. All told, the 600 "lamp lighters," with the assistance of volunteers and administrative people, annually help on their way over three million homeless, handicapped, penniless, discouraged and distressed individuals.

Too Many "Good-Byes"

Typical of the 600 is Miss Duffin, a native of Salt Lake City, a graduate of the University of Utah and a former social worker. "Travelers Aid work is always interesting and sometimes exciting," she says. "The only sad part of my job is saying 'good-bye' too often."

In the main, her task is getting people where they are going. Frequently that calls for duties not unlike those of family counselor, teacher and tourist guide. It also calls for working nights and Sundays on problems which are almost always different.

A conductor once asked her to help him with a woman who refused to produce her ticket and who acted strangely. Jean won the woman's confidence. In her handbag she found the ticket, her home address—and a .38 caliber revolver. The woman's husband later explained that her unstable mental condition was the result of their soldier son's death. The story had another sequel: an old stocking, which the woman had stuffed with $2,000 and thrown away, was returned by a Union Pacific employee.

"Last year," Jean also recalls, "a Swedish student traveling to Omaha claimed he was without food or money. I supplied both and he promised to repay us. Months passed and we marked the sum off our books. But a few weeks ago, a letter came from Sweden. It contained a check for the full amount drawn on a Swedish bank."

Within the past six months, the Salt Lake City unit gave service or relief to 6,774 cases, including juveniles traveling alone, aged, mentally ill, runaways, handicapped, immigrants and persons in financial distress. Statistically, these may appear to be just so many cases. But in terms of human values they represent that many hundreds of times when human frustration was dispelled by Travelers Aid.

Mrs. Truman's recipe for:

Ozark Pudding

EVERYONE is always interested in the food that famous people prefer. And now, with all eyes on Washington, homemakers are wondering what kind of food President Truman and Vice-President Barkley like best.

Menus are a matter of personal concern to Mrs. Truman, wherever the family lives. After an early family breakfast, served at eight o'clock, she checks the remaining menus for the day with the housekeeper at the White House, or for the time being, at Blair House across the street.

Although Mrs. Truman has several treasured recipes of Missouri flavor, such as the Ozark Pudding shown here, the menus she serves do not have a definite regional slant. The Trumans like the kind of food that most Americans agree on—chicken, roast beef, green vegetables, potatoes, salads and ice cream. And according to reports they are neither finicky nor heavy eaters.

Ozark Pudding

1 egg	1/8 tsp. salt
3/4 cup sugar	1/2 cup chopped nutmeats
2 tbs. flour	1/2 cup chopped apples
1 1/4 tsp. baking powder	1 tsp. vanilla

Beat eggs and sugar together until very smooth. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; stir into egg mixture. Add nutmeats, apples and vanilla. Bake in greased pie pan in moderate oven, 350° F., 35 min. Add whipped cream or ice cream. Four servings.

Luncheon at Blair House these days may include Mrs. Truman's own version of appetizing Ozark Pudding.

Mrs. Truitt's recipe for:

Kentucky Spoonbread

VICE-PRESIDENT BARKLEY, for his part, is true to real Southern cooking, Kentucky-style, which has had so many adherents, among them the late Irvin S. Cobb of Paducah, Ky. An enthusiastic trencherman, he likes fried chicken, spoonbread, hog jowl and turnip greens; dark, flavorful Kentucky ham, and plenty of ice cream made with real cream.

He has already announced that his Washington hostess will be his daughter, Mrs. Max O. Truitt, who is a resident of the nation's capital. She, too, is interested in food, and follows her distinguished father's tastes in preparing it for him and for her own household.

The cuisine at the new Vice-President's establishment will probably include the spoonbread described below. The recipe, which was provided by Mrs. Truitt, was taken from her late mother's cookbook, and is typical of the hearty type of cooking which Mr. Barkley and his fellow Kentuckians have loved for years.

Kentucky Spoonbread

1 1/2 cups milk	1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 cup cornmeal	1 1/2 tsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt	2 eggs, well-beaten

Scald milk; stir in cornmeal gradually; stir over low heat until thickened. Add salt, baking powder, sugar; mix well. Add to well-beaten eggs gradually. Pour into greased casserole; bake in moderate oven, 375° F., 25 to 30 min., or until firm. Four servings.

Vice-President Barkley is devoted to his daughter's Spoonbread, made according to her mother's recipe.

Washington's first inauguration was held in 1789 in the town of New York (pop. 20,000). Ceremonies were conducted in old Federal Hall at the corner of Wall and Broad Streets.

Inauguration Day

A great American tradition comes to life next Thursday

BY FRANK DE BLOIS

"I DO SOLEMNLY SWEAR that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, protect and defend the Constitution . . ."

With these words, on Thursday, Harry S. Truman, the thirty-second President of the U. S., will begin his first elected term.

The public's reception for the man who scored the biggest upset in our recent political history is expected to last all week. More than 750,000 people will be in Washington to watch him take his oath of office, hear him make his inaugural speech, and see his inaugural parade. In addition, millions of Americans will follow the proceedings at their homes—through their radios and television sets. It's the people's show and they are prepared to enjoy it.

Washington's Inaugural Was Simple

Any similarity between Thursday's inauguration and that which took place 160 years ago when George Washington became the first to take the Presidential oath is a similarity in name only, for the show put on for Washington was modest indeed.

On April 16, 1789, General Washington wrote in his diary: "At 10 o'clock I bid adieu to Mt. Vernon, to private life and to domestic felicity, and with a mind oppressive with more anxious and painful sensations than I have wish to express, set out for New York . . ."

Four days later Washington disembarked from a barge in the Narrows of New York Harbor and was escorted up Broadway, then lined with trees, to the old Federal Building at the corner of Broad and Wall streets. At noon—before a crowd that stood hatless in the rain—he took the oath.

The newspapers of that day were brief in their accounts of this ceremony but the people were impressed. For hours they cheered their President and later bonfires were lit and toasts were drunk.

Four years later the ceremony was moved to Philadelphia, then the seat of the government. There, on March 4, 1793, Congress assembled in Independence Hall and saw Washington take his oath a second time. Considerable pomp accompanied the festivities and all that night the sky over Philadelphia was bright with fireworks.

In sharp contrast to the spectacle of Washington's second inauguration and that of his successor, John Adams, was the simplicity attending the inaugural of Thomas Jefferson in 1801, the first ever held in the brand new city of Washington. Jefferson, a man of quiet tastes, remained until the last moment in his rooms in a boarding house, then walked through muddy, unpaved streets to the Capitol, took his oath, and walked home again. This performance so disturbed Adams, the out-going chief executive, that he stayed at home in a fit of pique.

Andrew Jackson's entry upon the Presidency in 1829 struck his contemporaries as something like the sack of Rome. On the day of the ceremony, tremendous crowds surged through the Capitol, clamouring for a look at Old Hickory. They jubilantly paraded to the White House, trampled the rugs, broke the new furniture and some left by leaping through the windows.

This rollicking exhibition was dwarfed later by that staged for William Henry Harrison, the famed Indian fighter hero of

Since 1789, presidential inaugurals have been our greatest public spectacles

Tippecanoe, who was sworn in as President before a crowd that surpassed—both in numbers and in eccentric behaviour—anything seen before on the banks of the Potomac. A rowdy public reception followed the inaugural ceremonies. Harrison himself attended three glittering balls, and all Washington shared the holiday spirit. This program unfortunately accomplished for old Tippecanoe what Indian arrows could not. He caught cold, and in less than a month he was dead.

For six weeks prior to Abraham Lincoln's inauguration in 1861 the newspapers had been filled with threats of secession, rumors of revolution, and stories of plots to attack and destroy Washington. Lincoln came quietly to the Capitol on February 22 and his inauguration was unmarked by hostility, but the city was guarded by federal troops and bayonets bristled along Pennsylvania Avenue. Before an uneasy, tired-looking audience, Lincoln spoke to a restive nation: "We are not enemies, but friends," he said. "We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection."

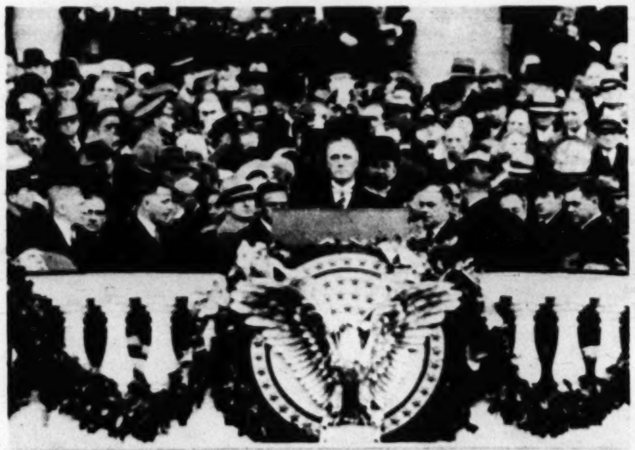
Of recent inaugurations, that of Warren Harding in 1921 provided the most drama. Vast crowds turned out to see the new President, ruddy-faced and handsome, ride to the White House with his predecessor, Woodrow Wilson, prematurely old and white. During their ride through the cheering crowds, Wilson laughed with Harding, but at the White House he met the glacial smile of his enemy, Henry Cabot Lodge, with an icy glare of contempt, then turned and walked away.

F. D. R. Drew Huge Crowds

The four inaugurations of Franklin D. Roosevelt are remembered for the huge crowds they drew and for the moving words of the President. On March 4, 1933, with the American economy on the verge of disaster, Roosevelt said that "This great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." And four years later—when the inauguration date was moved to January 20 by the 20th Amendment—the President called for a continuation and a broadening of his New Deal to meet the challenge of "one-third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished." At his third inaugural, Roosevelt rededicated himself and the American people "to protect and perpetuate the integrity of democracy" and in his fourth he spoke impressively for the brotherhood of man. "We have learned," he said, "that we cannot live alone, at peace; that our own well-being is dependent on that of other nations far away."

Within three months after he spoke these words, Franklin Roosevelt lay dead and Harry Truman, sworn in at the White House, had taken over the burdens of the Presidency.

Today in thousands of churches, Americans will pray for the man who on Thursday will be inaugurated President of the United States. In troubled 1949 he will need their prayers.



Inaugurated four times, Franklin D. Roosevelt always put on a good show. In 1933 more than 50,000 saw him start first term.

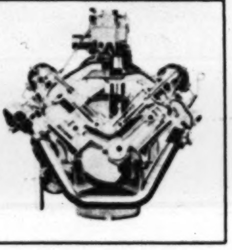
A 1949 Cadillac powered by the new engine of 7.5-to-1 compression ratio running on the testing track.

A High-Power '49 Engine

General Motors shows new Cadillac and Oldsmobile power-plants: V-8 engines which will range up to 12-to-1 compression ratio



USING the highly efficient over-head valve layout, the new Cadillac engine, shown here in a front cutaway view, runs on a 7.5-to-1 compression ratio. It develops 160 horsepower and at the same time offers an increase of 12 to 20 miles more to a 20-gallon tank.

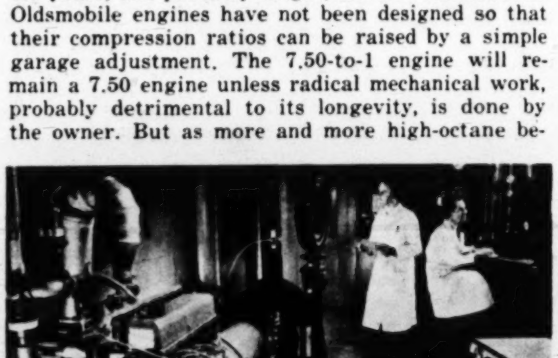
THE SMALLER the space a gasoline-and-air mixture can be squeezed into before it is ignited, the greater will be the power of the resulting explosion. And because the gasoline will be more efficiently used, there will be a corresponding economy in the amount of fuel required. This fact, one of the first things learned by automotive engineers, has always held the promise of small and powerful automobile engines, but there have been many barriers and hindrances in the way. The definite possibility that high-compression engines may at last be practicable for passenger-car use has been opened up by the new engines developed by General Motors and now appearing in the 1949 Cadillac and Oldsmobile automobiles.

Simply stated, the compression ratio of an engine is the ratio between the amount of volume in the cylinder at the bottom of the piston stroke and the amount of space at the top of the stroke, when the gasoline vapor is fired by the spark-plug. A common ratio is 6-to-1. If the ratio is made higher, say 8-to-1, the mixture of gasoline and air will obviously be squeezed into a much tighter space, and will consequently explode with much greater force.

It is mechanically simple enough to raise compression ratios, and one racing car in production today runs at 14-to-1, but the problems that result are severe. The engine will be hard to start, lubrication will be difficult, it will be so rough at low speeds that it will shake and jar the entire automobile—and most important, it will not run at all on ordinary 80-octane gasoline.

General Motors engineers, seeking a compromise among all the complex factors involved, finally came up with two V-8 engines of greatly increased power and marked gasoline economy. Set up now to run efficiently on gasoline of the present 78-80 octane rating at 7.25- and 7.50-to-1 compression ratios, they are so designed that succeeding models can, with little alteration in manufacturing process, be built at 8-to-1, 10-to-1 and finally 12-to-1 compression ratios as gasoline of higher octane value becomes available.

Because there is small likelihood that 100-octane gasoline will be available in quantity for at least ten years, and probably longer, the new Cadillac and Oldsmobile engines have not been designed so that their compression ratios can be raised by a simple garage adjustment. The 7.50-to-1 engine will remain a 7.50 engine unless radical mechanical work, probably detrimental to its longevity, is done by the owner. But as more and more high-octane becomes available, the ratio in successive models will be raised by the manufacturers. The resultant saving in gasoline would of course be tremendous if all U. S. cars were running at compression ratios around 12-to-1. Present gasoline consumption of around 120,000,000 gallons a day could be reduced almost by one-third.



A six-cylinder test engine running at a 12.5-to-1 ratio on high octane gas almost doubled normal fuel mileage.

Gasoline Consumption Reduced

The present 7.50-to-1 Cadillac engine will bring a 15 to 20 percent increase in mileage. This is of course in addition to very much greater acceleration and a higher top speed. The Oldsmobile engine will give 20 horsepower more than the straight-eight which preceded it, with proportionate economy, and in neither case is the increased power obtained by sacrifice of silence or vibration-free running even at the higher speeds.

The fact that the 7.50-to-1 ratio of the new Cadillac is as high as present fuel limitations will allow is demonstrated by a comparison with other engines on the world market. There are only four other stock powerplants with equally high compression: the new Crosley, the 7.8-to-1 ration of which is even higher than Cadillac and Oldsmobile, the Austin A-90 convertible, 7.25-to-1, the Alfa-Romeo and the Cisitalia, both high-performance Italian sports cars based on racing design. The very fast English Jaguar runs at 7.30-to-1. The three quantity-produced Russian automobiles, the Kim, the Gaz and the Zoz, run from 5.75- to 6.75-to-1.

Like all major car modifications, the Kettering engines have been long under work. Experimental parts were being made the day the Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor, and 1,000,000 test miles and over 750,000 hours of running have gone into them since.

Executive Charles Ward, former cowboy, attends St. Paul rodeo with daughter, Vida, age 6.

St. Paul's Charlie Ward

King of calendar-makers, he's won the affection of his employees

CHARLES ALLEN WARD is called "the best boss in the world" by the 5,331 men and women who work for him. Sharing bonuses of over $2,000,000 last year, and kept unusually happy at their jobs, they have come to believe that their boss has some of the attributes of an all-year-round Santa Claus.

Ward, 61, who is head of Brown and Bigelow of St. Paul, world's largest calendar manufacturers, reached the top the hard way, having started as a bench-worker at $25 a week. When he was elected president and general manager in 1933, the firm was in the red. Today, it is a $37,000,000-a-year business with huge plants in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn. Of some 800 different items which it manufactures, the calendar is undoubtedly the best known. In one version or another, it hangs on the walls of more than 50 million American homes and offices and is exported to 20 foreign countries in all parts of the world.

Ward has earned a special place in the nation's galaxy of successful business executives. "No man or woman just works for me," he says. "They are my friends and associates." And he proves it. Rarely is anyone fired. Employees who fail to make headway are shifted to places better suited for them. What's more, every year everyone in the firm gets a raise and a Christmas bonus which ranges anywhere from $25 to well over $1,000.

Ward's generosity is habitual and consistent. Never an assumed characteristic, it has consistently paid off both for him and for his firm.

IT'S SMACKIN' GOOD ... IT'S Kellogg's

Major domo of Brown and Bigelow, world's largest calendar manufacturers, Charles Ward confers with his staff about the 1950 and 1951 lines. Production takes from 15 to 18 months. Picture appeal is traditional, include children, dogs, girls and humorous situations.

Ward's life: adventure and work

CHARLES WARD'S personal adventures, business sagacity and generosity seem more like fiction than fact.

Born in Seattle, Wash., in 1887, Ward had experiences in his young years which were something like those of the popular literary heroes of the time. When he was six, Charlie was peddling newspapers to hard-bitten characters along Seattle's Alaskan Way. At 17 he ran away from home, turned cowboy for a spell and then went to sea. He crossed the Pacific twice, ultimately landing in Alaska, where he tended bar, drove dog teams and dug for gold along the Yukon.

Restlessness drove him south. With a friend, he drifted to Mexico, met Pancho Villa and joined that latter-day conquistadore's soldiers of fortune. Life was cheap and dangers constant, and this interlude came to a sudden and unhappy climax when his friend was killed by the bullet of an enemy insurrectionist. Returning to the States, Ward ran afoul of the authorities and was in custody for a time.

Again free, he took his first regular job, with Brown and Bigelow, performing the most menial tasks. "I made up my mind I was going to stick to it and make good," he said later. Moving up to foreman, then department manager, superintendent, assistant general manager, vice president and finally to the presidency and general managership, he made good for Charles Ward. At the same time he lent his considerable energies to making business good for the company and its employees.

One of his first acts as president was to poll his workers regarding a union. Learning that they favored having one, he hired the best lawyer available to draw up a fair contract. Not a single strike or hint of work stoppage has marred the company's record since.

Revitalized Calendar-Making

He broadened the concept of calendar advertising, hired famous artists to draw and paint pictures for them, increased the sales staff and scouted new methods to push up sales. Besides personal gifts of automobiles, watches and mink coats, most salesmen earn $10,000 or more.

In his wanderings, Ward learned to have sympathy for down-and-outers, and for those with smudged reputations. Some 300 ex-convicts have worked for him at different times, and have become substantial citizens on their own. About 50 of them, once tabbed habitual criminals, now hold positions throughout the firm.

Ward doesn't talk much about his good works. They're second nature with him. But his "friends and associates" don't hesitate to pay tribute. "We know and respect him as a sympathetic, kind, understanding and generous man," a spokesman says. "When you have over 5,000 people in an organization feeling that way about the boss, you begin to understand the phenomenal growth of the firm since he took over its management."

Besides his devotion to the business and his employees, Charles Ward is a happy family man, spending his spare time with his wife and their four children at their home in St. Paul and at their large farm near Hudson, Wisc. Ward also owns four ranches in Arizona and leases about 80,000 acres of range land for his 3,000 head of beef cattle.

Ward spends thousands of dollars a year on charities. His favorite is the Little Sisters of the Poor who once helped him as a young man.

But since charity begins at home, Ward watches his "friends and associates" for any signs of tiredness, low morale or even sickness. If he finds traces, his prescription is fairly standard: a vacation with pay, during which an employee can regain his lost enthusiasm at the expense of the boss and of Brown and Bigelow.

Famous artists illustrate Brown and Bigelow calendars. "Dionne Quints" is by Andrew Loomis.

Appearing on millions of walls, this view of ducks in flight is by painter Richard E. Bishop. THE END.

Some of the 100 owners whose entries competed in the recent Sherman Oaks children's dog show, pose with pets before judging starts.

Kids' Dog Show

It takes steady nerves to participate in one

THE RECENT Sherman Oaks, Calif., dog show, like so many others throughout the country, started out quietly enough. Owners were limited to children. Entries were limited to dogs of any breed. There were ten classes, each with a prize.

As the Sherman Oaks committee learned, nothing is more difficult to manage than 100 youngsters, plus 100 dogs. First untoward event occurred when a four-year-old exhibiter began to cry. His brother, aged 9, promptly dealt with him in two short words: "Shut up."

A fight began when a friendly looking cocker bit an Afghan. The hound's owner grabbed the cocker, which promptly bit him. Other entries benched nearby joined the melee. There were growls, barks and the weeping of children.

The judges, mothers, and bystanders pried apart the contestants and restored order. Judging went forward and prizes were awarded. So ended Sherman Oaks' first dog show, like all such affairs bewildering, distraught, but also fun.

An 80-pound Great Dane, "Baron," won in "Tallest Dog" and "Dog With Longest Tail" classes, to joy of owner Mickey Mullins.

"Jeff," a collie owned and shown by Judy Reidel, was chosen "Most Popular Dog." Her award: a bronze statuette. Jeff got no bones, only a tag.

The blue for "Smallest Dog" went to Vonnie Matthews' Chihuahua, "Beers," which bested six others.

It was close between a dachshund and Scottie for title of "Dog Built Nearest Ground," but Scottie won.

To winner Mullins go five "Bucket Sodas" donated by confectioner with realistic view of a boy's appetite.

ALI, THE SHIP'S COOK, TELLS BEN AND BRAINBOX WHAT HE KNOWS ABOUT THE MYSTERIOUS PRINCE HASSAN'S ENGLISH TUTOR--CYRIL MEEKS---
Copyright, 1949, New York Herald Tribune Inc.
YOU MEAN TO SAY CYRIL MEEKS HASN'T BEEN SEEN ALIVE SINCE YOU GUIDED HIM TO PRINCE HASSAN'S PROVINCE?
EXACTLY, SAHIB-- AND NO ONE CAN ENTER PRINCE HASSAN'S DOMAIN TO LEARN THE TRUTH--FOR THE WAY IS DIFFICULT!
SUPPOSE WE WANTED TO VISIT PRINCE HASSAN? COULD WE MAKE IT ON OUR OWN?
I FEAR NOT SAHIB-- THERE ARE DANGEROUS JUNGLES AND ALSO THE TREACHEROUS QUICKSANDS OF JABWHA-- AND FEW GUIDES IN CALCUTTA KNOW THE ROUTE--
HOW WOULD YOU LIKE THE JOB OF PILOTING US TO THE PRINCE, ALI?
ALAS, NO--I AM VERY HAPPY HERE AS SHIP'S COOK, SAHIB--IT IS A SAFER JOB FOR A MAN OF MY AGE-- THE JUNGLE IS CRUEL--
MAKE HIM AN OFFER, BEN-- CHEEVER MAY NEED A GUIDE WHEN WE GET THERE--
I CAN PAY YOU A GOOD PRICE FOR YOUR SERVICES, ALI-- PERHAPS ENOUGH TO MAKE IT WORTH YOUR WHILE-- A GOOD PRICE? MAY I MAKE BOLD ENOUGH TO ASK THE SAHIB JUST HOW MUCH?
HOW ABOUT FIVE THOUSAND?
ALLAH BE PRAISED! BUT THAT IS MUCH MONEY! IF YOU WILL ALLOW ME TIME TO THINK IT OVER?
LET US KNOW BY TONIGHT, ALI--WE DOCK TOMORROW--
STUPID AMERICAN IDIOTS! NOW FOR A VISIT WITH MY FAT FRIEND--
ALI! I WARNED YOU TO STAY AWAY FROM MY CABIN, YOU FOOL!
QUITE SO, SAHIB--BUT MY VISIT IS URGENT-- I'VE JUST HAD AN OFFER FROM TWO AMERICANS-- A BETTER OFFER THAN YOURS, I MIGHT ADD!
TWO AMERICANS? THAT SOUNDS LIKE BEN FRIDAY AND BRAINBOX!
EXACTLY, MADAME-- AND THEY WILL PAY FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS TO REACH PRINCE HASSAN'S BORDER!
PERFECT, ALI! YOU WILL ACCEPT THEIR OFFER, DO YOU UNDERSTAND? I'LL PAY YOU TWICE THAT SUM FOR GUIDING THEM-- A THOUSAND PARDONS, SAHIB-- BUT ALI DOES NOT QUITE SEE--
1-16
MY PLAN IS QUITE SIMPLE--YOU WILL GUIDE THEIR PARTY ALMOST TO THE BORDER-- BUT NOT QUITE--FOR WHEN YOU REACH THE PLAINS, YOU WILL DIRECT THEM THE WRONG WAY--YOU WILL LEAD THEM TO THEIR DOOM--STRAIGHT INTO THE QUICKSANDS OF JABWHA!
